And who knoweth whyther thou art come to the kyngdom, for this cauſes ſake? Eſther bad them gyue Mardocheus this anſwere: Go thou thy waye, and gyther togyther all the Iues that are founde at Suſan, and faſt ye for me, that ye eate not and drynke not in thre dayes, neyther day nor nyght. I and my damſels wyll faſt lykewyſe, and ſo wyll I go in to the kynge, which thynge yet, is contrarye to the cōmaundement: and yf I peryſſhe/ I peryſſhe. So Mardocheus went his way/ and dyd all that Eſther had cōmaūded hym.

¶ Eſther entreth in to the kynge, and byddeth hym and Haman to the feaſt. Haman prepareth a galous for Mardocheus.

CAPI. V.

A AND on the thyrde daye it fortuned, that Eſther put on her royall apparell, and ſtode in the courte of the kynges palace within, ouer agaynſt the kynges houſe. And the kynge ſat vpon his royal ſeat in the kyngs palace ouer agaynſt the gate of the houſe. And when the kynge ſawe Eſther the quene ſtandynge in the courte, ſhe founde grace in his ſyght. And the kyng helde out the golden ſcepter that was in his hand toward Eſther. So Eſther ſtepte forth, and touched the top of the ſcepter.

B Then ſayde the kynge vnto her: What wylte thou quene Eſther? and what requireſt thou? aſke euen the halfe of the empyre, and it ſhall be gyuen the. And Eſther anſwered, Yf it pleaſe the kynge, let the kynge and Haman come this daye vnto the banket, that I haue prepared for hym. And the kyng ſayd: cauſe Haman to make haſt, that he maye do as Eſther hath ſayd. So the kynge ⁊ Hamā came to the banket that Eſther had prepared, and the kynge ſayde vnto Eſther at the banket of wyne: what is thy peticyon? that it may be gyuen the. And what requireſt thou? Yf it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it ſhall be done.

C Then anſwered Eſther, and ſayde: my peticyon and deſyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the ſyght of the kynge, and yf it pleaſe the kynge, to gyue me my peticyon, and to fulfyl my requeſt, then let the kynge and Haman come to the banket that I ſhall prepare for them, ⁊ ſo wyll I do to morowe, as the kyng hath ſayde. Then went Haman forth the ſame daye ioyfull and merye in his mynde.

And when the ſame Haman ſawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he ſtode not vp and kneled before hym, he was full of indygnacyon at Mardocheus. Neuertheleſſe/ Haman refrayned hym ſelfe: and when he came home, he ſent, ⁊ called for his frendes/ and Zares his wyfe: and Haman tolde them of the glory of his ryches, and the multytude of his Chyldren, and all togyther howe the kynge had promoted hym ſo greatly, ⁊ howe that he had ſet hym aboue the Prynces and ſeruauntes of the kynge.

D Haman ſayde moreouer: Yea and Eſther the quene dyd let no man come in with the kynge vnto the banket, that ſhe had prepared, excepte me/ and to morowe am I byden vnto her alſo with the kynge. But in all this am I not ſatyſfyed, as longe as I ſe Mardocheus the Iue ſyttyng at the kynges gate. Then ſayde Zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto hym: Let them make a galous of fyftye cubytes hygh, and to morowe ſpeake thou vnto the kyng, that Mardocheus may be hanged theron, ⁊ go thou in merely with the kyng vnto the banket. And Haman was well content withall/ and cauſed the galous to be made.

¶ The kynge turneth ouer the Cronicles, and fyndeth the fidelite of Mardocheus: and then to the confuſion of Haman, cōmaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

CAPI. VI.

A THE ſame nyght coulde not the kynge ſlepe, and he cōmaunded to brynge the cronicles and ſtoryes: which when they were red before the kynge, they happened on the place where it was wrytten, howe * Mardocheus had tolde that Bigthana, ⁊ Theres the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept the threſſholdes) ſought, to laye handes on kynge Ahaſuerus. And the kyng ſayd: what worſhyppe and good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then ſayde the kynges ſeruauntes that mynyſtred vnto hym: There is nothyng at all done for him. And the kyng ſayde: who is in the courte? (For Haman was gone in to the courte without before the kynges houſe, that he myght ſpeake vnto the kynge to hange Mardocheus on the tre, that he had prepared for hym.)

B And the kynges ſeruauntes ſayde vnto hym: behold, Haman ſtandeth without in the courte

courte. And the kynge ſayd: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge ſayde vnto hym: what ſhall be done vnto the man/ whome the kynge wolde fayne brynge vnto worſhyp? Haman thought in his hert: whom deſyreth the kynge to brynge vnto worſhyp, more then me? And Haman anſwered the kynge. Let the man whome the kynge pleaſeth to brynge vnto worſhyppe, be brought hyther, that he may be arayed with the royal garmentes which the kynge vſeth to weare: and the horſe that the kyng rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be ſet vpon his heade. C And let this rayment and horſe be delyuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that they maye aray the man withal (whome the kynge is diſpoſed to brynge to honoure) and cary hym vpon the horſe thorowe the ſtrete of the citye, and proclame before hym: thus ſhall it be done to the man/ whome the kynge pleaſeth to brynge to honoure. And the kynge ſayde: make haſt, and take as thou haſt ſayde, the rayment and the horſe: and do euen ſo vnto Mardocheus the Iue, that ſytteth before the kynges gate, and let nothynge fayle of all that thou haſte ſpoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horſe, and arayed Mordocheus, and brought hym on horſebacke thorowe the ſtrete of the citye, and proclamed before hym: Euen thus ſhal it be done vnto the man whom the kyng is dyſpoſed to honour.

D And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate, but Haman gat him home in al the haſt mournynge bare headed, and tolde Zares his wyfe and al his frendes, euery thyng that had happened hym. Then ſayd his wyſe men and Zares his wyfe vnto hym: Yf it be Mardocheus, of the ſede of the Iues, before whom thou haſt begon to fall, thou ſhalt not preuayle agaynſt hym, but ſhalte ſurely fall before him. And whyle they were yet talkyng with hym, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and cauſed Haman to make haſt, to come vnto the banket that Eſther had prepared.

¶ The quene byddeth the kynge and Haman agayne: and prayeth for her ſelfe, and for her people. She accuſeth Haman, and he is hanged on the galows, whiche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

CAPI. VII.

A AND the kynge and Haman came in to the banket that quene Eſther had prepared, and the kynge ſayd vnto Eſther on the ſeconde daye, at the banket of wyne: what is thy peticyon (quene Eſther) that it may be gyuen the? And what requireſt thou? yea, aſke euen halfe of the empyre, and it ſhal be done. And Eſther the quene anſwered, and ſayde: If I haue founde grace in thy ſyght (O kynge) and yf it pleaſe the kynge, then graunt me my lyfe at my deſyre, and my people, for my peticyons ſake: for we are ſolde, I and my people, to be deſtroyed, to be ſlayne, and to peryſhe.

B And wolde God we were ſolde to be bond men and bondwomen, then wolde I holde my tongue: For the enemye pondreth not the kynges harme. The kynge Ahaſuerus anſwered, and ſayde vnto quene Eſther: who is he? And where is he, that dare preſume in his mynde, to do after that maner? And Eſther ſayde: the enemye and aduerſary is this wycked Hamã. Haman, was exceadyngly afrayed before the kynge and the quene.

C And the kynge aroſe from the banket and from the wyne in his diſpleaſure, and wente in to the palace garden. And Hamã ſtode vp, and beſought quene Eſther for his lyfe: for he ſaw, that there was a myſcheyfe prepared for hym of the kynge alredy. And when the kyng came agayne out of the palace garden in to the place where they dranke wyne, Hamã had layde hym vpõ the bed, that Eſther ſat vpon

D Then ſayde the kynge: wyll he force the quene alſo before me in the houſe? As ſoone as that worde went out of the kynges mouth, & they couered Hamans face. And Harbona one of the chamberlaynes that ſtode before the kynge, ſayd. Beholde, there ſtandeth a galous in Hamans houſe fyftye cubytes hygh, whiche he had made for Mardocheus, that ſpake good for the kynge. The kynge ſayde: hange hym theron. So they hanged Haman on the galous/ that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacifyed.

¶ After the death of Haman is Mardocheus exalted, and then is there comfortable wordes ſent vnto the Iues.

CAPI. VIII.

A THe ſame daye dyd kynge Ahaſuerus gyue the houſe of Haman, the Iues enemye, vnto quene Eſther. And Mardocheus came before the kynge: For Eſther tolde, howe that he belonged vnto her. And the kynge put of his fynger rynge, which he had taken from Haman, and gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Eſther ſet Mardocheus ouer the houſe of Haman. And Eſther ſpake yet more before the kynge: and fell downe at his fete weppynge, and beſought hym, that he wolde put awaye the wyckedneſſe of Haman the Agagite, and his deuyſes that he had ymagyned agaynſt the Iues.

B And the kynge (accordyng to the maner,) helde out the golden ſcepter towarde Eſther.

✿ ✿ (vvherby vvas declared a token of graciouſneſſe.) Then roſe Eſther, and ſtode before the kynge, and ſayde: yf it pleaſe the kynge, and yf I haue founde grace in his ſyght, and yf it be acceptable before the kynge, then let it be wrytten, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the Sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, may be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to deſtroye the Iues, whiche are in all the kynges landes. For how can I ſuffer and ſe the euyll, that ſhall happen vnto my people? Or how can I loke vpon the deſtruccyon of my kynred?

C And the kyng Ahaſuerus ſayd vnto quene Eſther, & to Mardocheus the Iue: Behold/ I haue gyuen Eſther the houſe of Haman/ whome they haue hanged vpon a tree, bycauſe he layde hande vpon the Iues. Wryte ye alſo for the Iues, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and ſeale it with the kynges rynge (for the wrytynges that were wrytten in the kyngs name, and ſealed with the kynges rynge, durſt no man dyſanull.) Then were the kynges Scrybes called at the ſame tyme, euen in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth * Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye. And it was wrytten (accordynge to all as Mardocheus cōmaūded) vnto the Iues, and to the prynces, to the Debityes and captaynes in the landes whiche are from India vntyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and ſeuen and twentye landes/ vnto euery one accordynge to the wrytynge therof, and vnto euery people after theyr ſpeche, & to the Iues accordynge to theyr wrytyng and language. And he wrote in the kynge Ahaſuerus name, and ſealed it with the kynges rynge. And by poſtes that rode vpon horſes, and ſwyfte yonge Mules, ſent he the wrytynges, wherin the kynge graunted the Iues (in what cityes ſoeuer they were) to gather them ſelues togyther, and to ſtande for theyr lyfe, and for to rote out, to ſley, & to deſtroye all the power of the people, and lande that wolde trouble them, with chyldren and women, & to ſpoyle theyr good vpon one daye in all the landes of kynge Ahaſuerus, namely vpon the thyrtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, whiche is the moneth * Adar.

* Maye.

February.

D The ſūme of the wrytyng was, how there ſhulde be a cōmaundement gyuen in all landes and publyſſhed amonge all people, and that the Iues ſhulde be redye agaynſt that day, and to auenge them ſelues on theyr enemyes. And ſo the poſtes that rode vpon the ſwyfte horſes and Mules, made haſt with all ſpede, to execute the kynges worde: and the cōmaundement was deuyſed in Suſan the cheyfe Citye. And Mardocheus went out ✿ (from the palace, and) from the kyng in royal apparell of yelowe and whyte, and with a great crowne of golde, beynge arayed with a garment of ſylke and purple, and the citye of Suſan reioyſed, and was gladde: and vnto the Iues there was come ✿ (a nevv) lyght and gladneſſe, ioye and worſhyp. In all landes and cityes, in to what places ſoeuer the kynges worde and cōmaundement reached, there was ioye and myrth, proſperyte & good dayes amonge the Iues: in ſo moche, that many of the people in the land became of the Iues bylefe/ and the feare of the Iues came vpon them.

¶ At the cōmaundement of the kynge the Iues put theyr aduerſaryes to death. The ſonnes of Haman are hanged. The Iues kepe a feaſt daye in the remembraunce of theyr delyueraunce.

CAPI. IX.

A IN the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar/ vpon the thyrtenth daye of the ſame, when the kynges worde and cōmaūdemente ſhulde be done, euen vpon the ſame daye that the enemyes ſhuld haue deſtroyed the Iues to haue oppreſſed them, it turned contrary wyſe/ euen that the Iues ſhuld ſubdue theyr enemyes. For then gathered the Iues togyther in theyr cityes within all the landes of kynge Ahaſuerus, to laye hande on ſoche as wolde do them euyll, and no man coulde withſtande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and prynces & Debityes/ and offycers of the kynge, promoted the Iues: for the feare of Mardocheus came vpō them. For Mardocheus was greate in the kynges houſe, and the reporte of hym was noyſed in all landes, howe he increaſed and grewe.

B Thus the Iues ſmote all theyr enemyes with a ſore ſlaughter, and ſlue & deſtroyed/ and dyd after theyr wyll vnto ſoche as were theyr aduerſaryes. And at Suſan the cheyfe citye ſlue the Iues, and deſtroyed fyue hundreth men: and ſlue Pharſandatha, Dalphō Aſphatha/ Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmaſtha/ Ariſai/ Aridai, and Uaizatha, the ten ſonnes of Haman the ſonne of Hamadatha the enemye of the Iues: but on his goodes they layde no handes. At the ſame tyme was the kynge certyfyed of the nombre of thoſe that were ſlayne in the citye of Suſan.

And the kynge ſayde vnto quene Eſther: The Iues haue ſlayne & deſtroyed fyue hundreth men in the citye of Suſan, & the ten ſonnes of Haman: What haue they done thynkeſt thou in the other landes of the kynge?

And

C And what is thy peticion, that it maye be gyuen the? or what requyreſt thou more to be done? Eſther anſwered. If it pleaſe the kyng, let hym ſuffer the Jues to morowe alſo to do accordyng vnto this dayes cõmaundement, that they maye hange Hamans ten ſonnes vpon the tre. And the kyng charged to do ſo, and the cõmaundement was deuyſed at Suſan, and they hanged Hamans ten ſonnes. For the Jues that were in Suſan gathered them ſelues togither, vpon the fourtenth day of the moneth Adar, & ſlue thre hundred men at Suſan, but on theyr goodes they layde no handes. As for the other Jues that were in the kynges landes, they came togyther, and ſtode for theyr lyues, that they myght haue reſt from theyr enemyes: and ſlue of theyr enemyes fyue and ſeuentye thouſande, howbeit, they layde no hande on theyr goodes.

D This they dyd on the thyrtenth day of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the ſame moneth reſted they, whiche day they helde with feaſtynge and gladneſſe. But the Jues that were at Suſan, came togyther both on the thyrtenth day & on the fourtenth, & on the fyftenth day of the ſame they reſted, and helde the daye with feaſtynge and gladneſſe. And therfore the Jues that dwelte in the villages and vnwalled townes, helde the fourtenth day of the moneth Adar, with gladneſſe and feaſtynge, and kepte holy day, and euery one ſent gyftes vnto an other.

And Mardocheus wrote theſe actes, and ſent the wrytynges vnto all the Jues that were in all the landes of kynge Ahaſuerus, both nygh and farre that they ſhulde make a lawe among them ſelues and holde the fourtenth or fyftenth day of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Jues came to reſt from theyr enemyes, & as a moneth wherin theyr payne was turned to ioye, and theyr ſorowe in to a holy day, and that in thoſe dayes they ſhulde make feaſtes and gladneſſe, and one to ſende gyftes vnto an other, and to diſtribute vnto the poore.

E And the Jues were contente with it that they had begon to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman the ſonne of Hamadatha all the Jues enemye, had deuyſed agaynſt the Jues, howe he myght deſtroy them, and cauſed to caſt Phur (that is a lot) for to put them in feare, and to brynge them to nought: and howe Eſther went, and ſpake to the kynge, that thorowe letters his wycked deuyce (which he ymagined agaynſt the Jues) myght be turned vpon his owne heade, and howe he and his ſonnes were hanged on the tree. For the whiche cauſe they called this day Phurim, bycauſe of the name of the lot, and bycauſe of all the wordes of this wrytynge: & what they them ſelues had ſene, and what had happened vnto them.

F And the Jues ſet it vp, and toke it vpon them and theyr ſede, and vpon all ſuche as ioyned them ſelues vnto them, that they wold not myſſe but obſerue theſe two dayes yerely accordyng as they were wrytten and appoynted, how that theſe dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kepte of chyldrens chyldren among all kynreds in all landes and cityes. They are the dayes of Phurim, whiche are not to be ouerſlypte amonge the Jues, & the memorial of them ought not to peryſhe from theyr ſede. And quene Eſther the doughter of Abihail & Mardocheus the Jue wrote with all auctorite (to confirme this ſeconde wrytynge of Phurim) and ſent the letters vnto all the Jues in the hundred & ſeuen & twentie landes of the Empyre of Ahaſuarus, with frendly and faythfull wordes, to confirme theſe dayes of Phurim, in theyr tyme appoynted, accordyng as Mardocheus the Jue and Eſther the quene had appoynted them.

G And they bounde theyr ſoule & theyr ſede to faſtynge & prayer. And Eſther ſtablyſſhed the wordes of theſe lottes, as it is wrytten in the boke. And the kyng Ahaſuerus layde tribute vpon the land, and vpon the Iles of the ſee. And all that he dyd by his power & auctorite, and the great worſhyp of Mardocheus whiche the kynge gaue hym, be they not wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Media and Perſia? For Mardocheus the Jue was the ſeconde nexte vnto kyng Ahaſuerus, and great among the Jues, and accepted among the multitude of the brethren, as one that ſeketh the welthe of his people, and ſpeaketh the beſt for all his ſede.

The ende of the boke of Eſther.

The boke of Job.

Job is plaged of god by the loſſe of his goodes, and chyldren.

CAPI. Primo.

A Gene.xxii.d. IN the lande of *Hus there was a mã whoſe name was Job: and the ſame was a perfyte & iuſt man, ſuche a one as feared God, and eſchued euyll. And he had ſeuen ſonnes and thre doughters. *His ſubſtaunce alſo (Job.xlii.b) was ſeuen .M. ſhepe, and thre .M. camelles, fyue .C. yocke of oxen, and fyue .C. ſhe aſſes, and a very greate houſholde: ſo that he was one of the moſt pryncipal men amonge al them of the Eaſt countreye. And his ſonnes wente, and made banketes: one daye in one houſe, an other daye in an other, and ſente for theyr thre ſyſters, to eate and drynke with them.

And it fortuned, that when they had paſſed ouer the tyme of theyr banketynge rounde aboute, Job ſent for them, and ☞ ſanctified them, and gat vp early, and offered for euery one a burntofferynge. For Job ſayde: leſt peraduenture my ſonnes haue done ſome offence & ☞ haue bene vnthankefull to god in theyr hertes. Thus dyd Job euery day. And vpon a day *when ☞ the chyldren of God came & (Job.ii.a.) ſtode before the Lorde, it fortuned that Satan came alſo amonge them.

B And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan. From whence comeſt thou? Satan anſwered the Lorde, and ſayde: *I haue gone aboute the lande, and walked thorowe it. (i.Pet.v.b) And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan: haſt thou not conſydered my ſeruaunt Job, how that there is none lyke hym in the lande? a perfyte and a iuſt man, ſuche a one as feareth God, & eſchueth euyll. Satan anſwered, and ſayde vnto the Lorde: Doth Job feare God for nought? haſt thou not preſerued hym, and his houſe, and al that he hath on euery ſyde? Thou haſt bleſſed the workes of his handes, and his poſſeſſyon is encreaſed in the lande. But laye thyne hande now vpon hym ✠ (a lytle) and touche al that he hath, and he ſhal curſe the to thy face. And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan: Lo, all that he hath, be in thy power: onely vpon hym ſelfe ſe that thou lay not thyne hande. And Satan went forth from the preſence of the Lorde.

C And vpon a certayne day it fortuned, that his ſonnes and doughters were eatyng, and drynkyng wyne in theyr eldeſt brothers houſe and there came a meſſenger vnto Job, and ſayde. Whyle the oxen were a plowynge, and the Aſſes goynge in the paſture beſyde them the Sabees came in violently, and toke them awaye: yea they haue ſlayne thy ſeruauntes with the edge of the ſwerde: and I onely ran my waye, to tell the. Whyle he was yet ſpeakynge, there came an other and ſayde.

The fyre of god is fallen frõ heuen, and hath brent vp all thy ſhepe and ſeruauntes, and conſumed them: and I onely ranne my way, to tell the. And whyle he was yet ſpeakynge there came an other, and ſayde.

The Caldees made thre armyes, and fell D in vpon the Camelles, and haue caryed them awaye, yea and ſlayne thy ſeruauntes with the ſwerde: and I onely am gotten awaye, to tel the. And whyle he was yet ſpeakyng, there came an other, and ſayde: Thy ſonnes and thy doughters were eatynge and drynkynge wyne in theyr eldeſt brothers houſe, and beholde: there came a myghty great wynde out of the South, and ſmote the foure corners of the houſe: whiche fell vpon thy chyldren, and they are deade: and I am gotten away alone, to tell the. Then Job ſtode vp, and rente his clothes, and ſhaued his heade, fell downe vpon the grounde, worſhypped, and ſayde: Eccle.v.c. *Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, i.Timo.vi. and naked ſhall I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken away, ✠ (euen as it hath pleaſed the lorde, ſo is ✠ it come to paſſe,) Bleſſed be the name of the lorde. *In all theſe thynges dyd Job not of- Job.ii.b fende, nor murmured folyſſhly agaynſt god.

Job is plaged with ſore byles, and afterwarde is mocked of his wyfe. His frendes vyſyte hym, and haue compaſſyon on hym.

CAPI. II.

AND the chyldren of God came and ſtode A before the Lorde, and Satan came alſo amonge them, & ſtode before the Lorde. And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan: From whence comeſt thou? Satan anſwered the Lorde, and ſayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, and walked thorowe it. And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan: haſt thou not conſydered my ſeruaunt Job? for there is none lyke hym in the lande. For he is a perfyte and iuſt man ſuche a one as feareth God, & eſchueth euyl, and contynueth ſtyll in his godlyneſſe.

B And thou moueſt me agaynſt hym, that I ſhulde punyſſhe hym for nought. And Satan anſwered the Lorde, and ſayde. Skynne for ſkynne: yea a man wyll geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne hande now vpon hym, & touche ouer his bone, and fleſſhe, and he ſhall curſe the to thy face. And the Lorde ſayde vnto Satan: Lo, there haſt thou hym in thy power, but ſpare his lyfe. So went Satan forth from the preſence of the Loꝛde, and ſmote Job with merueylous ſore byles, from the ſole of his foote vnto his crowne: ſo that he ſat vpon the grounde in the aſſhes, ⁊ ſcraped of the fylthe of his ſoꝛes with a pot ſharde. Then ſayde his wyfe vnto hym: * Doeſt thou contynue yet in thy perfyteneſſe? curſe God and dye. But Job ſayde vnto her: Thou ſpeakeſt lyke a folyſſhe woman. Shal we receyue proſperite at the hande of God, and not receyue aduerſyte?

* In all theſe thynges dyd not Job ſynne
C with his lyppes. Nowe when Jobs frendes herde of all the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from his owne place: namely, Eliphas the Themanite, Bildad the Suhite, ⁊ Zophad the Naamathite. And they were agreed togyther to come to ſhewe theyꝛ compaſſyon vpon hym, and to comfoꝛte hym. So when they lyfte vp theyꝛ eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed, and wepte: and euery one of them rente his clothes, and ſpꝛynkeled duſt vpon theyꝛ heades in the ayꝛe. They ſat them downe by hym alſo vpon the grounde ſeuen dayes ⁊ vii. nyghtes. Neyther was there any of them that ſpake one woꝛde vnto hym: foꝛ they ſawe, that his payne was very great.

¶ The woꝛdes of Job, wherin he declareth that this preſent lyfe is miſerable, and that the death of the ryghteous is ioyous and fortunable.

CAPI. III.

A After this opened Job his mouth, and ☞ curſed his day. And Job anſwered, and ſayd: loſt be that day wherin I was boꝛne: ⁊ the nyght, in the whiche it was ſayd, there is a man chylde conceyued. The ſame day be turned to darkeneſſe, and not regarded of god from aboue, neyther let him ſhyne vpon it with lyght: but let it be ſtayned with darkeneſſe, and the ſhadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be lapped in with ſoꝛowe on the daye tyme. Let the darke ſtoꝛme ouercome that nyght, and let it not be ioyned vnto the dayes of the yere, noꝛ counted in the monethes. Deſolate be that nyght, and without gladneſſe: let them that curſe the daye, and that be redye to rayſe vp mournynge, gyue it alſo theyꝛ curſe. Let the ſterres of that night be dymme thoꝛow darkeneſſe of it. Let it loke foꝛ lyghte, but let it ſe none, neyther ☞ the ryſynge vp of the fayꝛe mornynge: bycauſe it ſhut not vp the wombe that bare me: Foꝛ then ſhulde theſe ſoꝛowes haue bene hyd fro myne eyes.

Alas, * why dyed I not in the byꝛth? why
B dyd not I peryſſhe, as ſoone as I came out of my mothers wombe? Why ſet they me vpon theyꝛ knees? Why gaue they me ſuche with theyꝛ breſtes? Then ſhuld I nowe haue lyen ſtyll, I ſhulde haue ſlepte, and bene at reſt: lyke as the kynges ⁊ loꝛdes of the earth, which haue buylded them ſelues ſpecyal places: Oꝛ as the pꝛynces that haue had greate ſubſtaunce of golde, and theyꝛ houſes full of ſyluer. Oꝛ why was I not hyd, as a thynge boꝛne out of tyme, eyther as yonge chyldꝛen which neuer ſawe the lyght? ☞ There muſt the wycked ceaſſe from theyꝛ tyranny, ⁊ there ſuch as are ouerlaboured be at reſt: there are thoſe let out free, which haue bene in pꝛyſon, ſo that they heare no moꝛe the voyce of the oppꝛeſſoure: There are ſmall and great, and the ſeruaunt is free from his mayſter.

He leadeth awaye the great men in to captiuite, and turneth the myghtye vpſyde downe. * He taketh the verite from out of the mouth, and diſapoynteth the aged of theyr reaſon. He poureth out confuſyon vpon prynces, and conforteth them that haue bene oppreſſed. Loke * what lyeth hyd in darkeneſſe, he declareth it openly: and the verye ſhadowe of deathe bryngeth he to lyghte. He bothe encreaſeth the people, and deſtroyeth them. He maketh them to multiplye, and dryueth them awaye. He chaungeth the hertes of them that rule the people of the earth, and diſapoynteth them: ſo that they go wanderynge out of the waye, and grope in the darke without lyght: he maketh them alſo to ſtacker to and fro lyke dronken men.

CAPI. XIII.

A LO, all this haue I ſene with myne eye, herde with myne eare, and vnderſtande it. Loke what ye knowe, that ſame do I knowe alſo, neyther am I inferiour vnto you. Neuertheleſſe, I talke with the almyghtye and my deſyre is to comen with God. As for you, ye are worke mayſters of lyes, and vnprofytable * Phiſicians all togyther. Wolde God ye kepte your tongue, for then myght ye be taken for wyſe men. Nowe heare my chydynge, and ponder the ſentence of my lyppes.

B Do ye ſpeake iniquite agaynſt God? and talke agaynſt hym with deceyte? Wyl ye not accepte the perſon of hym? Or wyll ye contende with God? Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to rekenynge. For as one man mocketh an other, ſo do ye mocke hym. He ſhall punyſſhe you: and reproue you, yf ye do ſecretly accepte any perſone. Shall he not make you afrayde whẽ he ſheweth hym ſelfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? Your remembraunce is lyke vnto a ſparke, and your bodyes lyke the claye. Holde youre tongues for my ſake, that I alſo may ſpeake, and my ſorowe ſhall be the leſſe.

C ☞ Wherfore do I beare my fleſſhe in my tethe, * and put my ſoule in my handes? Lo, though he ſley me, yet wyll I put my truſt in hym. But * I wyl reproue myne owne wayes in his ſyght, he ſhal make me hole: and there maye no ypocrite come before hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my ſayenges with your eares. Beholde, nowe haue I prepared my iudgement, and know that I ſhall be founde ryghteous. What is he that wyll go to lawe with me? ☞ (Let hym come) that I may now holde my tongue, & dye. Neuertheles graunt me two thynges, and then wyll I not hyde my ſelfe from the.

D Withdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearful drede of the, make me afrayde And then call me, and I wyll anſwere: or els let me ſpeake, and gyue thou me an anſwere. Howe many are my myſdedes and ſynnes? Let me knowe my tranſgreſſyons and offences? Wherfore hydeſt thou thy face, and holdeſt me for thyne enemye? Wylte thou be ſo cruel and extreme vnto a flyeng leafe, and ſo low vpon drye ſtubble? for thou layeſt ſharplye to my charge, and punyſſheſt me * for the ſynnes of my youth. * Thou putteſt my fete alſo in the ſtockes: and lokeſt narowly vnto all my pathes, and markeſt the ſteppes of my fete: where as I (notwithſtandyng) muſt conſume, lyke as a fowle caryon, and as a clothe that is moth eaten.

Man

¶ Job deſcrybeth the lyfe of man, and prophecyeth of the reſurreccyon. Hope ſuſteyneth the godly, vntyll they optayne that they loke for.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Man that is borne of woman, hath but a ſhorte tyme to lyue, & is full of miſerye. He cometh vp and is cut downe lyke a floure. He flyeth as it were a ſhadow, and neuer contynueth in one ſtate. Doeſt thou open thyne eyes vpon ſoche one, and bryngeſt me in thy iudgement? Who can make it cleane, that commeth of an vncleane thyng? No body. * The dayes of man ſurely are determyned, the nombre of his monethes are knowen only vnto the. Thou haſte appoynted hym his boundes, whiche he can not go beyonde. Go from hym, that he maye reſt ☞ (a lytle,) vntyll his daye come: whiche he loketh for, lyke as an hyrelynge doth.

B Yf a tre be cut downe, there is ſome hope yet, that it wyll ſproute, and ſhutte forth the braunches agayne: For though the rote of it be waxen olde, & the ſtocke therof be deade in the grounde, yet when it getteth the ſente of water, it wyl budde, & brynge forth bowes, lyke as the tre that is planted. But as for man, when he is deade, peryſſhed and conſumed awaye, what becommeth of hym? The floodes when they be dryed vp, and the ryuers when they be emptye, are fylled agayne thorowe the flowynge waters of the ſee: but when man ſlepeth, he ryſeth not agayne (of his owne ſtrength) * vntyl the heuen peryſh: he ſhal not wake vp nor ryſe out of his ſlepe.

C O that thou woldeſt kepe me, & hyde me in the hell, vntyll thy wrath were ſtylled: and to appoynt me a tyme, wherin thou myghteſt remembre me. Maye a deade man lyue agayne? * All the dayes of my lyfe wyll I wayte ſtyll, tyll my chaungynge ſhall come. Thou ſhalt call me, and I ſhall anſwere the: * deſpyſe not ŷ the worke of thyne owne handes. For nowe thou nombreſt all my goynges, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my ſynnes. My iniquite is ſealed vp, as it were in a bag but be mercyfull vnto my wyckedneſſes.

D The mountaynes fall awaye at the laſt, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearſe thorowe the very ſtones by lytle and lytle, the floodes waſhe awaye the grauel and earth: And deſtroyeſt thou the hope of man? Thou preuayleſt ſtyll agaynſt hym, ſo that he paſſeth awaye: thou chaungeſt his eſtate, and putteſt hym from the. And whyther his chyldren come to worſhyppe or no, he cannot tel: And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his fleſſhe muſte haue trauayle: and whyle the ſoule is in hym, he muſt be in ſorowe.

¶ Eliphas reprehendeth Job, bycauſe he aſcrybeth wyſdom and pureneſſe to hym ſelfe. He deſcrybeth the courſe that falleth on the wycked, ſhewyng Job to be one of that nombre.

CAPI. XV.

A Then anſwered Eliphas the Themanite and ſayde: Shal a wyſe mans anſwere be the ſcyence of the wynde, and fyl any mans bely as it were with the wynde of the eaſt? Shall he reproue with a worde, that is nothynge worth: and ſpeake the thynges, whiche can do no good? As for ſhame, thou haſt ſet it a ſyde, els woldeſt thou not make ſo many wordes before god: but thy wyckedneſſe teacheth thy mouthe, and ſo thou haſte choſen the a craftye tongue. Thyne owne mouth condemneth the, and not I: Yea thyne owne lyppes ſhape an anſwere agaynſt the. Art thou the fyrſt man, that euer was borne? Or, waſt thou made before the hylles? haſte thou herde the ſecrete counſayle of God, that all wyſdom is to lytle for the? What knoweſt thou, that we knowe not? And what vnderſtandeſt thou, but we can the ſame? With vs are bothe olde & aged men, yea ſoche as haue lyued longer then thy father.

B Thynkeſt thou it a ſmall thynge of the conſolacyons of god? with the is a lyenge worde. Why doth thyne herte ſo be with the? And wherfore wynkeſt thou with thyne eyes that thy mynde is ſo pufte agaynſt god, and letteſt ſoche wordes go out of thy mouthe? What is man, that he ſhulde be cleane? what hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be ryghtuous? * Beholde, he doth not truſte his ſayntes: Yea the very heuens are not cleane in his ſyght. Howe moch more then an abhomynable and vyle man, whiche drynketh wyckedneſſe lyke water? I wyll tell the, heare me, and I wyll ſhewe the that I haue ſene: which wyſe men haue told, and hath not bene hyd from their ☞ fathers ☞ vnto whome onely the earth was gyuen, and no ſtraunger went amonge.

Job. iiii. d. ii. Pet. ii. b.

C The * vngodly ſoroweth all the dayes of his lyfe as it were a woman trauaylynge of chylde, and the nombre of a tyrauntes yeres is vnknowen. A fearfull ſounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he deſtruccyon: He byleueth neuer to be delyuered out of darkeneſſe, for the ſwerde is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lyuynge, he ſeeth playnely, that the daye of darkeneſſe is at hande. Sorowe and carefulneſſe wyll make hym afrayde, and compaſſe hym rounde aboute, lyke ☞ as it were a kynge with his hooſt redy to the battayle. For he hath ſtretched out his hande agaynſt God, & armed hym ſelfe agaynſt the almyghtye. He runneth proudly vpon hym, and with a ſtyffe necke fyghteth he agaynſt him: whereas he couereth his face with fatneſſe, and maketh his body well lykynge.

D Therfore ſhall his dwellynge be in deſolate cityes, and in houſes which no man inhabyteth, but are become heapes of ſtones. He ſhall not be ryche, neyther ſhall his ſubſtaunce cōtynue, nor encreaſe vpon earth. He ſhal neuer come out of darkeneſſe, the flame ſhall drye vp his braunches: with the blaſt of the mouth of God ſhall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vanite: & yet he is out of the waye, and vanite ſhall be his recōpence. He ſhall peryſhe, before his tyme be worne out, & his braunch ſhall not be grene. He ſhalbe plucked of/ as an vntymely grape from the vyne, and ſhal let his floure fall, as the olyue doth. For the congregacion of ypocrytes ſhall be deſolate and vnfruytfull, and the fyre ſhall conſume the houſes of ſoche as are gredy to receyue gyftes. He * conceyueth trauayle, and beareth vanite, and theyr body bryngeth forth dyſceyte.

CAPI. XVI.

A IOb anſwered, and ſayde: I haue ofte tymes herde ſoche thynges. Myſerable gyuers of conforte are ye, al the ſorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, haſt thou yet anye more to ſaye? I coulde ſpeake, as ye do alſo. But wold god that your ſoule were in my ſoules ſteade, then ſhulde I heape vp wordes agaynſt you, and ſhake my heade at you. I ſhulde confort you with my mouth, and releaſe your payne with ☞ the talkynge of my lyppes. ☞ (But what ſhal B I do?) For all my wordes, my ſorowe wyll not ceaſe: and though I hold my tongue, yet wyl it not departe frō me. But nowe that God hath ſent me aduerſite, thou haſt troubled al my congregacyon: And that thou haſt fylled me with wrynkles, my fleſhe is recorde, and my leaneſſe ryſeth vp agaynſt me, and beareth wytneſſe agaynſt me. He is angry at me: he hateth me and gnaſheth vpō me with his tethe. Myne enemye ſcouleth vpon me with ☞ his eyes. ☞ They haue opened theyr mouthes wyde vpon me * and ſmytten me vpon the cheke deſpytefullye, they gather them ſelues together agaynſt me.

3. Reg. 22. d
Marc. 14. g

C God hath put me in preaſe with the vngodly, & delyuered me in to the handes of the wycked. I was in welth, but he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke he hath rent me, and ſet me, as a marke for hym ſelfe. His archers compaſſe me rounde aboute: he wounded my loynes, and doth not ſpare. My bowels hath powred vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a graunt. I haue ſewed a ſacke cloth vpon my ſkyn, and lye with my horne in the duſt.

D My face is ſwollen with weppynge/ and in myne eyes is the ſhadowe of death. Howbeit, there is no wyckedneſſe in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth ☞ couer ☞ not thou my blood, and let my cryenge fynde no rowme. For lo, my wytneſſe is in heuen: & he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygth. My frendꝭ gyue me many wordes to ſcorne, and myne eye powreth out teares vnto god. O that a body might pleate with god, as one mā doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares is come, and the waye that I muſt go is at hande, from whence I ſhall not turne agayne.

¶ Job ſayth that he conſumeth awaye, and yet doth paciently abyde it.

CAPI. XVII.

A MY breth ſtynketh, my dayes are ſhortened. I am harde at deathes dore. Frowarde men are with me, and myne eye muſt contynue in the bytterneſſe of them. O delyuer me, and loke out one to be my ſurety in thy ſyght, what is he that knoweth who wyll promyſe for me? For thou haſt withholden theyr hertes from vnderſtandynge, therfore ſhalt thou not ſet (them) vp on hygh.

B He promyſeth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne Chyldren ſpende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the people: where as before I was theyr ioye. Myne eye is dymme, for very heuyneſſe, and all my ſtrength is become lyke a ſhadowe. Uertuous men therfore ſhall well conſyder this, & the innocent ſhall take parte agaynſt the ypocryte.

C The ryghteous alſo wyll kepe his waye/ and he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be ſtronger and ſtronger. As for you, turne you and get you hence (I pray you) ſeynge I can not fynde one wyſe man amonge you: My dayes are paſt, & my counſayles and thoughtes of my herte are vanyſſhed awaye, chaunginge the nyght in to daye, and the lyght in to darkeneſſe.

D Though I tary neuer ſo moch, yet the graue is my houſe, and I haue made my bed in the darke. I call corrupcyon my father, and the wormes call I my mother ⁊ my ſyſter. what helpeth then my longe taryenge? Or/ who

All that I haue, ſhall go downe in to the pyt, ¶ Sophar ſayth that the vnfaythfull, the couetous, and the wycked ſhall haue a ſhorte ende.

CAPI. XX.

A THen anſwered Sophar the Naamathite, and ſayde. For the ſame cauſe do my thoughtes compell me to anſwere. And why? my mynde is redye within me. I haue ſuffycyently herde thy checkynge and reproue, therfore am I purpoſed to make anſwere after myne vnderſtandynge. Knoweſt thou not this/namely: that from the begynnynge (euer ſynce the creacyon of man vpon earth) the gladneſſe of the vngodly hath ben ſhort, and that the ioye of ypocrites cõtynueth but the twynclynge of an eye? Though he be magnifyed vp to the heuen, ſo that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet at a turne he peryſſheth for euer,

B In ſo moche that they whiche haue ſene hym, ſhall ſaye: Where is he? He ſhall vanyſſhe as a dreame, ſo that he can no more be founde, and ſhall paſſe awaye as a vyſyon in the nyght. So that the eye whiche ſawe hym before, ſhall haue no more ſyght of hym, and his place ſhall knowe hym no more. ☞ His chyldren ſhal be fayne to agre with the pore, & his handes ſhal reſtore them theyr goodes. From his youth his bones are full of pleaſures, but nowe ſhall it lye downe with hym in the earth. When wyckedneſſe was ſwete in his mouth, he hyd it vnder his tongue. That he fauoured, that wold he not forſake/ but kepte it cloſe in his throte.

C The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the poyſon of ſerpentes, within his body. The ryches that he deuoured, ſhall he perbrake agayne, for God ſhall drawe them out of his bely, he ſhall ſucke the gall of ſerpentes, and the adders tongue ſhall ſley hym: ſo that he ſhall no more ſe the ryuers and brokes of hony & butter. The thynge that other men haue laboured for, ſhal he reſtore agayn and ſhall not eate it vp. Great trauayle ſhal he make for ryches, but he ſhall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppreſſed the poore/ & not helped them; houſes hath he ſpoyled/ and not buylded them. His bely coulde neuer be fylled, therfore ſhall he peryſſhe in his couetouſnes. Therfore ſhall none of his meate be lefte behynde, therfore ſhall no man loke for his proſperyte. When he had plenteouſneſſe of euery thyng, yet was he pore, though he was helped on euery ſyde.

D For though the wycked haue neuer ſo moch to fyll his bely, yet god ſhall ſende his wrath vpon hym, & cauſe his indignacyõ to reygne ouer him: ſo that yf he fle the yron weapons, he ſhall be ſhot wt the ſtele bowe. The arowe is taken forth, & gone out of the quyuer, & a glyſterynge ſwerde thorow the gall of hym/ feare ſhal come vpõ him. There ſhal no darkneſſe be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndled fyre ſhall cõſume hym, & loke what remayneth in his houſe, it ſhall be deſtroyed. The heuen ſhall declare his wyckedneſſe, and the earth ſhall take parte agaynſt hym. Is it for mans ſake that I make this diſputacyon? Whiche yf it were ſo, ſhuld not my ſpirite be then in ſore trouble? Marke me well, & be abaſſhed, & laye your hande vpon your mouth. For when I cõſyder my ſelfe, I am afrayde, & my fleſſhe is ſmytten with fere. * Wherfore do wycked men lyue in health & proſperite, come to theyr olde age, & increaſe in ryches? Psal.73.a. Iere.12.a. For what careth he what become of his houſholde after his deathe, when the noumbre of his monethes is cut ſhorte? ¶ Eliphas reprehendeth Job of vnmercyfulneſſe.

CAPI. XXII.

A SO Eliphas the Themanite gaue anſwer and ſayd: Maye a man be profytable vnto god, as he that is wyſe maye be profytable to hym ſelfe? Is it any vauntage to the almyghtye that thou art ryghteous? Or ſhal it profyte hym, that thou makeſt thy wayes perfyte? Is he afrayde to reproue the, and to ſtep forth with the in to iudgement? Is not thy wyckedneſſe greate, & thyne vngracious dedes innumerable? For thou haſt taken the pledge frō thy brother for nought, & robbed the naked of theyr clothyng: To ſoch as were werye, haſt thou gyuen no water to drynke, & haſte withdrawen breade from the hungrye.

B Shulde ſoch one then as vſeth violence/ wrong & oppreſſion (doyng all thyng of parcialyte, and hauynge reſpecte of perſonnes) dwell in the lande? Thou haſt ſent wydowes away emptye & oppreſſed the pore fatherleſſe. Therfore arte thou compaſſed aboute with ſnares on euery ſyde, & ſodeynlye vexed with feare. Shuldeſt thou then ſe no darkeneſſe? Shulde not the water floode run ouer thee? Nowe * bycauſe that god is hygher then the heuens, and bycauſe thou ſeyſt that the ſterres are ſo hygh, wylte thou therfore ſaye: Tuſhe, howe ſhulde god knowe? Doth his dominion reache vpon the cloudes? Tuſhe/ the cloudes couer hym that he maye not ſe/ and he dwelleth aboue heuen.

C Doeſt not thou kepe the olde waye, that vayne men haue gone? Whiche were cut downe out of tyme, and whoſe foundacyon was as a runnynge water, which ſayde vnto God: go from vs, and what dyd the almyghtye with them? He fylled theyr houſes with good thynges. But the counſayle of the vngodlye is far from me. The ryghteous ſawe it and were glad, and the innocent laughed them to ſcorne. Is our increaſe hewen downe? As for the remenaunt of them, the fyre hath conſumed it. Therfore recōcyle the vnto god, and be content, ſo ſhall all thynges proſpere with the ryght well.

D Receyue the lawe at his mouth, and laye vp his wordes in thyne herte. For * yf thou wylt turne to the almyghty, thou ſhalt ſtand faſt, and put all vnryghteouſneſſe from thy dwellynge: Thou ſhalt make golde as plentyfull as the duſt, and the golde of Ophir as the ſlyntes of the ryuers. Yea, almyghty god his owne ſelfe ſhall be thy defence, and thou ſhalt haue plentye of ſyluer. Then ſhalt thou haue delyte in the almyghtye, & lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then ſhalte thou make thy prayer vnto hym, and he ſhall heare the, and thou ſhalte kepe thy promyſes. Then, loke what thou takeſt in hande, he ſhall make it to proſpere with the, and the lyght ſhall ſhyne in thy wayes. For * who ſo humbleth hym ſelfe, hym ſhall he ſet vp: and who ſo loketh mekely, ſhall be healed. Yf thou be innocent/ thou ſhalte delyuer the countrey: bycauſe of the vngyltyneſſe of thyne handes.

CAPI. XXVIII.

A THere is a place where ſyluer is brought out of, ⁊ where golde is tryed: * where yron is dygged out of the grounde, and ſtones reſolued to metall. Deut.viii.b The darkeneſſe ſhal once come to an ende, he can ſeke out the grounde of al thynges: the ſtones, the darke, B and the ſhadowe of death.

With the ryuer of water, parteth he aſunder the ſtraunge people, that knowe no good neyghbourheade: ſoch as are rude, vnmanerly, ⁊ boyſtous. He bryngeth foode out of the earth, ⁊ that which is vnder, cōſumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whoſe ſtones are cleane Saphirs, and where the clottes of the earth are gold. There is a way alſo that the byrdes knowe not, that no vultours eye hath ſene: wherin the lyons whelpes walke not, and where no lyon cōmeth.

B There putteth he his hande vpon the ſtony rockes, & ouerthroweth the mouteynes. Ryuers flowe out of the rockes, & loke what is pleaſaunt, his eye ſeyth it. Out of droppes bryngeth he great floodes togyther, and the thyng that is hyd bryngeth he to lyght. How cōmeth a man then by wyſdome? * Where is the place that men fynde vnderſtandynge? Verely no man can tel howe worthy a thyng ſhe is, neyther is ſhe founde in the lande of ✿ them that lyue ✿, (at theyr ovvne pleaſure). The depe ſayeth: ſhe is not with me. The ſee ſayeth: ſhe is not with me. * She can not be ✿ gotten for ✿ (the mooſt pure) golde, neyther may the pryce of her be bought with any ſyluer. No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precious Onix ſtones, no Saphirs maye be compared vnto her. No, neyther golde nor Chryſtall, neyther ſwete odours nor golden plate. There is nothyng ſo worthy, or ſo excellent/ as once to be named vnto her: for perfyte wyſdome goeth far beyonde them all. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that ſawe me, ſpake good of me. For I delyuered the poore when he cryed, and ſo dyd I the fatherleſſe, & hym that had none to helpe hym.

C He that ſhulde haue ben loſte, gaue me a good worde, and the wydowes herte prayſed me. And why? ☞ I put vpon my ryghteouſneſſe, whiche couered me as a garment, and equite was my crowne. I brake the chawes of the vnryghteous man, * and plucked the ſpoyle out of his teeth. Therfore, I thought verely, that I ſhulde haue dyed in my neſt: & that my dayes ſhulde haue ben as many as the ſandes of the ſee.

When I agreed vnto theyr way I was the cheyfe, and ſat as a kynge with his armye aboute hym. And when they were in heuyneſſe, I was theyr comfortoure.

A BUt nowe they that are yonger then I/ haue me in deriſiō: yea, euen they whoſe fathers I wolde haue thought ſcorne to haue ſet with the dogges of my cattell. The power & ſtrength of theyr handes myght do me no good: for the tyme is but loſt amonge them. For very miſerye and hunger, they fled in to the wyldernesſe, a place darke, horrible and waſte, pluckynge vp nettles amonge the buſſhes, & the Ieniper rootes for theyr meate. And when they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had ben after a thefe. Theyr dwellyng was beſyde foule brokes, yea in the caues and dennes of the earth.

B Amonge the buſſhes wente they aboute cryeng, and vnder the thornes they gathered them ſelues togyther. They were the chyldren of fooles and vylaynes, which are vexed out of the worlde. * Now am I theyr ſonge, & am become theyr ieſtyng ſtocke: they abhorre me, and flee farre fro me, and ſtayne my face with ſpetle. For the Lorde hath looſed the ſtrength of my body, & brought me lowe. The brydle haue they caſt oute of my ſyghte. Upon my ryght hande ryſe the yonge men agaynſt me they haue hurte my feete, treadyng vpon me as vpon the wayes that they wolde deſtroye. My pathes haue they cleane marred. Had not my ſoule cõpaſſion vpon the poore? Yet neuertheleſſe, where as I loked for good, euyll happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for lyght, there came darkenes. My bowels ſethe within me, and take no reſt, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely and lowly come I in, Yea and without any dyſpleaſure: I ſtode vp in the congregacyon, and comuned with them. But nowe, I am a companyon of dragons, and a felowe of Eſtriches. CAPI XXXII.

A SO theſe thre men wolde ſtryue no more with Job, bycauſe he helde hym ſelfe a ryghteous man. But Elihu the ſonne of Barachel the Buſyte of the kynred of Ram, was very ſore dyſpleaſed at Job, bycauſe he called hym ſelfe iuſt before God. And with Jobs thre frendes he was angry alſo, bycauſe they had founde no reaſonable anſwere to ouercome Job. Nowe taryed Elihu, tyll they had ended theyr cõmunicacion with Job, for why, they were elder then he.

B So when Elihu the ſonne of Barachel the Buſſite ſawe, that theſe.iii.men were not able to make Job anſwere, he was myſcontente: Elihu the ſon of Barachel the Buſſite gaue anſwere hym ſelfe, and ſayd: *Conſyderyng that I am yong, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, and durſt not ſhew forth my mynd, for I thought thus within my ſelfe: It becometh olde men to ſpeake, & the aged to teache wyſdom. Euery man (no doute) hath a mynde but *it is the inſpiracion of the almyghtye that gyueth vnderſtandynge. Great men are not alway wyſe, neyther doth euery aged mã vnderſtande the thyng that is lawful. Therfore wyll I ſpeake alſo (heare me) and I wyl ſhewe you alſo myne vnderſtandynge.

Eccle.iii.b

3.Reg.iii.b and.iiii.d Eccle.i.a Jaco.i.a Prou.ii.a Dani.ii.a

C For when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of your talkynge, & herde your wyſdom what argumentes ye made in your cõmunicacyon: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye ſayde, I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynſt Job, or that directely coulde make anſwere vnto his wordes: leeſt ye ſhulde ſay, We haue founde out wyſdome: God ſhal caſt hym downe, and no man.

He hath not ſpoken vnto me, and I wyl not anſwere hym as ye haue done (for they were ſo abaſſhed, that they coulde not make anſwere, nor ſpeake one worde,) but in ſo moche as ye wyll not ſpeake, ſtandynge ſtyl lyke dombe men, and makynge no anſwere: I haue a good hope for my parte to ſhape hym an anſwere, and to ſhewe hym my meanynge. D For I am full of wordes, and the ſpirite that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, my belly is as the wyne, whiche hath no vente, and breaſteth the newe veſſels in ſunder. Therfore wyl I ſpeake that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lyppes, and make anſwere. I wyll regarde no maner of perſone, no mã wyl I ſpare. For *yf I wolde go aboute to pleaſe men, I knowe not howe ſoone my maker wolde take me awaye.

Gala.i.b

¶ Eliu ſheweth, wherin Job offendeth: with god may we not ſtryue, nor curyouſlye ſearche out his workes.

CAPI. XXXIII.

A WHerfore heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I wyll ſaye. Beholde, I haue nowe opened my mouthe, my tongue hathe ſpoken in my throte. My herte doth orde my wordes aryght, and my lyppes talke of pure wyſdome. The ſpirite Ge.ii.b of God hath made me, and * the breth of the almyghtye hath gyuen me my lyfe. If thou canſt, then gyue me anſwere: prepare thy ſelf to ſtande before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I euen as thou, for I am faſſioned and made, euen of the ſame moulde.

Therfore, thou nedeſt not to be afrayde of me, neyther nedeſt thou to feare, that my auctorite ſhall be to heuy for the.

B Nowe haſt thou ſpoken in myne eares, & I haue herde the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any faute, I am innocente, & there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pycked a quarell agaynſt me, and taketh me
Job.xiii.d. for his enemy: * he hath put my foote in the ſtockes, & loketh narowly vnto al my pathes Beholde, in this haſt thou not done ryght. I wyll make anſwere vnto the, that God is more then man. And why doeſt þ then ſtryue agaynſte hym: For he ſhall not gyue the accomptes of all his wordes. For when God doth once cōmaund a thyng, there ſhulde no mā be curyous to ſearch whyther it be ryght.

Gen.xx.a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] * In dreames and viſions of the nyghte (when ſlombrynge cometh vpon men, that they fall aſlepe in theyr beddes) he roundeth
C them in the eares, he enfourmeth them, and ſheweth them playnely, that it is he, whiche draweth man from euyll, delyuereth hym frō pryde, kepeth hym from the graue, & his lyfe from the ſwerde. He chaſteneth hym wt ſickeneſſe, and bryngeth hym to his bed: he layeth ſore punyſſhment vpon his bones, ſo that his lyfe may away with no breade, and his ſoule abhorreth to eate any dayntye meate: In ſo moche that his body is cleane conſumed away and his bones appeare no more. His life draweth on to the graue, & his lyfe to death.

Nowe yf there be a meſſenger (one among a thouſand) ſent for to ſpeake vnto man, and to ſhewe hym the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto hym, and ſayeth: He ſhall be delyuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am ſufficiently reconcyled. Then ſhall his fleſſhe be as well lykynge as it was before, and ſhall be as it was in his youth.

D For yf he ſubmyt hym ſelfe vnto god, he ſhal be gracious vnto hym, and ſhewe hym his countenaunce ioyfully, and rewardeth man for his ryghteouſnes. Suche a reſpecte hath he vnto men. Therfore, let a man confeſſe, (and ſaye) I haue offended: I dyd vnryghteouſly, and it hath done me no good. Yea, he hath delyuered my ſoule from deſtruccyon, and my lyfe ſhall ſe the lyght.

Lo, thus worketh god alwaye with man, that he kepeth his ſoule from peryſſhynge, and letteth hym enioy the light of the lyuyng Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the ſtyll, and I wyll ſpeake. But yf thou haſt any thyng to ſay, then anſwere me, & ſpeake, for thyne anſwere pleaſeth me. If thou haſt nothynge, then heare me, & holde thy tongue, ſo ſhall I teache the wyſdome.

¶ Elihu prayſeth the Juſtice of god, whiche iudgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

A Elihu proceadynge forth in his anſwere, ſayd: Heare my wordes (O ye wyſe men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderſtandynge. For the eare proueth and diſcerneth Job.xii.b the wordes, * and the mouth taſteth the meates: As for iudgemente, let vs ſeke it out amonge our ſelues, that we may knowe what is good. And why? Job hath ſayde: I am righteous, but God doth me wronge. I muſt nedes be a lyer, though my cauſe be ryght, & violently I am plaged where as I made no faute: Where is there ſuche a one as Job, that ☞ drynketh vp ſcornefulneſſe lyke water? whiche goeth in the companye of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he hath ſayd: Though a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore herken vnto me ye that haue vnderſtandynge.

B Farre be it from god, that he ſhulde medle with wyckedneſſe: and farre be it from the almyghtye, that he ſhulde medle with vnryghteous dealynge: * For he ſhall rewarde the Mat.xvi.d / Roma.ii.b workes of man, and cauſe euery mā to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For ſure it is, that Roma.iii.a * God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of the almyghtye is not vnryghteous. Who ruleth the earthe in his ſteade? Or, whom hath he ſet to gouerne the hole worlde? To whome hath he gyuen his herte, for to drawe his ſpirite and breth vnto hym? All fleſſhe ſhall come togyther vnto nought, and all men ſhall turne agayne vnto * duſt.
Gene.iii.d. / Psal.104.a

If thou nowe haue vnderſtandynge heare what I ſaye, and herken to the voyce of my wordes. Maye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryght? Or maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodly? Is it reaſon, that thou ſhuldeſt ſaye to the kynge?

C Thou arte wycked, or, thou arte vngodlye, and that before the prynces? * He hath no reſpecte vnto the perſones of the lordlye, & regardeth not the ryche more then the poore, For they be all the worke of his handes. In the twynkelynge of an eye ſhall they dye:
ii.Par.19.c / Roma.ii.b. / Ephe.vi.b. / Colloſ.iii.d / Eccle.35.b.

and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then ſhall they peryſſhe, and be taken awaye without handes. And why? his eyes loke vpon the wayes of mã, and he ſeeth all his goynges. There is no darkneſſe, nor ſhadowe of death, that can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man ſhall be ſuffred to go in to iudgement with God. Many one, yea innumerable doth he punyſſhe, and ſetteth other in theyr ſteades. Therfore ſhall he declare theyr workes, he ſhal turne the nyght and they ſhall be deſtroyed. They that were in the ſteade of Sears, delte lyke vngodlye men: and therfore he punyſhed them, bycauſe they turned backe from hym, and wolde not conſydre al his wayes. In ſo moche that they haue cauſed the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, & nowe he heareth the complaynte of ſuche as are in trouble.

Job.xxxi.a. Prouer. v.d

D If he graunt pardon, who wyl condemne? And yf he hyde away his countenaunce, who ſhalbe able to ſe it? whyther it be to the peple or to any man, thus wyl he do: for the vngodlyneſſe of the people, doth god make an ypocrite to reygne ouer them. For ſo moche then as I haue begon to talke of God, I wyll not hyndre the.

If I haue gone amyſſe, enfourme thou me yf I haue done wrong, I wyll leaue of. Can he do nothynge without the? for thou haſt reproued his iudgement, Thou alſo haſt thyne owne mynde and not I. But ſpeake on what thou knoweſt. Let men of vnderſtandyng tel me, and let a wyſe man herken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neyther ſpoken to the purpoſe nor wiſely. O father, let Job be wel tryed bycauſe he hath anſwered for wycked men: yea aboue his ſynne he doth wyckedly: triumpheth among vs, and multiplieth his wordes agaynſt god.

¶ Neyther doth godlyneſſe profyte, nor vngodlyneſſe hurte to god, but to man.

CAPI. XXXV.

A ELihu ſpake moreouer, and ſayd: Thynkeſt thou it ryght, that thou ſayeſt: I am ryghteous before god? For thou ſayeſt: What aduauntage wyll it be vnto the, and what profyte ſhalte thou haue of my ſynne. Therfore wyll I gyue anſwere vnto the and to thy companyons with the: loke vnto the heuen, and beholde it: conſydre the cloudes, whiche are hygher then thou.

B If thou haſt ſynned, what haſt thou done agaynſt hym? If thyne offences be many, what haſt thou done vnto hym? If thou be ryghteous, what gyueſt thou hym? Or what wyll he receyue of thy hande? Of ſuche an vngodly perſone as thou, and of the ſon of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendeſt to be there is a greate crye and complaynte made by them that are oppreſſed with violence, yea euery man complayneth vpon the crueltye of tyrauntes. For ſuch a one neuer ſayth: where is god that made me? and that gyueth vs occaſyon to prayſe hym in the nyght? whiche gyueth vs more vnderſtandynge then he doth the beaſtes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then he doth the foules of heuen.

C If any ſuche complayne, no man gyueth anſwere, and that bycauſe of the wyckednes of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, doth he not heare hym? Doth he not the almyghty accepte his crye? When thou ſpeakeſt, then ſhulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy ſelfe before hym, and put thy truſte in hym? Then vſeth he no violence in his wrath, neyther hath he pleaſure in curious & depe inquiſicions. Therfore doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and folyſſhly doth he make ſo many wordes.

¶ Elihu ſheweth wherfore god punyſſheth, and correcteth.

CAPI XXXVI.

A ELihu proceded forth in his talkyng, and ſayd: Holde the ſtyll a lytell, and I ſhall ſhewe the, what I haue yet to ſpeake on Gods behalfe. I wyl open vnto the yet more of myne vnderſtandyng, and proue my matter ryghteous. And truely my wordes ſhall not be vayne, ſeynge he is with the that is perfyte in knowledge: beholde, the great god caſteth awaye no man, for he hym ſelfe is myghtye in power and wyſdome. As for the vngodly, he ſhall not preſerue hym, but ſhal helpe the poore to theyr ryght. He ſhall turne his eyes awaye from the ryghteous, but as kynges ſhall they be in theyr trone, he ſhall ſtablyſſhe them for euer, and they ſhall be exalted. But yf they be layde in pryſon and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyll he ſhewe them theyr worke, and the ſynnes, wherewith they haue vſed cruell vyolence.

B He with punyſſhynge and nurturyng of them, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wyckedneſſe, and to amende. * If they nowe wyll take hede & ſerue hym, they ſhall weare out theyr dayes in proſperite, and theyr yeres in pleaſure and ioye. But yf they wyll not herken, they ſhall go thorowe the ſwerde, and peryſſhe, or euer they be aware. As for ſuche as be fayned ypocrites, they ſhall heape vp wrathe for them ſelues: for they call not vpon hym, though they be his pryſoners.

Thus ſhal theyr ſoule peryſſhe in folyſſhnes and theyr lyfe ſhal be condemned among the fornicatours. The poore ſhall he delyuer out of his affliccion, and rounde them in the eare when they be in trouble. Euen ſo ſhal he kepe the (yf thou wylte be contente) from the bottomleſſe pyt that is beneth: and yf thou wylt holde the quyete, he ſhall fyll thy table with plenteouſneſſe.

C Neuertheleſſe, thou haſt condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea euen ſuche a iudgement, and ſentence ſhalte thou ſuffre. For then ſhall not thy cauſe be ſtylled with crueltye, nor pacified with many gyftes. Thynkeſt thou, that he wyll regarde thy ryches? he ſhall not care for golde, nor for all them that excell in ſtrengthe. Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll there come a nyght for the to ſet other people in thy ſteade. But beware that thou turne not aſyde to wyckedneſſe and ſynne, whiche hytherto thou haſt choſen more then mekeneſſe. Beholde, god is of a myghty hygh power: Where is ſuche a gyde and lawgyuer as he? Who wyll reproue hym of his waye? Who wyll ſaye vnto hym: thou haſte done wronge.

D O conſydre howe great and excellent his workes be, whom all men loue and prayſe: yea wondre at hym, and yet they ſe hym but a far of. Beholde, ſo great is God, that he paſſeth our knowledge, neyther are we able to come to the experience of his yeares. [illegible] 11.b [illegible] ibid. * He turneth the water to ſmall droppes. He dryueth his cloudes togyther for to rayne, ſo that they powre downe and droppe vpon men. He can ſprede out the cloudes (a coueryng of his tabernacle) and cauſe his lyght to ſhyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of the ſee. By theſe thynges gouerneth he his people, and gyueth them aboundaunce of meate. With the cloudes he hydeth the lyghte, and at his cōmaundement it cometh agayne. The ryſynge vp therof ſheweth he to his frendes, and to the cattell.

CAPI. XXXVII.

A AT this, my herte is aſtonyed, & moued out of his place. Heare then the ſounde of his voyce, and the noyſe that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thyng vnder the heuen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roryng voyce followeth hym: for his glorious maieſty gyueth ſuche a thonderclap, that (though a man here it) yet may he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horryble ſounde, when God ſendeth out his voyce: greate thynges doth he, whiche we can not comprehende. * When he commaundeth the ſnowe, it falleth vpon the earthe. Psal.147.b As ſoone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the ſhowres haue theyr ſtrengthe, and fall downe. He ſendeth feare vpon euery mā, that they myght know theyr owne workes.

B The beaſtes crepe into theyr dennes, and take theyr reſt. Out of the ſouth cometh the tempeſt, & colde out of the north. At the breth of God, the froſt cometh, and the waters are ſhed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr laboure in gyuynge moyſtneſſe, and agayne with his lyght, he dryueth away the cloude. He diſtributeth alſo on euery ſyde, accordyng as it pleaſeth hym to deale oute his workes, that they may do, what ſoeuer he cōmaūdeth them thorowe the hole worlde: whyther it be to punyſſhe any lande, or to do good vnto them, that ſeke hym.

C Herken vnto this (O Job) ſtande ſtyl, and conſydre the wonderous workes of god. Arte thou of counſel with god, when he doth theſe thynges? When he cauſeth the lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Arte thou of his counſel when he ſpredeth out the cloudes? Haſt thou the perfyte knowledge of his wonders? and howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is ſtyl thorowe the South wynde? Haſt thou helped hym to ſprede out the heuen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were caſt of cleare metall? Teache vs what we ſhall ſay vnto hym for we are vnmete bycauſe of darkneſſe.

D Shall it be tolde hym what I ſay? Shuld a man ſpeake, or ſhulde he kepe it backe? For euery man ſeeth not the lyght, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes which he clenſeth when he maketh the wynde to blowe.

Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayſe and honoure of Goddes feare cometh from God hym ſelfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equite and ryghteouſnes, he is hygher then can be expreſſed. Let men therfore feare hym, for there ſhall no man ſe hym that is wyſe in his owne conceyte.

¶ The wonders and marueils that the Lorde hath done from the begynnynge.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

A THen anſwered the Lorde vnto Job out of the ſtorme, and ſayd: What is he that hydeth his mynde with folyſſhe wordes? * Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I wyl Job.31.a queſtion with the, ſe thou gyue me a directe anſwere. Where waſt thou, when I layde the foundacions of the earth? Tell playnely, yf thou haſt vnderſtandynge.

who hath meaſured it, knoweſt thou? Or, who hath ſpred the lyne vpon it? wherupon ſtande the pyllers of it? Or, who layde the corner ſtone therof? Where waſt thou, when the ſterres prayſed me togyther, and all the chyldren of god reioyſed triumphauntly? Job.xxvi.a Jere.v.d Pſal.ciii.b * Who ſhut the ſee with dores, when it brake forthe as a chylde out of the mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a coueryng for it, and ſwadled it with the darke? when I gaue it my cõmaundement, makynge dores and barres for it, ſayenge.

B Hytherto ſhalte thou come, but no further, and there ſhalte thou laye downe thy prowde and hygh waues. Haſt thou gyuen the mornyng his charge (aſſoone as thou waſt borne) and ſhewed the daye ſprynge his place, that it myght take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly myght be ſhaken out? Theyr tokens and weapons are turned lyke clay, and ſet vp agayne as the chaungyng of a garment. The vngodly ſhall be diſapoynted of theyr lyght, and the arme of the prowde ſhall be broken. Cameſt thou euer in to the grounde of the ſee: or walkedſt in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or haſt thou ſene the dores of the ſhadowe of death? Haſt thou alſo perceyued howe brode the earthe is? If thou haſt knowledge of all this, then ſhewe me, where lyght dwelleth, and where darknes is: that ỹ mayſt brynge vs vnto theyr quarters, yf thou canſt tell the way to theyr houſes.

C Kneweſt thou (before thou waſt borne) howe olde thou ſhuldeſt be? Wenteſt thou euer in to the treaſuries of the ſnowe, or haſt ỹ ſene the ſecret places of the hayle, Eccli.xl.c Joſua.x.c * which I haue prepared agaynſt the tyme of trouble, agaynſt the tyme of battayle and warre? By what way is the lyght parted, and in to what lande breaketh the Eaſt wynde? Who deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenynge and thondre, that it watereth ỹ moyſteneth the drye and barayne grounde: to make the graſſe growe in places where no bodye dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no mã remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or, who hath begotten the droppes of dew? Out of whoſe wombe came the yſe? Who hath engendred the coldneſſe of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as ſtones, and lye congeled aboue the depe. Wylte thou bynde the ſweete influences of the ſeuen ſterres? Or arte thou able to breake the circle of heuen? D Canſt thou brynge forth the mornynge ſterre, or the euenynge ſterre at conuenient tyme, & conuey them home agayne? Knoweſt thou the courſe of heuen, that thou mayeſt ſet vp the ordinaunce therof vpon the earth? Moreouer, canſt thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they may powre downe a great rayne vpon the?

Canſt thou thondre alſo that they may go theyr way, and be obedient vnto the, ſayenge: Lo here are we? Who gyueth ſure wyſdom, or ſtedfaſt vnderſtandyng? Who nombreth the cloudes in wyſdom? Who ſtylleth the vehement waters of the heuen? Who turneth the clottes to duſt, & then to be clottes agayne? Wylte thou hunte the pray from the lyon, or fede his whelpes lyenge in theyr dennes, and lurkyng in theyr couches? Who * prouideth meate for the rauen, when his yong ones crye vnto god, and flye aboute for lacke of meate? Pſal.cxlvi.

¶ God ſpeaketh vnto Job ſhewynge hym by the example of his worckes, that his ryghteouſnes is vnſearchable.

CAPI. XXXIX.

KNoweſt thou the tyme when the wylde gootes brynge forth theyr yong, amonge the ſtony rockes? Or layeſt thou wayte when the hyndes vſe to fawne? Rekeneſt thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knoweſt the tyme of theyr bearynge? or when they lye downe, when they caſt theyr yonge ones, and when they are delyuered of theyr trauayle and payne? Howe theyr yonge ones growe vp, and waxe great thorowe good fedynge? when they go forth, and returne not agayne vnto them? Who letteth the wylde Aſſe go free, or who lowſeth the bondes of the mule? Euen I whiche haue gyuen the wyldernesſe to be theyr houſe, and the vntyled lande to be theyr dwellynge place. A

B That they may gyue no force for the multitude of people in the cities, neyther regarde the crienge of the dryuer: but ſeke theyr paſture aboute the mountaynes, and folowe the grene graſſe. Wyl the vnicorne be ſo tame as to do the ſeruyce, or to abyde ſtyl by thy crybbe? Canſt thou bynde the yocke aboute the vnicorne in thy forowe, to make hym plowe after the in the valleys? Mayſt thou truſt hym (becauſe he is ſtronge) or commyt thy labour vnto hym? Mayſt thou beleue hym, that he wyll brynge home thy corne, or to carye any thynge vnto thy barne? * Gaueſt thou the fayre wynges vnto the Pecockes, or wynges and fethers vnto the Eſtryche? for he leaueth his egges in the earth & layeth them in the duſt. He remembreth not, that they myght be troden with fete, or broken with ſome wylde beaſt. So harde is he vnto his yonge ones, as though they were not his, and laboureth in vayne without any feare.

And

C And that bycauſe god hath taken wyſdom from hym, and hath not gyuen hym vnderſtandynge. When his tyme is that he flyeth vp on hygh, he careth neyther for horſe nor man. Haſt thou gyuen the horſe his ſtrength or lerned hym to bowe downe his necke with feare: that he letteth hym ſelfe be dryuẽ forth lyke a greſhopper, where as the ſtoute neyng that he maketh is fearfull? he breaketh the grounde with the hoofes of his fete chearefully in his ſtrengthe, and runneth to mete the harneſt men. He layeth aſyde all feare, his ſtomake is not abated, neyther ſtarteth he abacke for any ſwerde. Though the quyuers ratle vpon him, though the ſpeare and ſhelde glyſtre: yet ruſſheth he in fearſly, and beateth vpon the grounde. D He feareth not the noyſe of the trompettes, but as ſoone as he heareth the ſhawlmes blowe, tuſſhe (ſayth he) for he ſmelleth the battayle a farre of, the noyſe of the captaynes and the ſhoutynge.

Cometh it thorowe thy wyſdome, that the Goſhauke flyeth towarde the South? Doth the Egle mounte vp, and make his neſt on hygh at thy cõmaundement? He abydeth in the ſtony rockes, and vpon the hygh toppes of harde mountaynes, where no mã can come from thence ſeketh he his praye, and loketh farre aboute with his eyes. His yonge ones are fed with bloode: * and where any deade body lyeth, there is he immediatly. ath.24.

¶ Job humbleth hym ſelfe vnto god. The deſcrypcyon of Behemoth, and Leuiathan.

CAPI. XL.

A Moreouer the lorde ſpake vnto Job, and ſayde: Can he that ſtryueth with the almyghtie, be at reſt? Shulde not he which dyſputeth with God, gyue hym an anſwere? Job anſwered the Lorde, ſayenge. Beholde, I am to vyle a perſone, to anſwere the, therfore wyll I lay my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twyſe haue I ſpoken, but I wyll ſaye no more. Then anſwered the lorde vnto Job out of the ſtorme, and ſayde: *Gyrde vp thy loynes nowe lyke a man, and tell me the thynges that I wyll aſke the. Wylte thou diſanul my iudgement? Or wylt thou condemne me, that thou thy ſelfe mayſt be made ryghteous? Is thy power then lyke the power of God? Maketh thy voyce ſuche a ſounde as his doth? ob.38.

B Then arme thy ſelfe with thyne owne power vp, decke the in thy ioly araye, powre out the indignacion of thy wrathe: ſe that thou caſte downe all the proude, loke wel, that thou makeſt all ſuche as be ſtubburne, to obey: treade downe all the vngodly in theyr place, caſte them downe into the duſt, & couer theyr faces with darkenes: Then wyll I cõfeſſe vnto the alſo, that thyne owne ryght hande ſhall ſaue the. Beholde, the beaſt Behemoth (whom I made with the) whiche eateth haye as an oxe: Lo, howe ſtronge is he in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauel of his bodye C He ſpredeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tre, all his vaynes are ſtyffe. His ſhynnes are lyke pipes of braſſe, his ryg bones are lyke ſtaues of yron. Fyrſt, when God made hym, he ordeyned the wyldernesſe for hym, that the mountaynes ſhulde gyue hym graſſe, where all the beaſtes of the felde take theyr paſtyme. He lyeth amonge the redes in the Moſſes, the fennes hyde hym with theyr ſhadowe, & the wyllowes of the broke couer hym rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour myght he drynke out of the hole floode and ſup of Jordane without any trauayle.

Who dare laye hande vpon hym openly, and vndertake to catche hym? Or, who dare put an hoke thorowe his noſe, and lay a ſnare for hym? A No man is ſo cruell, that is able to ſtyrre hym vp. * Who is able to ſtande before me? Or *who hath gyuen me any thing before hande, that I maye rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heuen are myne. Ierem.1.a. Roma.11.d. I fere hym not, whither he threaten or ſpeake fayre. Who lifteth hym vp, and ſtrypeth hym out of his clothes, or who taketh hym by the byt of his brydle? Who openeth the dore of his face? for he hath horryble teeth rounde aboute. B His body is couered with ſcales as it were with ſheldes locked in, kepte, and well compacte togyther.

One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon an other, and stycketh so together, that they can not be sundred. His nesynge is lyke a glisterynge fyre, and his eyes lyke the mornynge shyne. Out of his mouth go torches, & out of his nose thyrles there goth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sethynge pot. His breth maketh the coales burne, and the flambe goth out of his mouth. In his necke remayneth strength, & nothynge is to laborous for hym.

C The membres of his body are ioyned so strayte one to an other, and cleue so fast together, that he can not be moued. His herte is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the styddye that the smyth smyteth vpon. When he goth, the myghtie are afrayde, and feare troubleth them. If any man drawe out a swerde at hym, it shall not hurte hym: there may neyther speare, iauelyn, nor brest plate abyde hym. He setteth as moche by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by brasse.

D He flyeth not awaye for hym that bendeth the bowe: and as for slynge stones, he careth as moch for stubble as for them. He counteth the hamer no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scorne that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in the myre lyke the sharpe pot sherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and styrreth the see together lyke an oyntment. He maketh a path to be sene after hym, the depe is his walkynge place. Vpon earth is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consyder all hygh thynges, this same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

C The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and hys goodes are restored to hym double.

CAPI. XLII.

A Then Job answered the Lorde, and sayde: * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought hyd from the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therfore haue I spoken that I vnderstode not, the thynges that are to hygh, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answere vnto the thynge that I wyll aske the. I haue geuen diligent care vnto the, and now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I geue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in the dust and asshes.

B Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuned, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphas the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thynge that is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. Therfore take ye nowe seuen oxen and seuen rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, and * offer vp for youre selues a burnt offerynge: and my seruaunt Job shal pray for you. Hym wyll I accepte, and not deale with you after youre folyshnesse, in that ye haue not spoken the thynge whiche is ryghte, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

C So Eliphas the Themanite, and Bildad the Suhite and Sophar the Naamathite went theyr waye, and dyd accordynge as the Lorde commaunded them. * The lorde also accepted the persone of Job, & the lorde turned the captiuitie of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Yea the Lorde gaue Job * twyse as moche as he had before. And then came there vnto hym all his brethren, all his systers, and all they that had bene of his acquayntaunce before, and dyd eate breade with hym in his house, wonderynge at hym, and comfortynge hym ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Euery man also gaue hym a certayne summe of money, and a Juell of golde.

D And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene thousande shepe, syx thousand camels, a thousand yocke of Oxen, and a thousande asses.

E He had seuen sonnes also and thre doughters. The fyrst doughter called he Jemima, the seconde Kezia, and the thyrde Keren hapuch. In all the lande were no women founde so fayre, as the doughters of Job, & theyr father gaue them enheritaunce amonge theyr brethren. After this lyued Job an hundreth and fourtye yere, so that he sawe * his chyldren, and his chyldrens chyldren vnto the fourth generacion. And so Job dyed, beynge olde and of a perfyte age.

Eze.xvii.?

B The voice of the Lorde is myghtye in operacyon, the voyce of the Lorde is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the *Cedre trees: yee the Lorde breaketh the Ceders of Libanus. He made them alſo to ſkyppe lyke a Calfe: Libanus alſo, and Sirion like a yong vnycorne. The voyce of the Lorde deuydeth the flames of fyre: the voice of the Lorde ſhaketh the wyldernesse, yee the Lorde ſhaketh the wyldernesse of Cades. The voyce of the Lord maketh the hyndes to bryng forth yonge and dyſcouereth the thycke buſſhes: and in hys temple doth euery man ſpeke of his honoure. The Lorde ſitteth aboue the water floude, and the Lorde remayneth a kyng for euer. The Lorde ſhal geue ſtrẽgth vnto his people, the Lorde ſhall bleſſe hys his people in peace.

Luke.23.f. Actes.7.g.

B I haue hated them that holde of ſuperſticious vanities / and my truſte hathe bene in the Lorde. I wyll be glad and reioyſe in thy mercy: for thou haſte cõſydred my trouble, and haſte knowen my ſoule in aduerſyte. A

I Wayted pacyently for the Lorde, and he enclyned vnto me: and hearde my callynge. He brought me alſo out of the horrible pytte, out of the myre and claye, and ſette my fete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goynges. And he hathe put a newe ſonge in my mouth, euen a thankeſgeuynge vnto oure God. Many ſhall ſe it, and feare, and ſhall put theyr truſt in the Lorde *Bleſſed is the man, that hathe ſet his hope in the Lorde and turned not vnto the proude, and to ſuche as go aboute with lyes. O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderous workes whiche thou haſte done: lyke as be alſo thy thoughtes whiche are to vs warde: and yet there is no man ☞ that ordreth them vnto the.

I haue declared thy ryghteouſneſſe in the greate congregacyon: Lo, I wyll nat refrayne my lyppes, O Lord, and that thou knoweſt. I haue nat hyd thy rygtuouſnes within my herte, my talkyng hathe ben of thy trueth and of thy ſaluacyon

I haue not kepte backe thy louyng mercy, & trueth from the great congregacion. Withdraw nat thou thy mercy fro me O Lorde, let thy louynge kyndneſſe and thy trueth alwaye preſerue me, For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my ſynnes haue taken ſuche holde vpon me, that I am nat able to loke vp: yee they are mo in nombre then the heares of my hede, and my hert hath fayled me. O Lorde, let it be thy pleaſure to delyuer me, make haſte (O Lorde) to helpe me

Let them be aſhamed and confoūded togyther that ſeke after my ☞ ſoule to deſtroye it: let them fal backewarde and be put to rebuke, that wiſhe me euyll. Let them be deſolate & rewarded wͭ ſhame, that ſaye vnto me, fye vpon the, fy vpon the. Let al thoſe that ſeke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let ſuche as loue thy ſaluacyon, ſay alway: the Lorde be prayſed. HEare my prayer (O God) and hyde not thy ſelfe fro my peticyon. Take hede vnto me and heare me, howe I mourne in my prayer and am vexed.

The enemye cryeth ſo, and the vngodly commeth on ſo faſt: for they are mynded to do me ſome myſchefe, ſo maliciouſly are they ſet agaynſte me. B My herte is diſquyeted within me, and the feare of deathe is fallen vpon me. Fearefulnes and tremblynge are come vpon me, & an horryble drede hath ouerwhelmed me. And I ſayde: O that I had wynges lyke a doue, for thē wold I flye awaye, and be at reſte. Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, & remayne in the wilderneſſe. Sela. I wolde make haſte to eſcape, becauſe of the ſtormy winde and tempeſt. Deſtroy theyr tonges (O Lorde) and * deuyde them, for I haue ſpyed vnryghteouſnes and ſtryfe in the cytye. Gene.xi.b. Daye and night go they about within the walles therof, miſchefe alſo, and ſorowe are in the myddeſt of it. Wyckedneſſe is therin, dyſceyte and gyle go not out of her ſtretes.

C For it is nat an open enemy that hath done me this diſhonoure: for then I coulde haue borne it: neither was it min aduerſary, that dyd magnyfy him ſelfe agaynſt me: for then * (paraduenture) I wolde haue hyd my ſelfe from hī. * But it was euen thou my companion, my gide & myne owne familier frende. Pſal.xl.c. Joh.xiii.b.

We toke ſwete councell togyther & walked in the houſe of God as frendes. Let death come haſtely vpon them, and let them go downe quycke into hell, for wyckednes is in theyr dwellynges, and amonge them.

As for me, I wyll call vnto God, and the Lorde ſhall ſaue me. Euenynge / and mornyng and at noone day wyl I pray (and that inſtantly) and he ſhall heare my voyce.

It is he that hath delyuered my ſoule in peace, from the batel that was agaynſt me: for there were many wt me. Yee euen God ŷ endureth for euer, ſhal here me, and bryng them downe. Sela. LORDE, thou haſte bene oure refuge from one generacyon to another.

Before the mountaynes were broughte forthe / or euer the earthe and the worlde were made thou arte God from euerlaſtynge and worlde without ende.

Thou cauſeſt man to returne vnto contrycion. Agayne, thou ſayeſt: come agayne ye chyldren of men. *For a thouſande yeares in thy ſyghte are but as yeſtardaye / ſeinge that is paſt as a watch in the nyght. b.Cor.7.a. 2.Pet.3.b.

As ſone as thou ſcatreſt them, they are euen as a ſlepe, and fade away ſodenly lyke the graſſe. B In the mornynge it is grene and groweth vp, but in the euenynge it is cut downe* (dryed vp) and wythered. * For we conſume awaye in thy diſpleaſure, and are afrayed at thy wrathfull indignacyon.

Thou haſte ſet oure myſdedes before the, and our ſecrete ſynnes in the lyght of thy countenaunce. For when thou arte angrye, all oure dayes are gone: we brynge our yeares to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde. The dayes of oure age are thre ſcore yeares and ten: and though men be ſo ſtronge that they come to foure ſcore yeares, yet is theyr ſtrength then but laboure and ſorowe: ſo ſoone paſſeth it awaye, and we are gone. ' But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, C for euen therafter as a man feareth, ſo is thy dyſpleaſure. Pſal.39.a. *O teach vs, to nombre oure dayes, that we maye applye oure hertes vnto wyſdome.

Turne the agayne (O Lorde) at the laſte, and be gracyous vnto thy ſeruauntes. O ſatyſfye vs with thy mercy, and that ſoone: ſo ſhall we reioyſe and be glad al the dayes of oure lyfe. Comforte vs agayne, nowe after the tyme that thou haſte plaged vs, and for the yeares wherin we haue ſuffred aduerſyte. Shewe thy ſeruauntes thy worke, and theyr chyldren thy glory. And the gloryous maieſty of the Lorde oure God be vpon vs: proſpere thou the worcke of oure handes vpon vs, O proſpere thou oure handy worcke.

¶ Prayſe the Lorde.

O Geue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracyous, and his mercy endureth for euer. Who can expreſſe the noble actes of the Lorde, or ſhewe forth al his prayſe. Bleſſed are they that allwaye kepe iudgement, and do ryghteouſnes. Remembre me, O Lorde, accordinge to the fauour that thou beareſt vnto thy people, O vyſet me with thy ſaluacyon. That I maye ſe the felycyte of thy choſen, & reioyſe in the gladneſſe of thy people, and geue thankes with thyne enheritaunce. We haue ſynned with oure fathers, we haue done amyſſe, and dealte wyckedly. Oure fathers regarded nat thy wonders in Egypte, nether kepte they thy greate goodneſſe in remembraūce: but were dyſſobedient at the ſee, euen at the reed ſee. Neuertheles, he helped them for hys names ſake, that he myght make hys power to be knowne. *He rebuked the reed ſee alſo, and it was dryed vp: ſo he led them thorowe the depe as thorowe a wylderneſſe. And he ſaued them from the aduerſaryes hande, and delyuered them from the hande of the enemye. *As for thoſe that troubled them, the waters ouer whelmed them, there was nat one of them lefte.

*Then beleued they his wordes, and ſange prayſe vnto hym. But within a whyle they forgat his workes, and wolde nat abyde his councell. But luſte came vpon them in the wylderneſſe, and they tempted God in the deſerte. And he gaue them theyr deſyre, and ſent leaneſſe withall in to theyr ſoule. They angred Moyſes alſo in the tentes, and Aaron the ſayncte of the Lorde. *So the earth opened, and ſwalowed vp Dathan, and couered the congregacyon of Abyram. And the fyre was kyndled in theyr company, the flame brente vp the vngodly. *They made a calfe in Horeb, and worſhipped the molten ymage.

*Thus they turned theyr glory in to the ſimilytude of a calfe, that eateth haye.

And they forgat God theyr Sauioure, which had done ſo great thynges ī Egypte.

Wonderous workes in the lande of Ham, and fearful thinges by the reed ſee. So he ſayde he wolde haue deſtroyed thē, had nat Moſes his choſen ſtande before hym in that gappe: to turne awaye his wrathful indignacyon, leſte he ſhulde deſtroye them.

¶ The Boke of the Preacher/ otherwyſe called Eccleſiaſtes.

¶ All that is in this worlde is vanytee.

CAPITVLO. I.

A These are the wordes of the Preacher, the ſonne of Dauid, kynge of Ieruſalem. * All is but vanyte (ſayeth the Preacher) al is but playne vanyte. For what els hath a mā of all the labour that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generacyon paſſeth awaye/ another commeth, but the earth abydeth ſtyll. The Sunne aryſeth, the ſunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he maye there ryſe vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and fetcheth his compaſe aboute vnto the North, and ſo turneth in to hym ſelfe agayne. B * All floudes runne in to the ſee, and yet the ſee is nat fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe agayne. All thynges are ſo harde, that no man can expreſſe thē. * The eye is nat ſatiſfyed with ſyght, the eare is nat fylled with hearynge. * The thynge that hathe bene, commeth to paſſe agayne, & the thynge that hathe bene done, is done agayne, there is no newe thing vnder the Sunne. Is there any thing wherof it may be ſayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue bene before vs. The thyng ŷ is paſt, is out of remembraūce, Eue ſo the thinges that are for to come/ ſhal nomore be thought vpon amōge them that come after. C I my ſelfe the Preacher, was kynge of Iſrael at Ieruſalem, and dyd applye my mynde to ſeke out and ſearch for the knowledge of al thynges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle & labour hath god geuen vnto ☞ the chyldrē of men, to exercyſe them ſelues therin.

Thus I haue cōſydred all ŷ thynges that come to paſſe vnder the Sūne, and lo, they are al but vanyte, and vexacion of mynde. D The croked can nat be made ſtreyght, and the fautes can nat be nombred. I cōmoned with myne owne herte, ſaying: lo, I am come to a greate eſtate, & haue gotten more wyſdome, then all they that haue bene before me in Ieruſalem. Yee my herte had greate experience of wyſdome and knowledge, for therevnto I applyed my mynde: that I myght knowe what were wyſdome & vnderſtādīg, what what were errour and foliſhnes. And I perceaued that thys was but a vexacyon of mynde: for where muche wyſdome is, there is alſo great trauaile and diſquyetnes: and the more knowledge a man hathe, the more is hys care.

¶ Aboundaunce of rycheſſe, of pleaſure and of buyldynge are vayne thynges.

CAP. II.

A Then ſayde I thus in my herte: Nowe go to, I wyl take myne eaſe and haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanite alſo: in ſo muche that I ſayde vnto laughter: thou arte mad, and to myrthe: what doeſt thou? So I thought in my herte, to withdrawe my fleſhe from wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wyſdome, and to comprehende foliſhneſſe vntyll the tyme that (amonge all the thynges whiche are vnder the Sunne) I myght ſe what were beſte for men to do, ſo long as they lyue vnder heauen. 3.R.4.c. * I made gorgyous fayre worckes. B I buylded me houſes, and planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardēs of pleaſure, and planted trees in them of all maner fruites. 4.Re.4.9. ‡ I made pooles of water, to water the grene and frutefull trees withall. I boughte ſeruauntes and maydens, and had a greate houſholde. As for catell and ſhepe / I had more ſubſtaunce of them / then all they that were before me in Ieruſalē. I gathered ſyluer & golde together / euen a treaſure of kynges and landes. I prouyded me ſyngers & wemen, whiche coulde playe of inſtrumentes to make men myrth and paſtyme. I gat me pſalteries and ſonges of muſycke. And I was greater and in more worſhype, then all my predeceſſours in Ieruſalem.

For wyſdome remained with me: and loke whatſoeuer myne eyes deſyred, I let them haue it: and wherin ſoeuer my hert delyted, or had any pleaſure, I withhelde it nat frō it. Thus my hert reioyſed in all that I dyd, & this was my porcyon of all my trauayle. But when I conſydered all the worckes that my handes had wrought, and al the labour that I had taken therin: lo all was but vanite and vexacyon of mynde, and nothynge C of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to conſydre wyſdome, errour, and folyſhneſſe (for what is he among men, that myght be compared to me the kyng in ſuch worckes?) and I ſawe that wyſdome excelleth folyſhneſſe, as farre as lyghte dothe darckeneſſe. For a wyſe man hath hys eyes in his head but the foole goeth ī the darckeneſſe. I perceaued alſo, that they bothe had one ende. Then thought I in my mynde: yf it happen vpon the foole as it dothe vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny more for wyſdome? So I confeſſed within my hert, that this alſo was but vanyte. For the wyſe are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the folyſh, and al the dayes for to come ſhal D be forgotten, yee the wiſe man dyeth as wel as the foole. Thus beganne I to be wery of my lyfe, in ſo muche that I coulde away with nothing that is done vnder the Sunne for all was but vanyte and vexacyon of mynde: Yee I was wery of all my labour, whiche I had taken vnder the Sunne becauſe I ſhulde be fayne to leaue them vnto another man that commeth after me. And who knoweth, whether he ſhall be a wyſe man or a foole? And yet ſhall he be Lorde of all my labours / whiche I with ſuche wyſdome haue takē vnder the Sunne. This is alſo a vayne thynge. So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from all ſuche trauayle / as I toke vnder the Sunne: for ſo muche as a man ſhulde wery hym ſelfe with wyſdome, with vnderſtandynge and oportunyte, and yet be fayne to leaue hys labours vnto another that neuer ſwet for them.

This is alſo a vaine thyng and greate myſery. For what getteth a mā of all ye laboure and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heuyneſſe, ſorowe & diſquyetnetnes all the dayes of his lyfe? In ſo muche that his herte can nat reſte in the nyght, this is alſo a vayne thynge? Eccle.b.b. * Is it nat better then for a mā to eate and drynke, and his ſoule to be mery in his labour? Yee, I ſawe that thys alſo was a gyfte of God: For who wyll eate or go more luſtely to his worke then I? And why? he geueth vnto mā, what it pleaſeth him: whether it be wyſdome, vnderſtādyng, or gladneſſe. But vnto the ſynner he geueth werynes a (and ſuperfluous care) that he may gather & heape to gether ye thynge, that afterwarde ſhalbe geuē vnto him, whō it pleaſeth God. This is nowe a vayne thyng, yee a very diſquietneſſe and vexacyon of mynde.

CAPI. III.

¶ Al thynges come ī theyr tyme, & paſſe away in theyr tyme.

Euery thynge hathe a tyme, yee all that A is vnder the heauen, hathe his conuenyente ſeaſon. There is a time to be borne, & a tyme to dye. There is a tyme to plāte, and a tyme to plucke vp the thynge, that is planted. A tyme to ſlaye, & a tyme to make whole. A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to buylde vp. A tyme to wepe, & a tyme to laugh. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunſe. A tyme to caſte awaye ſtones, and a tyme to gather ſtones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracing. B A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to leſe. A tyme to ſpare, and a tyme to ſpende. A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to ſowe together. Eccle.20.a [illegible] ‡ A tyme to kepe ſylence, and a tyme to ſpeake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. A tyme of warre / and a tyme of peace. What hathe a man elles (that doth anythynge) but weryneſſe and laboure?

For as touchynge the trauayle and carefulneſſe whiche God hathe geuen vnto men, I ſe that he hathe geuen it them, to be exerciſed in it. All this hathe he ordayned marueılous goodly: to euery thynge his due tyme. He hathe planted ignoraunce alſo in the hertes of men, that they ſhulde nat cõprehende the grounde of hys workes / whiche he doth from the begynnyng to the ende. C So I perceyued, that in theſe thĩges there is nothing better for a man, then to be mery and to do well ſo longe as he lyueth. For al that a man eateth & drynketh, yea what ſo euer a man enioyeth of all his laboure / that ſame is a gyfte of God: I conſyder alſo that what ſoeuer God dothe, it continueth for euer, and that nothynge can be put vnto it, nor taken from it: and that God doth it to Eccle.1.b. the intent, that men ſhulde feare him. ‡ The thynge that hathe bene, is nowe: and the thynge that is for to come, hathe bene afore tyme, for God reſtoreth agayne the thynge that was paſte. More ouer, I ſawe vnder the Sunne vngodlyneſſe in the ſteade of iudgement and iniquyte in ſteade of ryghtuouſneſſe. Then thought I in my mynde God ſhall ſeperate the ryghtuous from the D vngodly, and then ſhalbe the tyme and iudgement of al councels and workes. I commoned with myne owne herte alſo, concernynge the chyldren of men: Howe God hath choſen them, and yet letteth them appere: as though they were beaſtes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beaſtes, and as the one dyeth, ſo dieth the other: yea they haue bothe one maner of breth: ſo ỹ (in this) a man hathe no preemynence aboue a beaſt but all are ſubdued vnto vanytye. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of Sapi.2.a duſt, ſo ſhall they al turne vnto duſt agayne.

Who knoweth the ſprete of man that goeth vpwarde, and the breth of the beaſt that goth downe into the earthe? Wherfore I perceaue, that there is nothynge better for a man / then to be ioyfull in his laboure, for that is his porcyon. But who wyll brynge hym to ſe the thynge that ſhall come after hym.

¶ The myſeryes of th innocent. The ſuperfluous laboures of men. The chylde that is poore and wyſe. &c.

CAPI. IIII.

SO I TVRNED me, and * conſydred all the vyolence wrong that is done vnder the Sonne, and beholde, the teares of ſuche as were oppreſſed, and there was no man to comforte them, or that wolde delyuer and defende them from the vyolence of their oppreſſours. Wherfore I iudged thoſe that are deade, to be more happye then ſuche as be alyue: yea hym that is yet vnborne to be better at eaſe then they bothe, becauſe he ſeeth not the miſerable workes that are done vnder the ſonne. A Abacuc.1.a Eccleſ.5.b

Agayne, I ſawe that all trauayle and dilygence of laboure was hated of euery man. B This is alſo a vaine thyng, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp his owne fleſhe. One hande full, is better with reſte / then bothe the handes full with laboure and trauayle of mynde. Moreouer, I turned me, and behelde yet another vanyte vnder the Sonne.

There is one man, no mo but hym ſelfe alone, hauynge neither chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauayle his eyes can nat be ſatiſfied with ryches. ✗ (yet doth he not remembre him ſelfe, and ſay) C For whome do I take ſuche trauayle? For whoſe pleaſure do I thus conſume awaye my lyfe. This is alſo a vayne and myſerable thynge. Therefore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyte of their laboure. For yf one of them fall, hys companyon helpeth hym vp again. But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hathe nat another to helpe hym vp.

Agayne, whẽ two ſlepe together, they are warme: but howe can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two may make reſyſtaunce: A threfolde threde is nat lyghtly broken. A poore chylde beyng wyſe D is better then an olde kyng, that doteth, and can not be ware in tyme to come. * Some one commeth out of priſon, and is made a kynge: and another whiche is borne in the kyngedome, commeth vnto pouerte. Gene.41.b. 1.Reg.16.c 1.Reg.13.c. 2.Par.33.c. 4.Re.23.b.

And I perceyued, that all men lyuynge vnder the Sonne, go with the ſeconde chylde, that commeth vp in the ſteade of the other. As for the people that haue bene before him and that come after hym, they are innumerable: yet is nat their ioye the greater thorowe to ioye hym. This is alſo a vayne thyng and a vexacion of mynde. When thou commeſt in to the houſe of God, kepe thy fote ⁊ drawe nye, that thou mayeſt heare: 1.Reg.xv.c that is better thē the offerynges of fooles, for they knowe nat what euyll they do.

¶ A monycyon to beware of raſhe communicacion. We ought nat to merueyle at the oppreſſyon of the pore. The couetous is nat ſatiſfyed with his ryches.

CAPIT. V.

A BE NOT haſty with thy mouth, and let nat thyne herte ſpeake any thynge raſhely before God. For God is in heuen, and thou vppon earthe, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where muche carefulneſſe is, there are many dreames: and where many wordes are / there men maye heare fooles. Deu.23.d. Numer.30.a. If thou make a vowe vnto God be nat ſlacke to perfourme it. As for folyſhe vowes, he hath no pleſure in them. If thou promyſe any thynge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, thē that thou ſhuldeſt promyſe, and nat paye. ☞ Suffre nat thy mouth to cauſe thy fleſh for to ſynne / nether ſaye thou before the aungell, that it is thy ignoraūce. For then God wyll be angrye at thy voyce / and deſtroye all the workes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are alſo dyuers vanities: B but loke that thou feare God. Eccleſ.4.a. Abacuc.1.a. If thou ſeyſt the poore to be oppreſſed and wrongefully dealte withall, ſo that equyte and the ryght of the lawe is wreſted in the lande: merueyle nat thou at ſuche a thynge, for one greate man kepeth touche with another, and the myghtye helpe them ſelues together. The whole lande alſo with the feldes, and all that is therein, is in ſubieccion and bondage vnto the kynge. He that loueth money, wyll neuer be ſatiſfyed with money: and who ſo delyteth in ryches ſhall haue no profyte therof. This is alſo a vayne thynge. Where as muche ryches is / there are many alſo that ſpende them away. And what pleaſure more hathe he that poſſeſſeth them, C ſauynge that he maye loke vpon thē with his eyes? A labouring man ſlepeth ſwetely, whether it be lytle or muche that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche wyll nat ſuffre hym to ſlepe. Yet is there a ſore plage, whiche I haue ſene vnder the ſonne (namely) ryches kepte to the hurte of hym that hathe them in poſſeſſyon.

For oft tymes they peryſh with his great myſery and trouble, and yf he haue a chylde it getteth nothynge. Job.1.d. 1.Timo.6.b. Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, ſo goeth he thither agayne, and caryeth nothyng away with hym of all his laboure. This is a myſerable plage, that he ſhall go away euē as he came. What helpeth it hym then, that he D hathe laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe alſo he dyd eate in the darke, with greate carefulneſſe, ſyckeneſſe and ſorowe. Eccle.2.d. Therfore me thynke it a better ⁊ a fayrer thyng, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreſhed of al his laboure, that he taketh vnder the Sonne al the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth hym, for this is his porcyon. For vnto whom ſo euer God geueth ryches goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for hys porcyon, and to be refreſhed of his laboure: this is the gyfte of God. For he thynketh nat much howe lōge he ſhall lyue, for ſo muche as God fylleth his herte with gladneſſe.

¶ The myſerye of the ryche and couetous. The dyfference of a foole and a wyſe man.

CAPI. VI.

A THERE is yet a plage whiche I behelde vnder the Sonne, and it is a generall thynge amonge men: when God geueth a man ryches, goodes and honour, ſo that he wanteth nothynge of all that his herte can deſyre: and yet God geueth hym nat leue to enioye the ſame, but another mā ſpendeth them. This is a vayne thynge ⁊ a myſerable plage. If a man beget an hun- B dreth chyldren, and lyue many yeares, ſo that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can nat enioye his good, neyther be buryed: as for hym I ſay, that an vntymely byrth is better then he, For he cōmeth to naught / ⁊ goeth his waye in to darckeneſſe, and his C name is forgotten. Moreouer, he ſeeth nat the Sonne, and knoweth nat of it: and yet hath he more reſt then the other, Yea though he lyued two thouſande yeares / yet hathe he no good lyfe. Come nat al to one place? All the laboure that a man taketh / is for hym ſelfe, and yet his deſyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. D For what hathe the wyſe more then the foole? What helpeth it the poore / that he knoweth to walke before the lyuynge? The ſyght of the eyes is better / then that the ſoule ſhulde ſo departe awaye. Howe be it, this is alſo a vayne thynge and a dyſquietneſſe of mynde. The thynge that hath bene, is named al redy, ⁊ knowe that it is euen man hym ſelfe: neyther maye he go to lawe with hym yͤ is myghtier then he. Many thinges there be yͤ increace vanyte, and what hath a man els.

For who knoweth what is good for man lyuynge, in the dayes of hys vaine lyfe, which is but a ſhadowe? Or who wyll tell a man/ what ſhal happē after hym vnder yͤ Sūne.

CAPI. VII.

A Pro.22.a. Eccl.1.a.

A * GOOD name is more worth then a precyous oyntmente/ and the daye of deth is better then the daye of byrthe. It is better to go in to an houſe of mournyng/ then in to a bancketinge houſe. For there is the ende of all men: and he that is lyuynge/ taketh it to hert. It is better to be ſorr then to laugh: for when the countenaūce is heuy, the herte is refourmed. The herte of the wyſe is in the mourning houſe, but the hert of the folyſh is in the houſe of mirth. * It is better to geue eare to the chaſtenynge of a wyſe man, then to heare the ſonge of fooles For the laughynge of foles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge. Who ſo doeth wrong, maketh a wyſe man to go oute of his wytte and deſtroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thynge is better then the begynnyne. The pacyent ſpryte is better then the hye mynded. Be nat haſtely angry in thy mynde, for wrath reſteth in the boſome of fooles. Say not thou: what is the cauſe, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be nowe? for that were no wyſe queſtyon. Wyſdome is better then ryches, yee muche more worthe then the eye ſyghte. For wyſdome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowledge and wyſdome geueth lyfe vnto hym that hathe it in poſſeſſyon. Conſydre the worcke of God/ howe that no man can make the thing ſtraight, which he maketh croked. Vſe well the tyme of proſperyte, and remēbre the tyme of myſfortune for God maketh the one by the other ſo that a man can fynde nothynge els. All thynges haue I conſidred in the tyme of my vanite: that the iuſt man peryſheth for hys ryghteouſnes ſake, and the vngodly lyueth in hys wyckednesse. Therfore * be thou nether to ryghteous nor ouer wyſe that thou peryſhe nat, be nether to vnrighteous alſo nor to foliſhe, leſte yͧ dye before thy tyme. It is good forthe to take holde of thys, and nat to let yͭ go out of thy hande. For he that feareth God, ſhall eſcape them all. Wyſdome geueth more corage vnto the wyſe / then ten myghtye men of the cytye: * for there is nat one iuſte vpon earth / that dothe good, and ſynneth nat: Take nat hede vnto euery worde that is ſpoken, leſt thou heare thy ſeruaunt curſe the: for thyne owne hert knoweth, that thou thy ſelfe alſo haſt ofte tymes ſpoken euyl by other men. All theſe thinges haue I proued in wyſdome: I ſayde I wyl be wyſe * but ſhe went farther fro me then ſhe was before/ yee & ſo depe yͭ I myght nat reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde alſo vnto knowledge, & to ſeke out ſcyēce, wiſdome and vnderſtandyng: to know the foolyſhenes of the vngodly and the errour of dotynge fooles. And I foūde, that * a woman is bytterer thē deth: for ſhe is a very angle, her herte is a net, & her handes are cheynes. Who ſo pleaſeth God, ſhal eſcape from her but the ſynner wyll be taken with her.

Beholde (ſayeth the preacher) this haue I dyligently ſearched out and proued, that I myght come by knowledge: which as yet I ſeke, and fynde it not. Among a thouſāde men I haue founde one, but nat one womā amonge all. Lo, thys onely haue I foūde, yͭ * God made man iuſt and ryghte, but they ſought many inuencyons.

¶ The kynges commaundement ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chefe thynges vnder the ſonne.

CAPI VIII.

A Prou.17.d. Iob.9.d.

WHo is wyſe? Who hath knowledge to make anſwere? A mās wyſdome * maketh hys face to ſhyne but malyce putteth it out of fauoure. I muſte kepe the kynges commaundemente/ and the othe that I haue made vnto God. Be nat haſtye to go out of hys ſyght, and ſe thou contynue in no euyll thinge: for whatſoeuer it pleaſeth hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kynge geueth a charge, hys commaundement is myghtye: Euen ſo * who maye ſaye vnto hym: what doeſt yͧ? Who ſo kepeth the commaundement: ſhall fele no harme: but a wiſe mans herte diſcerneth the tyme and maner: For euery thyng wyl haue oportunyte and iugement, and thys is the thynge that maketh men full of carefulnes and ſorowe. And why? a man knoweth nat what is for to come: for who wyl tell hym? Nether is there eny man yͭ hath power ouer the ſpryte, to kepe ſtyl the ſpryte, nor to haue any power in the tyme of death: it is nat he alſo that can make an ende of the battayle/ nether may vngodlynes delyuer them that medle with all.

Iob.9.b. Eccl.18.a.

Al theſe thynges haue I conſidered, and applyed my mynd vnto euery worke yͭ is done vnder the Sōne: howe one man hathe lordſhyppe ſhype vpon another to hys owne harme. For Psal.17.c. ✱ I haue ofte ſene the vngodly brought to theyr graues, and fallen downe from the hye holy place: in ſo muche, that they were forgotten in the cytye, where they were had in ſo hye and greate reputacyon. This is alſo C a vayne thynge. Because nowe that euyll workes are nat haſtely punyſhed, the herte of man geueth him ſelfe ouer vnto wyckedneſſe. But though an euyll perſone offende an hundred tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I ſure, that it ſhal go wel with them that feare God, because they haue hym before theyr eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it ſhall nat be well with hym/ nether ſhal he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a ſhadow/ ſo ſhall he be that feareth nat God. Yet is there a vanyte vpon earthe: There be iuſte men/ vnto whom it happeneth/ as though they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whome it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous. Thys haue I called alſo a vayne thynge. Therfore I commended gladneſſe, because a man hath no better thynge vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drynke, and to D be mery, for that ſhal he haue of his laboure all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the Sunne. And ſo I applyed my mynde to learne wyſdome, and to know the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of ſuche a faſſyon, that I ſuffred nat myne eyes to ſlepe nether daye nor nyghte) I vnderſtode of all the workes of God, but it is nat poſſyble for a man, to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the Sunne: and though he beſtowe hys laboure to ſeke them out, yet can he nat reache vnto them: yee though a wyſe man wolde vndertake to knowe them, yet ſhal he nat fynde them.

¶ A man wytteth nat, by the ryghteouſneſſe of hys owne worckes, whether he be worthye of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with hys wyfe. A prayſe of wyſdome.

CAPI. IX.

A FOR ALL theſe thinges purpoſed I in my mynde to ſeke out. The ryghteous ☞ and wyſe, yee and their ſeruauntes alſo, are in the hande of God: and ✱ ☞ there is no man that knoweth ether loue or hate / but all thynges are before them. It happeneth Job.9.c. vnto one as vnto another: It goeth with the ryghteous as with the vngodly: ✱ with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with hym that offereth, as with hym that offereth nat, lyke as it goeth with the vertuous, ſo goeth it alſo with ỹ ſynner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, ſo happeneth it alſo vnto hym ỹ is afrayed to be forſworne. Amonge all thinges that come to paſſe vnder the Sunne, this is a myſery that it hap- B peneth vnto all a lyke. Thys is the cauſe alſo that the hertes of mē are ful of wyckedneſſe, and mad foolyſhneſſe is in theyr hertes as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye. And why? As longe as a man lyueth/ he is careles: for a quycke dog (ſay they) is better then a deed lyon: for they that be lyuynge/ knowe that they ſhall dye: but they that be deed: knowe nothynge, nether deſerue they eny more. For theyr memoryal is forgotten, ſo that they be nether loued / hated nor enuied nether haue they eny more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder ỹ Sunne. Go thou thy waye then eate thy bred with ioye/ and drynke thy wyne with a glad hart for thy workes pleaſe God. Let thy gar- Mat.6.b. Psal.? mentes be all waye whyte, and ✱ let thy head lacke none oyntmente. ✱ Uſe thy ſelfe to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe whome thou loueſte / all the dayes of thy lyfe / whiche is but vayne, that God geuethe the vnder the C Sunne / all the dayes of thy vanyte: for that is thy porcyon in thys lyfe/ of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takeſte vnder the Sunne. Whatſoeuer thou takeſte in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for in ỹ graue that thou goeſt vnto, there is nether worke/ councell/ knowledge nor wyſdome. So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder the Sunne/ and I ſawe that in runnyng, it helpeth nat to be ſwifte: in batalle, it helpeth nat to be ſtronge: to fedyng/ it helpeth nat to be wyſe: to ryches, it helpeth nat to be ſuttell: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth nat to be cunnynge: but that all lyethe in Luke.12.b. in tyme and fortune. For ✱ a man knoweth nat hys tyme / but lyke as the fyſhe are taken with the angle / and as the byrdes are D catched with the ſnare: Euen ſo are men taken in the perlous tyme / when it commeth ſodenly vpon them. Thys wyſdome haue I ſene alſo vnder the Sunne / and me thoughte it a greate thynge. There was a lytle cytye/ and a fewe men within it ſo there came a greate kynge and beſeged it/ and and made greate bulwarkes agaynſte it. And in the cytye there was founde a poore man, (but he was wyſe) whiche with hys wyſdome delyuered the cytye: yet was there no body, that had any reſpecte vnto ſuche a ſymple man. Then ſayde I: wyſdome is better then ſtrength. Neuertheleſſe, a ſymple mans wyſdome is deſpyſed / and hys wordes are not herde. A wyſe mans councel that is folowed in ſilence, is farre aboue the

O my ſyſter, my ſpouſe, thou haſt wounded my herte, with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheyne of thy necke. O howe fayre are C thy breſtes, my ſyſter, my ſpouſe? Thy breſtes are more pleaſaunt then wyne, and the ſmell of thyne oyntmentes paſſeth al ſpyces. Thy lyppes, O my ſpouſe, droppe as the hony combe, yea mylcke and hony is vnder thy tonge / and the ſmell of thy garmentes is lyke the ſmell of Libanus. A well kepte garden, is my ſyſter, my ſpouſe, a well kepte waterſprynge, and a ſealed well. The fruytes that ſproute in the, are lyke a very Paradyſe of pomgranates with ſwete fruytes: as Cypreſſe, Nardus, and Saffron, Calamus, and Synamom with all ſwete ſmellynge trees: Myrre, Aloe and all the beſte ſpyces: a well of gardens, a well of lyuyng waters, whiche renne downe from Liban⁹.

Up thou northwynde, come thou Southwynde, and blow vpon my garden, that the ſmel therof may be caried on euery ſyde: yea that my beloued may come into my garden & eate of the ſwete fruytes that grow therin.

¶CAP. V.

I AM come into my garden, O my ſyſter, A my ſpouſe: I haue gathered my Myrre with my ſpyce. I haue eaten my hony with my hony combe, I haue dronke my Wyne with my mylke. Eate, O ye frendes / drynke and be mery, O ye beloued.

I ſlepe / and my herte waketh I heare the voyce of my beloued, when he knocketh

Open to me, O my ſyſter / my loue / my doue / my derlynge: for my heade is full of dewe and the lockes of my heare are full of the nyght droppes. I haue put of my cote howe can I do it on agayne? I haue waſhed B my fete, howe ſhall I fyle them agayne.

My loue put in his hande at the hole, and my herte was moued within me, I ſtode vp to open vnto my beloued / & my handes dropped with Myrre, & the Myrre ranne downe my fyngers vpon the locke, I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his waye. Nowe when he ſpake, my herte was gone: I ſought hym, but I coulde nat fynde him: I cryed vpon him, neuertheleſſe, he gaue me no anſwere. So the watchmen that wente aboute the cytie, founde me, ſmote me, and wounded me. Yee they that kepte the walles, toke awaye my garmente from me.

C I charge you therfore, O ye daughters of Ieruſalem, yf ye fynde thy beloued / that ye tell hym, howe that I am ſycke for loue.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, O þ fayreſt amonge wemen? Or what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargeſt vs ſo ſtraytely? As for, my loue, he is whyte and redde coloured, a ſynguler perſonne amonge many thouſandes: his heare is as the moſte fyne golde, the lockes of his heare are buſſhed, and blacke as a crowe. His eyes are as the eyes of doues by the water brokes, waſhen with mylke, and remaynynge in a plentuous place. His chekes are D lyke a garden bedde, where in the Apotecaryes plante all maner of ſwete thynges. His lyppes are lyke roſes that droppe Myrre, his handes are full of golde rynges and precyous ſtones. His body is as the pure yuery decte ouer with Saphyres: His legges are as the pyllers of Marbell, ſet vpon ſokettes of Golde. His face is as Libanus, and as the beauty of the Cedre trees. His throte is ſwete, yea he is al together louely. Such one is my loue, O ye daughters of Ieruſalem, ſuche one is my loue.

CAPI. VI.

WHyther is thy loue gone then (O A thou fayreſt amonge wemen) whyther is thy loue departed? we wyl ſeke hym with the? My loue is gone downe in to his garden, vnto the ſwete ſmellynge beddes, that he may refreſhe him ſelfe in the garden, and gather roſes. My loue is myne and I am his, whiche fedeth amonge the Roſes. Thou arte pleaſaunt (O my loue) euen as louelyneſſe it ſelfe, thou arte fayre as Ieruſalem, fearefull as an armye of men with theyr banners. Turne awaye thyne eyes fro me, for they haue ſet me on fyre. Canti. 2. i. * Thy heary lockes are lyke a flocke of gotes vpon the mount of Gilead. Thy teth B are lyke a flocke of ſhorne ſhepe, whiche go out of the waſſhynge place: where euery one beareth two twyns, and not one vnfruytefull amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomgranate, beſydes that whiche 3. Reg. 11. a lyeth hydde within. There are * lx. Quenes. lxxx. wyues, and dameſelles withoute nombre. One is my Doue / One is my derlynge.

C She is the onely beloued of her mother, and deare vnto her that bare her. When the doughters ſawe her, they ſayd, ſhe was bleſſed. Yea the Quenes and wyues prayſed her

What is ſhe this, that pepeth out as the mornyng? fayre as the Mone, cleare as the Sonne, and fearefull as an armye of men wt theyr baners. I wente downe into the nut garden, to ſe what grewe by the brokes, and to loke yf the vyneyarde floryſſhed, or yf the

D pomgranates were ſhot forthe. I knewe not, that my ſoule had made me the people that be vnder tribute. Turne agayne, turne agayne, O thou perfecte one: turne agayne, turne againe, and we wyl loke vpon the. What wyll ye ſe in the Sulamyte? She is lyke mē of war ÿ be in a daunce.

CAPI. VII.

A O howe pleaſaunt are thy treadynges with thy ſhoes, thou Prynces doughter? Thy thyghes are lyke a fayre iewell/ whiche is wrought by a connynge worcke mayſter. Thy nauell is lyke a rounde goblet, whiche is neuer without drynke. Thy wombe is lyke a hepe of wheate that is ſette aboute with roſes. ‡ Thy two breſtes are lyke two twyns of yonge roes. Cant.4.a

Thy necke is as it were a tower of yuerye thyne eies alſo are like the water poles that B are in Heſebon, beſide the porte of Bathrabbim: thy noſe is lyke the tower of Libanus, whiche loketh towarde Damaſcus: That heade that ſtandeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel, and the heare of thy heade is lyke the kynges purple, folden vp in playtes. O howe fayre and louely arte thou, my dearlynge, in pleaſures? Thy ſtature is lyke a Palme tre & thy breſtes lyke a cluſter of grapes. I ſayde I wyl clyme vp into ÿ Palme tree, and take holde of his braunches.

C Thy breſtes alſo ſhalbe as the vyne cluſters, that ſmel of thy noſtrels lyke the ſmel of apples, and thy throte lyke the beſte vyne This ſhalbe pure and clere for my loue his lyppes and teth ſhall haue theyr pleaſ [illegible] There wyll I turne me vnto my lou [illegible] he ſhall turne hym vnto me. O come [illegible] y loue, we wyl go forth into the felde, an [illegible] our lodgynge in the vyllages. In the mor- D nynge wyll we go ſe the vyneyarde: yf it be ſprong forthe, yf the grapes be growen, and yf the pomgranates be ſhot out. There wyl I geue the my breſtes: the Mandragoras geueth theyr ſmel: and beſyde our dores are al maner of pleaſaunt fruytes: both newe & olde: which I haue kept for ÿ, o my beloued.

CAPI. VIII.

A O THAT I myght fynde the without and kyſſe the, whom I loue as my brother which ſucketh my mothers breſtes: and that thou woldeſt not be offended, yf I toke the, and brought the into my mothers houſe that thou myghteſt teache me, and that I myght geue the drynke of ſpiced wyne, and of the ſwete ſappe of my pomgarnates.

Cant.ii.a ‡ His lefte hande ſhalbe vnder my heade and his ryght hande ſhall embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Ieruſalē ÿ ye wake nat vp my loue, nor touch her tyll ſhe be content her ſelfe. What is ſhe this, that cōmeth vp frō the wyldernes &, leaneth vpō her loue? I waked the vp among the apple trees, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde. O ſet me as a ſeale vpon thyne B herte, & as a ſeale vpon thyne arme: for loue is myghtye as the death, and gelouſy as the hel. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flamme of the Lorde: ſo that many waters are nat able to quenche loue, neyther maye the ſtreames drowne it. Yea yf a man wolde geue all the good of his houſe for loue, he ſhulde counte it nothynge. Our ſyſter is but C yonge, and hathe no breſtes: what ſhall we do for our ſyſter, whan ſhe ſhall be ſpoken for? Yf ſhe be a wall, we ſhall buylde a ſyluer bolwerke there vpon: yf ſhe be a dore/ we ſhall faſten her with borders of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my breſtes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his ſyght. Salomon hathe a vyneyard at Baal Hamon, and this vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the fruyte therof ſhulde geue D hym a thouſande peces of ſyluer. My vineyarde is in my ſyght: thou (O Salomon) muſt haue a thouſande, and the kepers two hundreth with the fruyte. Thou that dwelleſte in the gardens/ O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyons maye herken to the ſame. O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a Roo or a yōg herte vppon the ſwete ſmellyng mountaynes.

The Booke of the Prophete Eſaye.

CAPITVLO. I.

A The vyſyon of Eſaye the ſonne of Amos, whiche he ſawe vpon Juda and Jeruſalem: in the dayes of Ozia and Joathan, Aham and Jezekiah kynges of Juda. Heare, O Heauens, and herken O earthe: For the Lorde hathe ſpoken: J haue norished and brought vp chyldren, but they haue done wyckedly againſt me. The oxe hath knowẽ his owner and the aſſe his mayſters cryb: but Jſrael hathe receyued no knowledge, my people hathe no vnderſtandynge. B Alas for this ſynfull nacyon / a people of greate iniquytie, a frowarde generacyon / vnnatural children. They haue forſaken the Lorde / they haue prouoked the holy one of Jſrael vnto angre / ⁊ are gone backward. Wherby ſhuld ye be plaged any more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The whole heed is ſyke / and all the herte is heuy. From the ſole of ẏ fote vnto ẏ heed / there is no hole part in al your body / but al are woundes / botches / ſores / ⁊ ſtrypes, which can neither be helped / boũde vp: molifyed. nor eaſed with any oyntment.

C Your lande lyeth waſte / your cityes are brent vp, your enemyes deuoure your lande and ye muſt be fayne to ſtande, and loke vpon it, and it is deſolate: as it were with enemyes in a batayle. Moreouer / the daughter of Syon is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyarde / lyke a lodge in a gardeyn of cucumbers, lyke a beſeged cytie. And excepte the Lorde of Hoſtes hadde lefte vs a fewe alyue / we ſhulde haue bene as Sodoma, and lyke vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde ye Lordes of Sodoma / ⁊ harken vnto the lawe of our God, thou people of Gomorra ſayth ẏ lorde. Why offre ye ſo many ſacrifyces vnto me? J am ful of the brent offerynges of wethers and of the fatneſſe of fed beaſtes. J haue no pleaſure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes D and gotes. When ye appere before me / who requireth you to treade within my porches? Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but loſt labour. Jncenſe is an abhominable thynge vnto me. J may not awaye with your newe mones, your Sabbathes ⁊ ſolemne dayes. Your faſtinges are alſo in vaine. J hate your new holy dayes ⁊ faſtinges: euen fro my very herte. They make me wery, J can not abide them. Whan ye holde out your handes J wyl turne myne eies frõ you. And though ye make many prayers / yet wil J heare nothynge at all, ſeynge your handes ar full of bloude.

Waſhe you, make you cleane / put away E your euyll thoughtes out of my ſyght, ceaſe from doing of euell. Learne to do ryght applye your ſelues to equite / delyuer ẏ oppreſſed / helpe the fatherleſſe to his right, let the wydowes cõplaynt come before you. Nowe go to (ſaythe ẏ Lorde) let vs talke together. Though your ſynnes be as reade as ſcarlet they ſhalbe as whyte as ſnow. And though they were lyke purple, they ſhalbe as whyte as wolle Jf ye be louing ⁊ obedyent, ye ſhal enioye the beſt thing ẏ groweth in the lande But yf ye be obſtinate ⁊ rebellious / ye ſhall be deuoured wͭ the ſwerde, for thus the lorde hath promyſed with his owne mouth.

F Howe happeneth it then that the ryghtuous cytie (whiche was full of equyte) is become vnfaythfull as an whore? ryghtuouſnes dwelt in it, but nowe murther. Thy ſyluer is turned to droſſe / and thy wyne myxte with water. Thy Prynces are wycked and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes all together, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherles, they helpe him nat to hys ryght neyther wyll they let the wydowes cauſes c[illegible]e before them. Therfore ſayth the Lord G[illegible] of Hoſtes / the myghtye one of Jſrael A[illegible] J muſte eaſe me of myne enemyes, and auenge me of myne aduerſaries, J ſhall lay my hande vpon the / ⁊ burne out thy droſſe from the fyneſt and pureſt, and put out all thy ſynne / and ſette thy iudges agayne as they were ſomtyme, and thy Senatours as they were from the begynnyng. Then ſhalt G thou be called the ryghtuous citie / the faithfull cytie, Syon ſhall be redemed with equite / and they ſhall turne agayne vnto her in ryghtuouſneſſe. For the tranſgreſſours and vngodly / and ſuche as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde / muſt al together be vtterly deſtroyed.

And excepte ye be aſhamed of ẏ oke trees wherin ye haue ſo delyted / ⁊ of the gardens ẏ ye haue choſen: ye ſhalbe as an oke whoſe leaues are fallen awaye, ⁊ as a garden that hath no moiſtneſſe. H And as for ẏ glorye of theſe thinges, it ſhalbe turned to drye ſtrawe and he ẏ mair thẽ to a ſparke. And they ſhal

both burne to gether, ſo that no man ſhalbe able to quench them

¶ Of the commynge and death of Chryſte, and of the callynge of the Heathen.

CAPI. II.

A THis is the worde that was opened vnto Eſay the ſonne of Amoz, vnto Juda and Jeruſalem. It wyll be alſo ☞ in the laſt dayes. That the hyll where the houſe of the Lorde is buylded, ſhall be the chefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all lytle hilles. And al nacyōs ſhal preace vnto him, and the multytude of people ſhall go, ſpeakynge thus one to another: vp, * let vs go to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the houſe of the God of Jacob: that he maye ſhewe vs hys wayes, and that we maye walke in hys pathes. For the lawe ſhal come out of Syō, and the worde of the Lorde from Jeruſalem, and ſhall geue ſentence amonge the Heathen/ and ſhal reforme the multytude of people: They ſhal breake theyr ſwerdes alſo in to mattockes and theyr ſpeares to make ſythes. B And one people ſhall nat lyfte vp weapen agaynſte another, nether ſhall they learne to fyght from thens forth. Come ye (O houſe of Jacob) let vs walke in yͤ lyght of the Lorde. But thou haſt forſake thy people the houſe of Jacob, be cauſe they go farre beyonde theyr fathers in Sorceres (whō they haue as the Philiſtines had) and ☞ in ſtraunge chyldren they thynke them ſelues to haue ynough. Theyr lande is full of ſyluer and golde, neyther is there any ende of theyr treaſure: Theyr lande is alſo full of horſes, and no ende is there of theyr charets. Theyr lande is alſo full of vayne goddes, and before the worke of theyr owne handes haue they bowed them ſelues, yee euen before the thynge that theyr owne fyngers haue made. C There knelety the man, there falleth the man downe before them, ſo that thou canſt nat brynge him awaye frō thence.

Mich.4.a.

And therfore get the in to ſome rocke, and hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his mageſtye. Which layeth downe the hygh lokes of preſumptuous perſonnes, ⁊ bryngeth lowe the pryde of man/ and the Lorde onely ſhall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhall go ouer all pryde and preſumpcyon, vpon all them that exalte thē ſelues, and ſhall brynge them all downe: vpon al hygh and ſtoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon al the okes of Baſan, vpō all hygh hylles, and vpon all ſtoute mountaynes, vpon al coſtly towres, and vpon all ſtronge walles, vpon all ſhyppes of the ſee, and vpon euery thynge that is gloryous ⁊ pleaſaunte to loke vpon. And it ſhall brynge downe the pryde of man, and laye mans preſumptuouſneſſe full lowe, and the Lorde ſhall onely haue the vyctory in that daye. But the Jdols ſhal vtterly be roted out. Men ſhall crepe in to holes of ſtone, ⁊ in to caues of yͤ earth, for feare of the Lorde and for the glory of his mageſty: what tyme as he ſhall ryſe vp to condemne the earth. Then ſhall man caſte awaye his goddes of ſyluer, and his goddes of golde (which he neuertheles had made to honour thē) vnto D Molles and Backes: And they ſhall crepe in to the caues and rockes/ ⁊ in to the clyftes of harde ſtones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his mageſtye, when he ryſeth to condemne the earth. Feare nat ye then any man/ whoſe breth is in hys noſtrels. For what is he of reputacyon?

¶ He propheceyeth that at the cōmyng of Chryſt all ſtrēgth and power ſhall be put forth of Jurie.

CAPI. III.

FOr lo, the Lorde God of Hoſtes dothe take awaye from Jeruſalem and Juda, A all poſſeſſyons and power, all meate and drynke, the captayne and the ſoudyar/ the iudge ⁊ the prophete, the wyſe and the aged man, the prynce of fiftie yeare olde and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderſtandynge: the maſter of craftes and oratours. And I ſhal geue them chyldren to be theyr prynces, and babes ſhal haue the rule of you. The people alſo ſhalbe pylled and polled, and one ſhall euer be doyng violēce and wronge to another. The boye ſhall preſume agaynſt the elder, and the vyle perſon agaynſte the honorable. Yee one ſhall take a frende of his owne kynred by the boſome/ ⁊ ſaye: thou haſt clothynge, thou ſhalt be our B heade, for thou mayeſt kepe vs frō thys fall and parell. Then ſhal he ſweare and ſaye: I can nat helpe you. Moreouer, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my houſe/ make me no ruler of the people. For Jeruſalem and Juda muſte decaye, becauſe that bothe theyr wordes and coūcels are agaynſt the Lorde, to prouoke the preſence of hys mageſtye vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenaunce bewrayeth them/ yee they declare theyr owne ſynnes them ſelues as the Sodomytes/ and hyde them nat.

Wo be vnto theyr ſoules/ for they haue rewarded euell vnto them ſelues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they ſhall enioye the frutes of theyr ſtudies. But wo be to the vngodly and vnryghteous, for they ſhalbe C rewarded after theyr workes. Children are extorcioners of my peple, and wemen haue rule of them.

O my people, the leaders deceaue the / and depraue the waye of thy foteſteppes. The Lorde is here to commen of the matter, and ſtandeth to geue iudgemente on the people.
The Lorde ſhal come forthe to reaſon with the Senatoures and prynces of hys people.
It is ye ỹ haue deſtroyed my vineyarde, the robbery of ỹ poore is in your houſes. Wherfore do ye oppreſſe my peple, & marre ỹ faces of ỹ poore: ſayeth the Lorde God of hoſtes.
Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde: Seynge
ỹ daughters of Sion are become ſo proude and haue walked with ſtretched out neckes and with vayne wanton eyes: ſeynge they D come in tryppynge ſo nycely with theyr fete Therfore ſhall the Lorde ſhaue the heades of the daughters of Sion, & the Lorde ſhal diſcouer theyr ſhame. In that daye ſhal the Lorde take away the gorgiouſneſſe of their apparell, and ſpanges, cheynes, partelettes and colars / braceletes and hooues / the goodly floured, wyde and brodered rayment eches / and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy day clothes and vales, kercheſes and pynnes / glaſſes and ſmockes / bonettes and taches.

And in ſteade of good ſmell, there ſhall be ſtyncke among them. And for theyr gyrdles there ſhalbe looſe bandes. And for well ſet heare there ſhalbe baldeneſſe. In ſteade of a ſtomacher a ſacke clothe, and for theyr bewty witherdneſſe and ſonne burninge. Your houſbandes and mightye men ſhal peryſhe with the ſwerde in batayle.
☞ At that tyme ſhall ☞ theyr gates mourne and complayne / and they ſhall ſyt as deſolate folcke vpon the earth.

¶ For want of men, ſeuen women deſyre to haue one man.

CAPI. IIII.

A THEN ſhall ſeuen wyues take holde of one man, and ſaye: we wyll laye all our meate and clothing together in comen, only that we may be called thy wyues / and that thys ſhamefull reproſe maye be taken from vs. After that tyme ſhall the braunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull and myghty, and the frute of the earth ſhalbe fayre and pleaſaunt for thoſe Iſraelytes that ſhall ſpring thereof. Then ſhall the remnaunt in Sion & the remnaunt at Ieruſalem be called holy:
Namely al ſuch as are wrytten amõg the lyuynge at Ieruſalem: what tyme as ỹ Lorde ſhal waſhe away the fylthynes of ỹ daughters of Sion and pourge the bloude out frõ
Ieruſalem with the wynde of hys ſmoke & B fyre. Moreouer, vpon all the dwellinges of the hyll of Sion and vpon theyr whole congregacion, ſhall the Lorde prouyde a cloude and ſmoke by daye / and the ſhynynge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr glory ſhalbe preſerued. And Ieruſalem ſhal be a tabernacle for a ſhadow becauſe of hete in the daye time, a place & refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether and rayne.

¶ Of Chryſt and hys vyneyarde, with an execration of the wretchedneſſe and dronckennes.

CAPI. V.

A NOwe wyll I ſynge my beloued frende
a ſonge, becauſe of hys vyneyarde.
My beloued frende hathe a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous grounde. Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde aboute and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddeſt of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne preſſe therin. And afterwarde when he loked that it ſhulde brynge hym grapes / it brought forth thornes. Nowe therfore (O ye Cytyſens of Ieruſalē and whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you betwyxte me and my vyneyarde. What more colde haue bene done for it that I haue nat done? Wherfore then hathe it geuen thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

B Well, nowe I ſhall tell you howe I wyll do with my vyneyarde: I wyl take the hedge from it, that it maye peryſhe, and breake downe the wal, that it may be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waſte, that it ſhall nether be twyſted nor cut, but beare thornes & breres. I wyl alſo forbyd the cloudes, that they ſhall nat rayne vpon it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lord of hoſtes it is the houſe of Iſrael, and whole Iuda hys fayre plantynge.
Of theſe he loked for equyte, but ſe
there is wronge: for ryghteouſneſſe, lo It is but myſery.
C Wo vnto them that ioyne one houſe to another and bryng one lande ſo nygh vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde / and ỹ ye maye dwell vpon the earthe alone.
Theſe thynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hoſtes: ſhall nat many greater and more gorgyous houſes be ſo waſte, that no man ſhall dwel in them? And ten akers of vynes ſhal geue but a Quarte and .xxx. buſhels of ſede ſhall geue but an Epha.

Wo be vnto them / that ryſe vp early to folowe dronckenes, and to them that con-

tynue ſo vntyll nyght, and tyl they be ſet on fyre with wyne. In thoſe cōpanyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pipes, and wyne. But they regarde nat the worcke of the Lorde, & conſyders nat the operacyon of his handes. Therfore commeth my folke alſo
D in to captyuyte, becauſe they haue no vnderſtandynge. Theyr glory is famaſhed with hunger/and their pryde is marred for thurſt. Therfore gapeth hel, & openeth her mouthe marueilous wyde/that theyr pryde, boſtyng and welthe/ with ſuche as reioyſe therein/ maye deſcende into it.

Thus hathe man a fal, and is brought lowe/and the high loke of the proude ſhalbe layde downe. But the Lorde of Hoſtes is exalted in iudgement/ and God that is holy/ is prayſed in ryghtuouſnes. Then ſhall the ſhepe eate in order, & the riche mens landes that were layde waiſt, ſhall ſtraungers deuoure. Wo be vnto them/that drawe wyckednes vnto them/ with cordes of vanyte and ſyn/as it were with a cart rope. Which vſe to ſpeake on this maner, let hym make haſte nowe, & go forth with his worcke, that we maye ſe it. Let the counſell of the holy one of Iſraell come: and drawe nye/ that we maye knowe it.

E Wo be vnto them that cal euel good, and good euell/whiche make darcknes lyght/& lyght darckeneſſe, that make ſowre ſwete, and ſwete ſowre. Wo be vnto them that are wyſe in theyr owne ſyght, and thynke them ſelues to haue vnderſtandynge. Wo be vnto them, that are ſtronge to ſuppe out wyne, and experte men to ſete vp dronckenneſſe. Theſe geue ſentēce with the vngodly for rewardes, but condempne the iuſt cauſe of the ryghteous.

Therfore, lyke as fyre lycketh vp the ſtrawe, & as the flame conſumeth the ſtubble: euen ſo theyr rote ſhalbe as corrupcyon and theyr bloſſome ſhall vanyſhe awaye lyke duſte for they haue caſte awaye the lawe of the Lorde of Hoſtes, and blaſphemed the worde of the holy maker of Iſrael.

F Therfore is the wrath of the Lorde kyndled alſo agaynſt his people, and he ſhaketh his hande at them: yee, he hathe ſmytten ſo, that the hylles dyd tremble. And theyr carcaſes dyd lye in the open ſtretes/ lyke myre. And in all this/ the wrath of God hath not ceaſed: but hys hande is ſtretched out ſtyll. And he ſhall gyue a token vnto a ſtraunge people/ and call vnto them in a far countre and beholde/ they ſhall come haſtely with ſpede. There ſhal not be one faynt nor feble amonge them, no not a ſlogyſhe nor ſlepery perſone. There ſhall not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes/ nor looſe theyr lachet from hys ſhoe. His arowes are ſharpe/ and al his bowes bent. His horſe hoofes are lyke flynte, and his cartewheles lyke a ſtormy wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They ſhal roare/ and hantche vp the pray, and no man ſhall recouer it or get it from them. In that daye they ſhall be ſo fearſe vpon them, as the ſee. And yf we looke vnto the lande beholde/it ſhalbe all darkneſſe and ſorowe. If we loke towarde heauen, beholde it ſhalbe darke.

¶ Eſay ſawe the glory of the Lorde/ and was ſent to prophecye the deſolacyon of Iurye.

CAPI. VI.

A IN the ſame yere that kynge Ozyah dyed/ I ſawe ☞ the Lorde ſyttynge vpon
☞ an hygh and glorious ſeate, and his trayne fylled the palace. From aboue flakert the Seraphyns, wherof euery one had ſyx wynges. With twayne eche couered hys face/ with twayne his fete/and with twayne dyd he flye. They cryed alſo eche one to an other on this maner, holy/ holy, holy, is the lorde
B of Hoſtes. The whole worlde is full of his glorye. Yea the geaſtes and dorecheckes moued at his cryenge/ and the howſe was full of ſmoke. Then I ſayde, O wo is me. For I am loſte, in aſmoche as I am a man of vncleane lyppes/ and dwell amonge people that hathe vncleane lyppes alſo, for myne eyes haue ſene the kynge/ and Lorde of Hooſtes.

Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me/hauing a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the Aulter with the tonges/and touched my mouth: and ſayde, lo/ this hath touched thy lyppes, and thyne vn-

And he ſayde/ go and tel this peple, & ye ſhal heare in dede but ye ſhall not vnderſtande, ye ſhal playnly ſee/and nat perceaue. Harden the hart of this people/ſtop their eares, and ſhut theyr eyes that they ſe not wt theyr eyes/heare not with theyr eares/and vnderſtande not with theyr hertes/and conuerte and be healed.

¶ The kynges moue batayle agaynſt Jeruſalem, A vyrgin ſhall beare a chylde.

CAPI. VII.

A IT HAPPENED in the tyme of Ahaz the ſonne of Jothan / whiche was the ſonne of Uziah kyng of Juda: that ✝ Razin the kynge of Syria, and Pekeh the ſonne of Romelyah, kynge of Iſraell: wente vp towarde Jeruſalem to beſege it, but wanne it nat. Nowe when the the houſe of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde worde therof, that Siria and Ephraim were confederate together his herte quaked (yee and the hertes alſo of his people) lyke as whan a tre in the felde is moued with the wynde.

4.Reg.16.a
2.Par.28.a

Then ſayde God vnto Eſaye: Go mete Ahaz (thou and thy ſonne Sear Jaſub) at B the head of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, and ſaye vnto hym, take hede to thy ſelfe and be ſtyll, but feare nat/ nether be faynt harted, for theſe two tales: that is: for theſe two ſmokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furyouſnes of Razin the Syrian and Romelies ſonne: becauſe that the kynge of Syria Ephraim and Romelies ſonne haue wyckedly cōſpyred agaynſt the ſaying: We wyll go vp agaynſt Juda, vexe them, and brynge them vnder vs and ſet a kynge there, euen the ſonne of Tabeel. For thus ſayeth the Lorde God therto, It ſhall nat ſo go forth, nether come ſo to paſſe for ☞ the head cytie of the Syrians is Damaſcus, but the head of Damaſc⁹ is Razin And after fyue and threſcore yeare, ſhall Ephraim be no more a peple. And the chefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelyes ſonne. Yf ye beleue nat / it commeth of youre owne vnſtedfaſtneſſe.

Moreouer / God ſpake vnto Ahaz, ſayenge: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God C whether it be towarde the depthe beneth, or towarde the height aboue. Then ſayd Ahaz: I wyll requyre none, nether wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde anſwered: Then heare ye now/ ye of the houſe of Dauyd: Is it nat ynough for you, ỹ ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muſte greue my God alſo/ And therfore the Lorde ſhal geue you a token: Beholde, a vyrgin ſhal conceaue and beare a ſonne, & ſhall call hys name ☞ Emanuel. Butter and hony ſhall he eate, that he maye knowe to refuſe the euel, and choſe the good. For or euer the child come to knowledge, to eſchue the euyl and choſe the good. The land (that thou arte ſo afrayde for) ſhalbe deſolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde alſo ſhall ſende a tyme vpon the/ vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers houſe (ſuch as neuer came ſence ỹ tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda) thorow the kynge of the Aſſirians. For at the ſame tyme ſhall the Lorde whyſtle for the flyes that are about the water of Egypte, and for the Bees in the Aſſirians lande. Theſe ſhal come, and ſhall lyghte all in the valeyes/ in the vawtes of ſtones, vpon all grene thynges and in all corners.

At the ſame tyme ſhall the Lorde ☞ ſhaue the heare of the heade and the fete and the beerd cleane of, with the raſoure that he ſhal paye them withall beyonde the water: namely, with the kynge of the Aſſirians. D At the ſame tyme ſhal a man lyue with a cowe, and two ſhepe. Then, becauſe of the aboundaunce of mylcke, he ſhall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whiche remayneth in the lande, ſhal eate butter and hony. At the ſame tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thouſande vynes in one, and were ſolde for a thouſande ſyluerlynges) ſhalbe turned to brears and thornes. Lyke as they ſhall come in to the lande with arowes and bowes, ſo ſhall all the lande become brears and thornes. And as for all hylles that are hewen downe, ther ſhall nat come vpon them any feare of brears and thornes. But the catell ſhall be dryuen thyther, and the ſhepe ſhall fede there.

¶ The delyueraunce of the lande by Emanuell. The ſtone of offence, at which many ſhall ſtumble.

CAP. VIII.

A MOREOVER, the Lorde ſayde vnto me: Take the a greate leafe, and ☞ wryte in it as men do with a penne, that he ſpede hym to robbe, and haſte hym to ſpoyle. And I called vnto me faythful wytneſſes: Urijah the prieſte, and Zachariah the ſonne of Barachyah. After that wente I vnto the Prophetyſſe, that had conceaued and borne a ſonne. Then ſayde the Lorde to me: geue hym thys name: a ſpedy robber: and haſtye ſpoyler. For why, or euer the chylde ſhal haue knowledge to crye father, and mother: ſhall the ryches of Damaſcus and the ſubſtaunce of Samaria be take awaye, before for the kynge of the Aſſyrians.

The Lorde ſpake alſo vnto me, ſaying: for ſo muche as thys people refuſeth the ſtyl rennynge water of Sylo, and put theyr delyte in Razin and Romelies ſonne: B Beholde the Lorde ſhall brynge myghtie and greate floudes of water vppon them namely / the kynge of the Aſſirians with all his power. Whiche ſhal clyme vp vpon al his floudes / and powre out his furyouſnes vpon euerye man, and renne ouer all theyr banckes. And ſhall breake in vpon Juda, increaſing in power, tyll he gette hym by the necke. He ☞ ſhall fyll alſo the wydeneſſe of thy lande ☞ with his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people / and gather you / herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muſtre you / and gather you / muſtre you and gather you take your councell together, yet muſt youre councell come to nought: go in hande withall, yet ſhall it nat proſpere: for God is with C vs. For the Lorde chaſtyſed me, and toke me by the hande / and warned me, ſayenge vnto me: that J ſhulde nat walke in ẏ waye of thys people. He ſayde more ouer: rounde with none of them, who ſo euer ſaye: yonder people are bounde together: feare them not, neyther be afrayed of them / but ſanctyfye the LORDE of Hooſtes, let hym be youre feare and drede. For he is the ſanctifyenge, and ſtone to ſtomble at: the rocke to fall vpon: a ſnare and net to both the houſes: to Iſrael, and the inhabyters of Jeruſalem. And many ſhall ſtomble, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea, they ſhalbe ſnared and taken.

Nowe laye the wytneſſes together and D ſeale the lawe with my diſciples. Thus wyl J wayte vpon the Lorde that hathe turned his face from the houſe of Jacob, and J wil loke for hym. But lo, as for me, and the chyldren which the Lord hath geuen me: we are a token and wondre in Iſrael, for the Lorde of Hooſtes ſake, whiche dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And yf they ſaye vnto you: aſke counſell at the ſotheſayers, wytches, charmers and coniurers / then make them thys anſwere. Js ther a people any where, that aſketh not Luke.14.a cōſel at his God: * Shulde mē ronne vnto the deade for the lyuynge? Jf any man wante lyght, let hym loke vpon the lawe / & the teſtymony, whether they ſpeke not after this meanyng. Jf he do not this, he ſtōbleth and ſuffreth hūgre. And yf he ſuffre hungre he is out of patience, and blaſphemeth his kynge and his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downeward to the earth, and beholde, there is trouble and darkeneſſe, vexacion is rounde aboute him, and the cloude of errour. And out of ſuche aduerſyte, ſhall he nat eſcape. Euen lyke as in tyme paſt, it hathe bene well ſene, that the lande of Zabulon and the lande of Nepthali (were thorow the ſee waye goeth ouer Jordane, into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrſte in lytle trouble: but afterwarde ſore vexed.

¶ He prophecyeth of Chryſtes natyuite and domynyon.

CAPI. IX.

THE PEOPLE that walke in darkeneſſe haue ſene a great lyght. As for A them that dwell in the lande of the Shadowe of deathe, vpon them hathe the lyght ſhyned. Thou haſte multiplyed the people, and not increaſed theyr ioy. * They reioyſe before the, euen as men make mery in harueſt, Pſal. cix.a and as men that haue gotten the vyctory, when they deale the ſpoyle. For thou haſt broken the yoke of the peoples burthen, the ſtaffe of hys ſhoulder and the rod of hys oppreſſoure, as in the dayes of Madian.

B More ouer, all temerarious & ſedycious power (yea where there is but a cote fyled with bloude) ſhalbe burnt, and conſumed of the fyre. For vnto vs a chylde is borne, and vnto vs a ſonne is geuen. Upon his ſhoulder doth the kyngdome lye, and he is called with his owne name: The wonderous geuer of councel, the myghtye God, the euerlaſtyng father, the prīce of peace, he ſhal make no ende to encreaſe the kyngdome and peace and ſhall ſyt vpon the ſeate of Dauyd and in his kyngedome, to ſet vp the ſame, and to ſtablyſhe it with equyte and ryghtuouſnes frome hence forth for euermore. This ſhall the gelouſy of the Lorde of Hooſtes brynge to paſſe.

The Lorde ſent a worde into Jacob, the ſame is come into Iſrael. C And all the people of Ephraim ſhall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria / that ſaye with pryde & hye ſtomackes, on this maner. The tyle worke is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it with harder ſtones. The Molbery tymbre is broken, but we ſhall ſet it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lorde ſhal prepare Razin the enemye agaynſte them, and ſo ordre theyr aduerſaryes, that the Sirians ſhall laye holde vpon them before, and the Philyſtynes behynde, and ſo deuoure Iſrael with open mouth.

After all this is not the wrathe of the Lord ceaſſed, but yet is hys hande ſtretched out ſtyll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chaſtyſeth them, neyther do they ſeke the Lorde of Hooſtes. Therefore hathe the Lorde roted out of Iſrael bothe heade & tayle, braunche and twygge in one daye.

By the heade is vnderſtande the Senatoure and honorable man, and by the tayle the Prophete that teacheth lyes. For all they whiche enfourme the people that they be in a ryght caſe, ſuche be diſceiuers. Such as men thynke alſo to be perfecte amonge theſe, are but caſt awaye.

D Therfore ſhal the Lorde haue no pleaſure in theyr yonge men, neyther fauoure theyr fatherleſſe and wydowes. For they are all together ypocrytes & wycked, and all theyr mouthes ſpeake foly, After all this is not the Lordes wrath ceaſſed, but yet his hande is ſtretched out ſtyll. For vngodlyneſſe burneth, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wodde or a rede buſſhe, ſo aſcendeth the ſmoke of theyr pryde.

For cauſe of the wrathe of the Lorde of Hooſtes, is the lande full of darkeneſſe, and the people be conſumed, as it were with fyre no man dothe ſpare his brother. If a man do turne hym to the ryght hande, he ſhal famyſſhe, or to the lefte hande to eate, he ſhall nat haue ynough. Euery man ſhall ☞ eate the fleſhe of hys owne arme. Manaſſes ſhal eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manaſſes / & they bothe ſhall eate Juda. After all this is not the Lordes wrath ceaſſed, but yet is his hande ſtretched out ſtyll.

¶ He threateneth the oppreſſours of the poore and propheceyeth agaynſt Sennacherib.

CAPI. X.

A WO BE VNTO thē that make vnryghtuous lawes, and deuyſe thynges, whiche be to harde for to kepe: wherethorowe the poore are oppreſſed, on euery ſyde: and the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgement: that widowes maye be theyr praye, and that they may rob the fatherleſſe. What wyll ye do in tyme of the viſitacyon, and whan deſtruccion ſhal come from farre? To whome wyll ye renne for helpe? and to whom wyll ye geue youre honoure / that he maye kepe it? that ye come not amonge the pryſoners / or lye amonge
B the deade? After al this doth not the wrath of the Lorde ceaſſe, but yet is his handes ſtretched out ſtyll.

Wo be alſo vnto Aſſur, whiche is a ſtaf of my wrathe, in whoſe hande is the rod of my punyſſhement. I ſhal ſende hym among thoſe ypocrytiſſhe people, amonge the people ý haue deſerued my dyſfauoure ſhall I ſende hym: that he maye vtterly robbe them ſpoyle them, and treade thē downe lyke the myre in the ſtrete Howe be it his meanynge is nat ſo neyther thynketh his herte of this faſſhyon. But he ymagineth onely howe he may rote out and deſtroye muche people, for he ſayeth: are nat my Prynces all kynges? C
Is nat ☞ Calno as eaſie to wine, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere ☞ Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damaſcus and Samaria? As who ſay: I were able to wynne the kingdome of the Idolaters and theyr goddes: but not Jeruſalem and Samaria. Shall I nat do vnto Jeruſalem and theyr ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and theyr ydoles?

Wherfore the Lorde ſayeth. Aſſone as I haue perfourmed my whole worke vpō the hyll of Syon and Jeruſalem, then wyll I ☞ vyſet the noble and ſtoute harte of the kynge of Aſſyria, with hys proude lokes. For he ſtandeth thus in his owne concepte: This do I thorow the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wyſdome. For I am wyſe, I am he that remoue the landes of the people. I robbe theyr treaſures: and (lyke one of the worthyes) I dryue thē from theyr hye ſeates. My hande hathe founde out the ſtrēgth of the people, as it were a neſte. And D lyke as eggs, that were layde here and there are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, that dare be ſo bolde, as to touche a fether, that dare open his mouthe, or once whyſper.

Shall the axe boſte it ſelfe, agaynſte hym that heweth therwith? or doth the ſaw make any braggynge agaynſte him that ruleth it. That were euē lyke, as yf the rod dyd exalte it ſelfe agaynſte hym that beareth it: or as though the ſtaffe ſhuld magnyfye it ſelfe, as who ſaye: it were no wod. Therfore ſhal the E
Lorde of Hooſtes ſende him pouertie in his riches, & burne vp his glorye, as it were with a fyre. But the lyght of Iſraell ſhal be that fyre, and his Sayntuary ſhalbe the flamme and it ſhall kyndle, and burne vp hys thornes and breers in one daye, yea ☞ all the glory of hys woddes and feldes ſhalbe conſumed with body and ſoule, And they ſhalbe as an hooſte of men, whoſe ſtanderd bearer fayleth. The trees alſo of his felde whiche remayne, ſhall be of ſuche a nombre, that a chylde maye tell them.

After that day ſhall the remenaūt of Iſrael, & ſuche as are eſcaped out of the houſe of Jacob ſeke no more comforte at him that ſmote the, but with faithfulneſſe and truth ſhal they truſt vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Iſrael. F The remnaunt, euen the Poſteryte of Jacob, ſhall conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For though thy people(O Iſrael(be as the ſande of the ſee, yet ſhall the remnaunt of them conuerte in hym. Perfecte is the iudgement of hym that floweth in ryghteouſneſſe, and therfore the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhall perfectly fulfyll the thing, that he hathe determyned in the myddeſte of the whole worlde. Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Hoſtes: Thou my people that dwelleſte in Syon, be nat a frayed/ for the kynge of the Aſſyryans: He ſhall ſmyte the with a rodde, and ſhall wagge hys ſtaffe at the, as the Egipcians dyd ſome tyme: But ſoone after, ſhall my wrathe and myne indignacion be fulfylled in ẏ deſtruction of them.

G Moreouer/the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhall prepare a ſcourge for hi/lyke as was ẏ ſlaughter of Mydian vpon the rock of Oreb. And he ſhall lyfte vp hys rode ouer the ſee, as he dyd ſomtyme ouer the Egypcyans. Then ſhall hys burthen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and hys yoke from thy necke, yee the ſame yoke ſhalbe corrupt for very fatneſſe. He ſhall come to Aiath/and go thorowe towarde Mygron: at Mychmas ſhall he lay vp hys harneſſe/and go ouer the forde. Gybea ſhalbe theyr reſtyng place, Rhamah ſhall be afrayed, Gybea Saul ſhall flye awaye. The voyce of the noyes of thy horſes(O daughter Gallim)ſhalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anathoth which alſo ſhalbe in trouble. Madmena ſhall tremble for feare, but ẏ cytezyns of Gabinare manly, yet ſhal he remayne at Nob ẏ daye. After that, ſhal he lyft vp his hande againſt the mount of ẏ daughter of Syon/ the hyll of Jeruſalem. But ſe/the Lorde God of Hoſtes ſhall take awaye the proude from thence / with feare. He ſhal hewe downe the proude/and fel the hye mynded. The buſſhes alſo of the wode ſhall he alſo rote out with yron/ and Lybanus ſhall haue a myghtie fall.

¶ He prophecieth of the natiuyte of Christ / ⁊ of his people, of the remnaunt of Iſraell/and of the fayth of the heathen/or Gentyles.

A ¶ CAPI. XI.

AND there ſhall come a rodde forthe of the kynred of Iſaye / and a bloſſome ſhall floryſſhe out of his rote. The ſpiryte of the Lorde ſhall lyght vpon hym / ẏ ſpiryte of wyſdome/ and vnderſtandynge/the ſpiryte of councel/and ſtrength/the ſpiryte of knowledge/ and of the feare of the lorde/ and ſhall make hym feruent in the feare of God.

For he ſhall not gyue ſentence/ after the thynge that ſhal be brought before his eyes nether reproue a matter at the fyrſt hearing but with ryghtuouſnes ſhal he iuge ẏ pore/ and with Juſtyce ſhall he refourme the ſymple of the worlde.

He ſhall ſmyte the worlde with the rod of his mouth, ⁊ with the breath of his mouth ſhall he ſlaye the vngodly. Ryghtuouſnes ſhalbe the gyrdle of his loynes/ ⁊ truth and faythfulnes/the girdynge vp of his raynes The wolfe ſhall dwell with the lambe/ and the Leoparde ſhall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes / Lyons / and catel / ſhall kepe company together/ſo ẏ a lytell chylde ſhall rule them. B The cowe and the beare ſhal fede together, and theyr yonge ones ſhall lye together. The Lyon ſhall eate ſtrawe lyke the oxe, or the cowe. The chylde whyle he ſucketh, ſhal haue a deſyre to the ſerpentes neſt and whē he is weaned, he ſhal put his hande into the Cockatryce denne. No man ſhal do euell to an other, no man ſhal deſtroye another / in all the hyll of my holyneſſe. For the earthe ſhall be full of the knowledge of the Lorde, euen as the ſee floweth ouer with water.

C And in that day ſhal the gentyls enquere after ẏ rote of Jeſſe whiche ſhalbe ſet vp for a token vnto the people/and his dwellynge ſhalbe glorious. At ẏ ſame tyme ſhal ẏ lorde take in hande agayne / to cōquere the remnaunt of his peple(which ſhalbe lefte alyue from the Aſſyrians/Egipcians, Arabians Morians/ Elamites, Caldeys/ Antiochyans/and from the Jlandes of the ſee. And he ſhall ſette vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together ẏ diſperſed of Iſraell/yea and the out caſtes of Juda from ẏ foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim alſo and enemyes of Juda ſhalbe cleane roted out. Ephraym ſhall beare no euell wyll to Juda/and Juda ſhal not hate D Ephraym/ but they both together ſhall flye vpō the ſhulders of the Philiſtines toward the weſt / and ſpoyle them together ẏ dwell towarde the Eaſte. The Idumites/and the Moabytes ſhall let theyr handes fall / and the Ammonytes ſhalbe obediēt vnto them.

The Lorde alſo ſhal cleaue the tunges of the Egypcyans ſee / and with a myghtye wynde ſhal he lyft vp his hande ouer Nilus and ſhall ſmyte his ſeauen ſtremes/⁊ make men go ouer drye ſhod. And thus ſhal there be a waie for his people, that remaineth frõ

the Aſſirians, like as it happened to the Iſraelites, what tyme they departed out of the

is at hand, & her dayes ſhall nat be prolõged.

¶ The retourne of the people from captyuytye. The proſperitye of the people of god, and affliccion of their enemies. The pryde of Babylon.

CAP. XIIII.

BVT THE Lorde wyll be mercyfull A vnto Iacob, and wyll yet choſe Iſrael agayne, and ſet them in theyr owne lande.
Straungers ſhall cleaue vnto them/ and get them to the houſe of Iacob.

The people ſhall take them/ and cary them home with them. And make them to enheryte the house of Iſraell in the lande of the Lorde / that they maye be ſeruauntes and B hande maydens of the Lorde. They ſhall take thoſe pryſoners / whoſe captyues they had bene afore: and rule thoſe that had oppreſſed
thē. Whē the Lorde now ſhal bryng the to reſt, from the trauayle, feare, ⁊ harde bondage that thou waſt laden withal/ then ſhalt thou vſe this mockage vpon the king of Babylon, and ſaye. Howe happeneth it that the oppreſſour leaueth of? Is the golden trybute come to an ende? The Lorde hath broken the cepter of the vngodly/ and the rodde of the lordly. Whiche when he is wroth, ſmyteth the peple with durable ſtrokes/and in his wonders he perſecuteth thē and tameth them continually. And therfore the whole worlde is nowe at reſt and quyetneſſe/and men ſynge for ioye.

C Yea, euen the Fyrre trees/ and Cedres of Libanus reioyſe at thy fall, ſayenge.
Nowe that thou arte layde downe / theare come no mo vp to deſtroye vs. Hell alſo beneth trembleth at thy commyng/ all myghtie men, and Prynces of the earthe/ ſteppe forth before the. All kynges of the earthe ſtande vp from theyr ſeates/that they maye all aunſwere and ſpeake vnto the. Art thou wounded alſo as we? arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layde downe into the pyt /and ſo is the melody of thy inſtrumentes. Mothes be layde vnder the/ and wormes are thy coueringe.

Howe arte thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayer mornynge chylde? howe haſte thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde and arte become weaker then the people?
For thou ſaydeſt in thyne hert. I wyl clyme vp into heuen, and make my ſeate aboue beſyde
the ſtarres of God, I wyl ſyt alſo vpon D the holy mount towarde the North/ I wyll clyme vp aboue the cloudes / ⁊ wylbe lyke the hygheſt of all. Yet thou ſhalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that ſe the ſhall narowly loke vpon the/and thynke in them ſelues ſayenge. Is this the man, that broughte all landes in feare / and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waſte / and layde the cytties to the grounde/ which let not his priſoners go out.

All kynges of the nacyons lye euery one ☞ in his owne house with worſhyppe/ and thou arte caſt out of thy graue lyke a wylde braunche, lyke as deade mens rayment that are ſtryken thorow with the ſwerde/ and go downe to the ſtones of the depe / as a deade E coarſe that is troden vnder fete/ and art not buryed with them. Euen because that thou haſt waſted thy lāde/ and deſtroyed thy people.
The generacyon of the wycked ſhalbe without honour, for euer. Let there a waye be ſought to deſtroye theyr chyldren, that be in theyr fathers wyckednes/ that they come not vp agayne to poſſeſſe the lande, and fyll
the worlde full of enemyes.

I wyl ſtande vp agaynſt them (ſayth the F Lorde of hoſtes) and root out the name and generacion of Babylon (ſayth the lorde) and wyll gyue it to the Otters / and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyl ſwepe them out with the beſome of deſtruction/ ſayth ẏ Lorde of Hoſtes. The Lorde of hoſtes hath ſworne an othe, ſayenge. It ſhall come to paſſe as I haue determyned/ and ſhalbe fulfylled as I haue deuyſed. So that Aſſyrian ſhall I deſtroye in my lande/ and vpon my mountaynes wyll I treade him vnder fote.
Where thorow his yoke ſhal come from thē and his burthen ſhall be taken from theyr ſhoulder. This deuyce hath god taken thorowe the whole worlde/ ⁊ thus is his hande ſtretched out ouer all peple. For yf the lorde of Hoſtes determyn a thyng, who is able to diſanull it? And yf he ſtretch forth his hande who maye holde it in agayne.

The ſame yere that kynge Ahas dyed/ G
God threatened on this maner. Reioyſe not (thou whole Paleſtyna) because the rod of him that beateth the is broken, for out of the ſerpentes rote / there ſhal come an adder/ ⁊ his frute ſhalbe a fyre worme. But ☞ ẏ firſt borne of the pore ſhalbe fed/ and the ſymple ſhall dwell in ſafetie. Thy rote alſo wyll I deſtroye with honger / and it ſhall kepe the remnaunt. Mourne thou porte/ wepe thou cytie, and feare thou (O whole Paleſtyna) for there ſhall come from ẏ North, a ſmoke whoſe power no man may abyde. Who ſhal then anſwere the meſſangers of ẏ Gentyles For the Lorde hathe ſtablyſhed Syon and the poore of hys people that be therin, do put theyr truſt in hym.

¶ A prophecye agaynſt Moab.

CAPI. XV.

THYS is the heuy burthen vpō Moab: A Ar of Moab was deſtroyed in the nyght ſeaſō: Kir alſo ĩ Moab was deſtroyed and peryſhed in ẏ nyght. They went vp to the ydols house, euen to Dibon to ẏ hye places, to wepe for Nebo, ⁊ Moab did mourne for Medba: All theyr heds, were balled, ⁊ al

theyr

theyꝛ beardes ſhauen. In theyꝛ ſtretes are B they gyꝛded aboute with ſacke clothe. In al the toppes of theyꝛ houſes and ſtretes ſhalbe nothynge but mournynge and wepynge Heſebon and Eleale ſhall crye, that theyꝛ voyce ſhalbe hearde vnto Jahaz. The woꝛthyes alſo of Moab ſhal bleare out and cry foꝛ very ſoꝛowe of theyꝛ myndes: wo ſhall my herte be foꝛ Moabs ſake. They ſhal flye vnto the cytie of Zoar, which is lyke a fayꝛe
C yong bullocke of thꝛe yere olde, foꝛ they ſhal all go vp to Luth, wepynge. Euen ſo by the waye towarde Hoꝛonaim they ſhal make lamentacyon foꝛ the hurte. Foꝛ the waters of Nimrim ſhalbe dꝛyed vp, by reaſon wherof the graſſe is withꝛed, the herbes deſtroyed / and the grene thinges gone. Foꝛ the reſidue that he hathe wone, they are ſoꝛy. As foꝛ their ſubſtaunce, the enemyes haue caryed them D to the bꝛoke of the wyllowes. Foꝛ the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim and vnto Beer Elim was there no thynge but mournynge, becauſe the waters of Dimon were full of bloude: foꝛ I ſhall ſende moꝛe bloude vpon Dimon, and lyons vpon the remnaunt of the lande, and on thē that are eſcaped from Moab.

¶ The deſtruccyon of Moab.

¶ CAPI. XVI.

☞ S☞ENDE the Loꝛde of the woꝛlde a A lambe, from the rocke that lieth toward the deſerte / vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. Foꝛ as foꝛ the daughters of Moab, they ſhall be as a tremblynge byꝛde, that is put out of her neſt, foꝛ they ſhall carye them vnto Arnon: gather youre councell, come together, couer vs with youre ſhadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde the chaſed and bewꝛaye not them that are fled / let my ☞ perſecuted people dwel among you ☞ Moab,
B be thou theyꝛ refuge agaynſt the deſtroyer:
foꝛ the aduerſarye is bꝛought to nought
the robber is vndone, the tyꝛaunt is wayſted out of the lande. And in mercy ſhal the ſeate be pꝛepared, and he ſhall ſyt vpon it in the truth, in the tabernacle of Dauyd, iudgyng and ſekyng iudgement, & makyng haſt vnto ryghtuouſnes. We haue herde of ẏ pꝛyde of Moab, he is very pꝛoude, pꝛeſumptuous arrogant, & full of indignacyon, and vayne are hys lyes. Therfoꝛe ſhal Moab make lamentacyon becauſe of the Moabites (that ☞ Becauſe of the ☞ foundacyons of the cytie that is made of bꝛycke, ſhal ye complayne:

☞ euen ☞ ye lame people that are left

Foꝛ ☞ the vines of Heſebon are cut downe ☞
As foꝛ the vyne of Sibma, the Loꝛdes of the C Heithen haue bꝛoken downe hyꝛ pꝛyncipall bꝛaunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer they went on wanderynge vnto the wylderneſſe.
Hyꝛ goodly bꝛaunches were thꝛowen downe, as they went ouer the ſee. Therfoꝛe wyll I mourne foꝛ Jazer, and foꝛ the vyne of Sibma. I wyl poure my teares vpon the O Heſebon and Eleale foꝛ the crye of thyne enemyes is fallen vpon thy ſommer fruites and vpon thyne harueſte. The myꝛth and there is taken awaye out of the plentyfull felde / and in the vineyardes there ſhalbe no ioye noꝛ gladneſſe.

The treader ſhall treade out no wyne in D
the pꝛeſſes, the ſong of their mery chere haue
I layed downe. Wherfoꝛe my bowels ſhall romble lyke an harpe foꝛ Moabs ſake, and myne inwarde partꝭ foꝛ the cyties ſake that is made of bꝛycke. And it ſhall come to paſſe that whan it is ſene that Moab ſhalbe made wery of his hyll chapels / ☞ he ſhall come ☞ to hys temple to pꝛay, but he ſhall nat be able.
So then / this is the ſayeng that the Loꝛde hathe ſpoken concernyng Moab ſēs that tyme. But nowe the Loꝛde hath ſpoken ſaying: In thꝛe yerꝭ which ſhalbe as ☞ the E yeares of an hyꝛed ſeruaunt / ſhall the gloꝛy of Moab be turned to confuſion, thoꝛowe out all his multitude, whiche is very great:
And that whiche remayneth, ſhall be verye ſmall and feble.

¶ A pꝛophecye agaynſte Damaſcus.

CAPI. XVII.

THYS is the heuye burthen vpon Damaſcus: A Beholde, Damaſcus is taken

Lorde God of Iſraell.

B Then ſhall mā turne agayne to hys maker, and his eyes ſhall haue reſpecte to the holy one of Iſrael. As for the alters whiche are his owne handye worke, he ſhall not regarde them, and the thynges that his fyngers

ſhall be ſorowe without hope of comforte.
☞ ☞ Wo ſhalbe to yͤ multetude of muche people, whiche ſhal make a ſounde lyke the noiſe of the ſee: And the violence of the nacions/C whiche ſhal rage lyke yͤ ruſhyng in of many waters: Euen lyke many waters ſhall the people rage. God ſhall rebuke hym/and he ſhall flye farre of. He ſhalbe chaced awaye lyke as drye ſtrawe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde, and lyke a thyng that turneth before the ſtorme. At euē beholde, there is trouble: and or euer it be mornynge, lo/he is gone. This is the porcion of them that oppreſſe vs, ⁊ the lot of thē that robbe vs.

¶ The prophecye agaynſt Egypte.

CAPI. XIX.

THE heuye burthen of Egypte: Beholde/ A ☞ the Lorde rydeth vpon a ☞ ſwyfte cloude/and ſhall come into Egypte/and the ydols of Egypte ſhal tremble at the they ſhall ſeke councell at ydols and at ſorcerers/at workers with ſpretes and at ſothſayers.

And the Egyptiās wyl I gyue ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruel Lorde/and a myghtye kynge ſhal haue dominion ouer them/ſayeth the Lorde God of hoſtes.
The waters of the ſee ſhal fayle, ⁊ the ryuer ſhall decreaſe and be dryed vp. The waters ſhalbe drawen out: the ryuers of Egypte ſhalbe emptyed and dryed vp, the redes and flagges ſhalbe cut downe.
B The graſſe in the ryuer ⁊ by the ryuers bancke/and al that groweth by yͤ ryuer ſhal wither awaye/and be brought to naught.
The fyſſhers alſo ſhall mourne/and al they

The Princes of Zoan are become fooles
C the Prīces of Noph are diſceiued, they haue

they ſhal crye vnto the Lord becauſe of ſuch
as trouble them, ⁊ he ſhal ſende them a ſauiour ⁊ a great man to delyuer them.

D And the Lorde ſhalbe knowen in Egypte, and the Egyptiās ſhall knowe the Lorde in that daye, and do ſacrifice and oblacion: yee they ſhall vowe a vowe vnto the Lorde, and perfourme it. The Lorde alſo ſhall ſmyte Egypte ſore/ and heale them agayne, and they ſhalbe conuerted vnto the Lorde, and E he ſhalbe intreated of them, and ſhall heale them. In that daye ſhall there be a comen way out of Egypte into Aſſyria/ and Aſſyria ſhall come into Egypte/ and Egypte into Aſſyria/ ſo that the Egypcyans and the Aſſyrians ſhall ſerue the Lorde together.
In that day ſhal the nacion of Iſrael be the

Yet remembred he the olde tyme of Moyſes and his people. * Howe he brought them from the water of the ſee / & as a ſhepherde doth with his ſhepe, howe he had geuen his holy ſpiryte amonge them howe he had led Moſes by the ryght hande with his glorious arme / howe he had deuided the water before theym (wherby he gat hym ſelfe an euerlaſtyng name) howe he led them in the depe / as an horſ is ledde in the playne that they ſhulde not ſtumble. The ſpirite of the Lord led them as a tame beaſt goeth in the felde.

COME out of Jeruſalem / yee ſtronge chyldren of Ben Jamin: blowe vp the trõpettes ye * Tecuytes, ſet vp a token vnto Bethcaram, for a plage and a great miſery pepeth out from the North.

But ſhede it out vpon ŷ childrē that are without, and vpon all yonge men: yea/the man muſt be taken pryſonner with the wyfe/and the aged with the crepel. Their houſes with their landes and wyues ſhalbe turned vnto ſtraungers/when I ſtretche out myne hāde vpon the inhabitours of this lande/ſayeth Esay.lvi.c Jere.viii.b the Lorde. ‡ For from ŷ leaſt vnto the moſt, they hange al vpon couetouſnes, and from the Prophete vnto the preeſt/they go all aboute with falſhede and lyes.

D * And beſyde that/they heale the hurte of Esay.lvi.d Jere.viii.b Eze.xiii.b my people with ſwete wordes/ſayeng: peace peace/whē there is no peace at al. Therfore they muſt be aſhamed/for they haue cōmytted abhomynacion. But howe ſhuld they be aſhamed/when they knowe nothing, nether Jere.3.a of ſhame nor good nurtour? * And therfore they ſhall fall amonge the ſlayne, and in the houre when I ſhall vyſet them/they ſhal be brought downe/ſayeth the Lorde.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde: go into the ſtreates/conſydre and make inquiſicyon for the olde waye: and if it be the good and ryght way, then go therin/that ye may fynde reſt for your ſoules. But they ſay: we wyll not walke therin/and I wyll ſet watchemen E ouer you/⁊ therfore take hede vnto the voice of the trompet. But they ſaye: we wyll not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentiles/and thou congregacion ſhalte knowe, what I haue deuyſed for them. Heare thou earthe alſo: beholde, * I wyl cauſe a plage to come vpon this people/euen the fruyte of theyre owne ymagynacyons.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my Esay.i.b Jere.vii.c wordes and to my lawe/but abhorred them Wherfore/* brynge ye me incenſe from Saba/and ſwete ſmellynge Calamus from far countrees? Your burnt offerynges diſpleaſe me/and I reioyce not in your ſacrifyces.

And therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde: beholde/I wyll make this people fall/⁊ there ſhall fall from amonge theym/the father with the chyldren/one neyghbour ſhall peryſſhe with an other.

F Jere.1.c and.v.c Abac.1.c Thus ſayeth the Lorde: Beholde/there ſhall come a people from the Northe, and a great people ſhall aryſe from the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes ſhal they be weapened. It is a rough and fearce people, ⁊ an vnmercyful people, theyr voice roareth lyke the ſee, they ryde vpon horſes well apoynted to the batayle agaynſte the, O daughter Sion. The crye of them haue we herde. Our armes are feble, heuyneſſe and ſorowe is come vpon vs/as vpon a woman trauaylynge with chylde. No man go forth into the felde/no man cōmeth vpon the hye ſtrete: for the ſwerde and feare of the enemy is on euery ſyde.

G Wherfore, gyrde a ſacke cloth about the (O thou daughter of my people) ſprynckle Amos.8.b thy ſelfe with aſſhes, * mourne and wepe bytterly as vpon thy onely beloued ſonne. Psa.xiiii.a and.liii.a Roma.i.c * For they are all vnfaythful and fallen awaye/they hange vpon fylthy lucre/they are cleane braſſe and yron/for they hurt and deſtroye euery man. The bellous are brente in the fyre/the leade is conſumed/the melter melteth in vayne/for the euyll is not taken away from the. Therefore do they call them naughty ſyluer, becauſe the Lorde hath caſt them out.

CAPI. VII.

A THESE are the wordes that God ſpake vnto IEREMY: * Stande vnder Jere.17.d and.xxvi.a the gate of the Lordes houſe, and crye out theſe wordes there with a loude voyce, ⁊ ſaye: Heare the worde of the Lorde all ye of Juda, that go in at thys dore/to worſhyppe the Lord. Thus ſayeth ŷ Lorde of hoſtes ŷ god of Iſrael. * Amēde your wayes ⁊ your Esay.i.c Jere.xxvi.c coūcels, ⁊ I wyll let you dwel in this place. Truſt not in falſe lieng wordes, ſaieng: here is the tēple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is ŷ temple of the Lorde.

For yf ye wyll amende youre wayes and B councels, ⁊ yf ye wyl iudge ryght betwyxte a man and his neyghbour: yf ye wyl not oppreſſe the ſtraunger, the fatherleſſe, & the wydowe: yf ye wyl not ſhede innocent bloud in this place: yf ye wyll not cleue to ſtraunge goddes to youre owne deſtruccyon: then wyl I let you dwel in this place / yea, in the lande yͤ I gaue afore tyme vnto youre fathers for euer. But take hede, ye truſte in councels / yͤ begyle you & do you no good. For when ye haue ſtollen, murthered, commited aduoutry & periury. When ye haue offred vnto Baal / folowynge ſtraunge & vnknowne goddes. Then come ye, and ſtande before me in this houſe (which hath my name geuē vnto it) & ſaye: Tuſhe, we are abſolued quyt / thoughe we haue done all theſe abhominacyons.

What? thynke you this houſe yͤ beareth my name / is a denne of theues? And theſe thynges are not done priuely / but before myne eyes / ſayeth the Lorde. Go to my place in Siloh, where to I gaue my name afore tyme / and loke well what I dyd to the ſame place for the wickednes of my people of Iſrael. And nowe though, ye haue done all theſe dedes (ſayeth the Lorde) and I my ſelfe roſe vp euer by tymes to warne you & to commen with you, yet wolde ye not heare me. I called, ye wolde not anſwere. And therfore / euē as I haue done vnto Siloh, ſo wyl I do to this houſe, yͤ my name is geuen vnto (and that ye put youre truſte in) ye vnto the place that I haue geuen to you and youre fathers. And I ſhal thruſt you out of my ſyght, as I haue caſte out all youre brethren the whole ſede of Ephraim.

Therfore, thou ſhalte not praye for this people / thou ſhalte neyther geue thankes / nor byd prayer for them: thou ſhalte make no interceſſion to me for them, for in no wiſe wyll I heare the. Seyſt thou not what they do in yͤ cyties of Iuda, & in the ſtretes of Ieruſalem. The chyldren gather ſtyckes / the fathers kyndle the fyre / the women kneade the doughe / to bake cakes for the Quene of heauen.

They poure out drynke offrynges vnto ſtraūge goddes / to prouoke me vnto wrath Howbeit they hurt not me (ſayeth the Lord) but rather confounde / and ſhame thē ſelues.

And therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: beholde / my wrathe and my indignacyon ſhalbe poured out vpon this place / vpon men & catell vpon the trees in the felde and frute of the lande / and it ſhal burne ſo / that no man may quenche it.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hooſtes, the God of Iſrael: Heape vp youre burnte offrynges with youre ſacryfyces / and eate the fleſhe. But when I brought youre fathers out of Egypte, I ſpake no worde vnto them of burnt offrynges and ſacryfyces: but this I commaunded them / ſayenge: * herken and obeye my voyce / and I ſhalbe youre God, and ye ſhall be my people: ſo that ye walcke in all the wayes / whiche I haue commaunded you / that ye maye proſpere.

But they were not obedyent / they inclyned not theyr eares there vnto, but went after theyr owne ymaginacions and after the mocyons of theyr owne wycked herte / and ſo turned them ſelues awaye / and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done / from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypte / vnto this daye.

Neuertheleſſe / I ſente vnto them my ſeruauntes al the prophetes: I roſe vp earely / and ſent them worde / yet wolde they not herken / nor offre me theyr eares, but were obſtinate and worſe then theyr fathers. And thou ſhalte nowe ſpeake al theſe wordes vnto them, but they ſhall not heare the: thou ſhalte crye vpon them / but they ſhal not anſwere the. Therfore, ſhalte thou ſaye vnto them: this is the people, that neyther heareth the voyce of the Lorde theyr God / nor receaueth his correccyon. * Faythfulneſſe & trueth is cleane roted out of their mouth.

* Wherefore cut of thyne hearre, & caſte it awaye, take vp a complaynte on hye, for the Lorde hathe caſt awaye, and ſcatred the people that he is diſpleaſed withall. For the chyldren of Iuda haue done euyll in my ſyght, ſayeth the Lorde. * They haue ſet vp theyr abhominacyōs, in the houſe that hath my name, and haue defyled it. They haue alſo bulided an aulter at * Topheth, which is in the valley of the chyldren of Hēnom: that they myght burne theyr ſonnes and daughters, whiche I neuer cōmaunded the neither came it euer in my thought. And therfore beholde, the dayes ſhal come (ſayth the Lorde) that it ſhal nomore be called Topheth, or the valley of the chyldren of Hēnom, but yͤ valley of ſlaughter, * for in Topheth, they ſhalbe buryed, becauſe they ſhal els haue no rowme. Yea, the deade bodyes of this people ſhalbe eaten vp of the foules of the ayre & wylde beſtes of yͤ earth, and no man ſhal fray them awaye. * And as for the voyce of myrth & gladnes of the cities of Iuda, & Ieruſalem, the voyce of the brydegrome, & of the bryde: I wyll make them ceaſſe, for the lande ſhalbe deſolate.

¶ The deſtruccyon of the Jewes. The Lorde moueth the people to amendement, rebukynge them for theyr ſynnes. He reprehendeth the lyinge doctryne of the Prophetes & preſtes.

CAPI. VIII.

A AT THE ſame tyme ſayeth the Lorde the bones of the kynges of Juda / the bones of hys prynces, the bones of the preſtes and prophetes / yee, and the bones of the cytezins of Jeruſalem, ſhal be brought out of theyr graues and layed agaynſte the [illegible] * Sunne / the Moone and all the heauenly hooſt: whom they loued, whom they ſerued, whom they came after, whom they ſought and worſhypped. They ſhall nether be gathered together nor buried, but ſhal lye vpõ the earthe / to theyr ſhame and deſpyſynge. [illegible] * And all they that remayne of thys wycked generacyon, ſhall deſyre rather to dye then to lyue: wherſoeuer they remayne / and where as I ſcatre them, ſayeth the Lorde of B hoſtes. Thys ſhalte thou ſaye vnto them alſo. Thus ſayeth the Lorde. Do men fall ſo, that they aryſe not vp agayne? And turne they ſo farre awaye / that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is thys people and Jeruſalem gone ſo farre backe / that they turne not agayne. They are euer the longer the more obſtynate, and wyll nat be conuerted.

[illegible] * For I haue loked, and conſydered: but there is no man that ſpeaketh a good worde there is no man that taketh repentaunce for hys ſynne, that wyll ſo muche as ſaye: wherfore / haue I done thys? But euery man (as ſoone as he is turned backe) runneth forthe ſtyll, lyke a wylde horſe in a battayll. The Storke knoweth his appoynted C tyme / the Turtle doue the Swalowe and the Crane conſydre the tyme of theyr trauayll, * but my people wyll not knowe the Esaye.i.a. tyme of the punyſhment of the Lorde. How dare ye ſaye then: we are wyſe, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde, the dyſceatfull penne of the ſcrybes, ſetteth forth lyes: therfore ſhal the wyſe be confounded, they ſhalbe afrayed & taken: Deu. iiii.a Psal. xix.a for lo, * they haue caſte out the worde of the Lorde: what wyſdome can then be amonge them? Wherfore, I wyll geue theyr wyues D vnto aleauntes, & their feldes to deſtroyers. Eze.vi.b.

* For from the loweſte vnto the hyeſte / they folowe all fylthy lucre: & from the Prophete vnto the preſte, they deale all with lyes. Esa. lvi.c Jere.vi.b. Eze.xiii.b. * Neuertheleſſe, they heale the hurte of my people with ſwete wordes, ſayenge: peace / peace, where there is no peace at all.

Fye for ſhame, howe abhomynable thynges do they? and yet they be nat aſhamed / yee, they knowe of no ſhame.

* Wherfore, in the tyme of theyr vyſitacyon, they ſhall fal among the deed bodies, ſayeth the Lorde. Jere. vii.b.

Moreouer, I wyll gather them in (ſayeth the Lorde) ſo that there ſhal not be one grape vpon the vine nether one fygge vpon the fygge tre, and the leaues ſhalbe plucte of.

Then wyll I cauſe them to departe, and ſaye: why prolonge we the tyme? Let vs E gather oure ſelues together, and go into the ſtronge cytys, there ſhall we be in reſte: For the Lorde oure God hath put vs to ſylence, and geuen vs water myxte with gall / to drynke: because we haue ſynned agaynſte hym.

Jere.xiiii.d * We loked for peace, and we fare not the F better, we wayted for the tyme of healthe / and lo / here is nothynge but trouble.

The noyſe of hys horſſes is hearde from Dan, the whole lande is afraied at the neyenge of hys ſtronge horſſes: for they are come in / & haue deuoured the lande, with al that is in it: the cytyes, and thoſe that dwell therin. * Moreouer, I wyl ſende Cockatrices Leui.26.d. and ſerpentes amonge you (which wyll not be charmed) and they ſhal byte you, ſayeth the Lorde.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuyneſſe G vexeth my hert: for lo, the voyce of ye cryeng of my people is herde from a farre countre. Is not the Lorde in Sion? Is not the kyng in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me. (ſhal the Lorde ſay) with theyr ymages and foolyſh ſtraunge faſhyons? The harueſt is gone, the Sommer hathe an ende / & we are not helped. I am ſore vexed, becauſe of the hurt of my people. I am heuy and abaſhed, for there is no more Triacle at Gylead, and there is no phyſycyon / that can heale the hurte of my people.

¶ The complaynt and bewayleng of the prophete, the malyce of the people. In the knowledge of God ought we onely to reioyſe. The vncircumcyſyon of the herte.

CAPI. IX.

A O who * wyll geue my heade water Esa.xxii.a ynough, and a wel of teares for myne eyes: that I maye wepe nyghte and daye: for the ſlaughter of my people? Wolde God that I had a cotage ſome where farre from folcke / that I myght leaue my people / and go from thẽ: for they be all aduoutrers and a ſhrynckynge ſorte. They bende theyr tunges lyke bowes, to ſhote out lyes. As for the trueth they maye nothynge awaye withall in the worlde. For they go from one

wyckednes

Jere. xii. b. wyckednes to a nother, and wyl nat knowe me, ſayeth the Lorde. B * Yee, one muſt kepe hym ſelfe from another, no man may ſafely Mat. x. c. Mich. 7. a. truſt his owne brother: for one brother vndermyneth another, one neyghboure begyleth another. Yee, one diſſembleth with another, and they deale with no trueth.

Pſal. 11. a. * They haue practyſed theyr tunges to lye, and taken great paynes to do myſchefe. Thou ſyteſt in the myddes of a dyſceatfull people/ whiche for very diſſemblynge falſhede wyll nat knowe me, ſayeth the Lorde.

C Therfore/thus ſayth the Lorde of Hoſtes: beholde/ I wyll melte them, and trye them/ for what ſhulde I els do to my people.

Prou. 12. a. Pſal. 11. a. * Theyr tunges are lyke ſharpe arowes, to ſpeake diſceate. With theyr mouth they ſpeake peaceable to theyr neyghboure/ but preuely they laye wayte for hym. Jere. v. d. * Shulde I nat punyſh them for theſe thynges, ſayth the Lorde? Or ſhulde I nat be auenged of any ſuche people as this? Upon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacyon and ſorowfull crye, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wyldernesse. Namely, howe they are ſo brent vp, þ no man goeth there any more. Yee, a man ſhall nat heare one beaſtes crye there. D Byrdes and catel are all gone from thence. Pſal. 79. a. Mich. iii. d. * I wyll make Jeruſalē alſo an heape of ſtones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyll make the cyties of Juda ſo waſte, that no man ſhall dwell therin. What man is ſo wyſe, as to vnderſtande this? Or to whom hathe the Lorde ſpoken by mouth, that he maye ſhewe this, and ſaye: O thou lande, why peryſheſt thou ſo? Wherfore art thou ſo brent vp, and lyke a wyldernes, that no mā goeth thorowe? Yee, the Lorde hym ſelfe tolde the ſame vnto them, that forſoke his lawe/and kepte nat the thynge that he gaue them in commaundemente, nether lyued ther after: Deu. xxix. b Jo. xxiiii. c. * but folowed the wickednes of theyr owne hertes, and ſerued ſtraunge Goddes/as theyr fathers taught them.

E Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hoſtes, the God of Iſrael: Beholde, * I wyll fede this people with wormwod, and geue Deu. xxix. b Jer. xxiii. c. them gall to drynke. * I wyl ſcater the alſo among the Heathen, whom nether they nor Deut. xx. f. theyr fathers haue knowne: * I wyl ſende a ſwearde amonge them, to perſecute them, vntyll I brynge thē to naught. Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lord of Hoſtes: take that ye cal for mournyng wyues, and ſende for wyſe women: that they come ſhortely, and ſynge a mournynge ſonge of you: that þ teares may fall out of our eyes/and that our eye liddes maye guſſhe out of water.

F For there is a lamentable noyſe hearde of Sion: O howe are we ſo ſore deſtroyed? O how are we ſo pyteouſly confounded? We muſte forſake oure owne naturall countre, and we are ſhut out of our owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women) and let youre eares regarde the wordes of hys mouthe/ that ye maye lerne your daughters to mourne, and that euery one maye teache her neyghboreſſe, to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is clymynge vp in at oure windowes, he is come into oure houſes, to deſtroye the chylde before the dore, & the yonge man in the ſtrete.

G But tell thou playnely/thus ſayeth the Lorde. Jere. vii. and. viii. * The deed bodyes of men ſhall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde/and as the heye after the mower, and ther ſhalbe no man to take them vp. Thus ſayeth the Lorde: Let not the wyſe man reioyſe in hys wyſdome/ nor the ſtronge man in hys ſtrength/nether the ryche man in his rycheſſe. Eſay. lv. i. Cor. i. d. ii. Cor. x. d. * But who ſo wyll reioyſe, let him reioyſe in thys, that he vnderſtandeth/and knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, whiche do mercy, equyte and ryghteouſneſſe vpon the earthe. Math. ix. and. xii. a. Oſee. vi. b. * Therfore, haue I pleaſure in ſuch thynges/ ſayeth the Lorde. Beholde/the tyme commeth (ſayeth the Lorde) that I wyll vyſet all them, whoſe foreſkynne is vncyrcumſyſed. Jere. xxv. Jere. iii. a. and. vi. b. Roma. ii. The Egypciās, the Jewes, the Edomytes, the Ammonytes/the Moabytes, * and the ſhauen Madyanytes, that dwell in the wyldernes. * For all the Gentyles are vncyrcumcyſed in the fleſſhe/ but all the houſe of Iſrael are vncyrcumcyſed in the herte.

Then the Lorde ſayde vnto me agayne/Preache this in the cyties of Juda ⁊ rounde B aboute Jeruſalẽ/ and ſay: here the wordes of his couenaunt/ that ye may kepe them/
For I haue diligẽtly exhorted your fathers, euer ſence the time that I brought them out of the land of Egypt/ vnto this day. I gaue them warnyng by tymes, ſaying: herke vnto my voyce.* Neuertheleſſe/ they wold nat Iere.xiii.b
obeye me/ nor enclyne theyr eares vnto me/but folowed the wycked ymaginacyons of

theyr owne hertes. And therfore, I haue accuſed them as tranſgreſſours of all the wordes of this couenaunt/that I gaue them to kepe/ whiche they (notwithſtandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde ſayde vnto me/ It is founde out / that whole Juda & all theſe Cytezyns of Jeruſalem are gone backe. They haue turned them ſelues to the blaſphemyes of theyr forefathers, whiche had no luſt to here my wordes. Euen lyke wyſe haue theſe alſo folowed ſtraunge goddes, and worſhypped C them. The houſe of Iſrael and Juda haue broken my couenaunt, whiche I made with theyr fathers.

Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lord: Beholde I wyl ſende a plage vpon them, which they ſhall not be able to eſcape: and though they Zacha.vii.b crye vnto me, I wyl not here them. * Then ſhal the townes of Juda, and the citezins of Deute.32.c Jeruſalem go, and cal vpon * theyr goddes vnto whom they made theyr oblacions: but they ſhall not be able to helpe them in tyme Jere.ii.d of theyr trouble. * For as many cytyes as thou haſt, O Juda, ſo many goddes haſte þ had alſo. And loke howe many ſtretes there be in the, (O Jeruſalem) ſo many ſhamefull aulters haue ye ſet vp, to offre vpon them Jere.vii.b and.xv.a vnto Baall. * Therfore, praye not thou for this people / byd neyther prayſe nor prayer for them, for thoughe they crye vnto me in theyr trouble, yet wyll I not heare them.

O thou beloued, why doeſt thou ſo ſhamefull greate blaſphemyes in my houſe? euen as though * that holy fleſſh myght abſolue Aggei.ii.b the, ſpecially when thou haſt made thy boſte Jere.xvii.b of thy wyckednes. * The Lorde called the a Mat.vii.b grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a frutefull one/ Roma.xi.c a goodly one: but nowe that there is a contrary report of the abrode, he wyl burne the vp, and deſtroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hooſtes that planted the, hath deuyſed a plage for the (O thou houſe of Iſraell and Juda) for the euyl that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrathe, in that ye dyd ſeruyce D vnto Baal.

Thus (O Lorde) haue I lerned of the, and vnderſtand it, for thou haſt ſhewed me their ymaginacions. * But I am (as a meke lambe) Eſaye.liii.b that is caryed away to be ſlayne, not knowynge, that they had deuyſed ſuche a councel Jere.xx.b agaynſt me, ſayeng: ‡ We wyll deſtroye his meate with wood, and dryue hym out of the lande of the lyuyng: that his name ſhal neuer be thought vpon. Therfore, * I wyl beſeche Jere.xx.a and.xvii.c the nowe (O Lorde of hoſtes) thou ryghtuous iudge, thou that trieſt the raynes and the hertes: let me ſe the auenged of them, for vnto the haue I commytted my cauſe. The Lorde therfore ſpake thus of the cytezins of Anathoth, that ſought to ſley me, ſayeng: * Preache not vnto vs in the name of the Lorde, or els thou ſhalt dye of our handes. Thus (I ſay) ſpake the Lorde of Hooſtes. Beholde, I wyll vyſet you. Your yong men ſhall periſh with the ſwerde, your ſonnes & your daughters ſhall vtterly dye of hongre, ſo that none ſhall remayne. For vpon the cytezins of Anathoth wyll I brynge a plage, euen the yere of theyr viſitacion.

¶ The Prophete maruayleth greately at the proſperite of the wycked, all thoughe he confeſſe God to be ryghtuous. The Jewes are forſaken of the Lorde. He ſpeaketh agaynſt Curates and Preachers that ſeduce the people. The Lorde threateneth deſtruccyon vnto the nacyons that bordered vpon Jewrye, whiche troubled and vexed it.

CAPI. XII.

A O LORDE, thou art more ryghtuous, then that I ſhulde diſpute with the. Neuertheleſſe, let me talke with the in thinges reaſonable. ‡ Howe happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is ſo proſperous? and that it goeth ſo well with them, whiche (without any ſhame) offende and lyue in wickednes? Thou planteſt them, they take rote, they growe, and brynge forth frute. They boſte much of the / yet wilt thou not punyſh them. But thou Lorde (to whom I am well knowen) thou that haſt ſene, and proued my herte, ‡ take them awaye, lyke as a flocke is caryed to the ſlaughter houſe, and apoynte them for the daye of ſlaughter.

Howe long ſhal the lande mourne, * and all the herbes of the felde periſh, for the wyckednes of them that dwell therin. Jere.14.a

B The catell and the byrdes are gone / yet ſaye they tuſſhe, * God wyll not deſtroye vs vtterly.

Seynge, thou arte wery in running with the foote men, howe wylte thou then runne with horſes? In a peaceable ſure lande thou mayeſt be ſafe / but howe wylte thou do in the furyous pryde of Jordane? For thy brethren and thy kynred haue all together deſpiſed the / and cryed out vpon the in thyne abſence. * Beleue them not / thoughe they ſpeake fayre wordes to the. As for me (I ſaye) I haue forſaken myne owne dwellyng place, and lefte myne heritage. My lyfe alſo that I loue ſo well, haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemyes. * Myne herytage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in the wod. It cryed out vpon me, therfore, haue I forſaken it. Myne herytage is vnto me, as a ſpeckled a ſpeckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerſe coloures is vpon it. Go hence, and gather all the beaſtes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp.

C Eſa.lvi.c. Eſa.v.a. * Dyuerſe herdmen haue broken downe my vineyarde, and troden vpō my porcion. Of my pleaſaunt porcyon, they haue made a wyldernes and deſerte. They haue layed it waſte: and now that it is waſt, it ſygheth vnto me. Yee, the whole lande lyeth waſte, and no man regardethe it. The deſtroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for the ſwearde of the Lorde dothe conſume from the one ende of the lande to the other / and no fleſh hathe reſt. They haue ſowen wheat and reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in poſſeſſion, but it doth thē no good. and ye ſhall be confounded of youre owne wynnynges, becauſe of the great wrathe of the Lorde.

D Thus ſayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euyl neyghbours, that laye hande on myne herytage / whiche I haue geuen my people of Iſrael. Beholde, I wyll plucke them (namely Iſrael) out of theyr lande / and put out the houſe of Iuda from amonge them. Deut.iiii.f. and.xxx.a. Eſa.liiii.b. [illegible] * And when I haue roted them out I wyll be at one with thē agayne, and I wyll haue mercy vpon them: ‡ and bryng them agayne, euery man to his owne heritage, and in to his lande. And if they (namely that trouble my people) wyl lerne the wates of them / to ſweare by my name. The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to ſweare by Baal) then ſhall they be rekened among my people. Mat.xxii.b ‡ But yf they wyl nat obey, then wyll I rote out the ſame folke, and deſtroye them / ſayeth the Lorde.

¶ The deſtruccyon of the Iewes is prefygured, and theyr ſparſinge abrode. Why Iſrael was receaued to be the people of God, and why they were forſaken.

CAPI. XIII.

A THus ſayeth the Lorde vnto me go thy waye / and get me a lynen breche / and gyrde it aboute thy loynes / and let it nat be wet. Then I got me a breche / accordyng to the commaundement of the Lorde, and put it aboute my loynes. After thys the Lorde ſpake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou haſt prepared and put aboute the / and get the vp, & go vnto Euphrates, & hyde it ī a hole of the rocke. So went I, and hyd it at Euphrates, as the Lorde cōmaunded me. And it happened longe after this, ꝧ the Lorde ſpake vnto me: Up, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the breche from thence which I cōmaunded the to hyde ther. Then went I to Euphrates, and dygged vp / and toke the breche from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the breche was corrupt ſo that it was profytable for nothynge.

B Then ſayde the Lorde vnto me: Thus ſayeth the Lorde: Euen ſo wyll I corrupte the pryde of Iuda, and the hye mynde of Ieruſalem. Thys people is a wycked people, * they wyll not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacyons of their owne herte and hang vpon ſtraunge Goddes, them they ſerue and worſhyppe: and therfore they ſhalbe as this breche, that ſerueth for nothynge. For lyke as the man of Inde maye chaunge hys ſkynne / and the cat of the mountayne her ſpottes: ſo may ye that be exercyſed in euyl / do good. Therfore wyll I ſcatre you, lyke as the ſtoble yͭ is taken away with yͤ ſouth wynde. Let the noyſe be herde out of theyr houſes, when the murtherer commeth ſodenly vpon them.

* For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, Jere.xi.d. and layed ſnares for my fete. Yet Lord, thou knoweſt all theyr councell, that they haue deuiſed, to ſleye me. ¶ He prophecyeth the deſtruccyon of Jeruſalem, for the contempt and deſpyſynge of the worde of God.

CAPI. XIX.

THVS ſayde the Lorde: Go thy waye A and bye the an erthen pytcher / and bryng forth the Senatours and chefe preaſtes into the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, whiche lyeth before the dore that is made of brycke / and ſhewe them there the wordes, that I ſhall tell the, and ſaye thus vnto them. Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda / and ye cyteſyns of Jeruſalem. ‡ Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hoſtes the God of Iſrael: 1.Reg.iii.c. Jeremi.ix.a ‡ Beholde I wyll brynge ſuche a plage vpon this place / that the eares of all that heare it, ſhall glowe. And that becauſe they haue forſaken me / and vnhalowed this place, and haue offred in it vnto ſtraunge goddes: whom neyther they / theyr fathers, nor the kynges of Juda haue knowen. B They haue fylled thys place alſo with the bloude of innocẽtes Deut.xii.d and.xviii.b. Psal.cvi.e Eze.xvi.d. and.xx.d. * for they haue ſett vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne theyr chyldren for a burnt offerynge vnto Baal, whiche I neyther commaunded / nor charged them, neyther thought once there vpon. Beholde therfore Jere.vii.d. * the tyme commeth (ſayeth the Lorde) that this place ſhal nomore be called Topheth, nor the valley of the chyldren of Hennõ, but the valley of ſlaughter: For in this place wyll I ſleye the Senatours of Juda and Jeruſalem / and kyll them downe with the ſwearde in the ſyght of theyr enmyes, and of them that ſeke theyr lyues. And theyr deed carcaſes wyll I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beeſtes of the felde. C And I wyl make thys cytie ſo deſolate, and deſpyſed: 3.Reg.ix.b. Jer.xviii.b and.xlix.c. and.l.b. Thre.iii.b * that who ſo goeth there by, ſhall be abaſhed and ieaſt vpon her / becauſe of all her plages.

* I wyll fede them alſo with the fleſhe of theyr ſonnes & theyr daughters. Deut.xxviii.g 4.Reg.vi.f ‡ Yee, euery one ſhall eate vp another in the beſegynge and ſtraytneſſe, wherwith theyr enemyes (that ſeke theyr lyues) ſhall kepe them in. And ỹ pitcher ſhalt thou breake in the ſyght of the of the me, that ſhalbe with the, and ſaye vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes: Jer.xviii.a * Euen ſo wyll I deſtroye this people and cytie: as a man breaketh an earthen veſſell, that cannat be made whole agayne.

Jere.vii.d. * In Topheth ſhall they be buryed, for they ſhal haue none other place. Thus wyll I do vnto thys place alſo, ſayeth the Lorde, and to them that dwel therin: yee, I wyll do to this cytie as vnto Topheth (For the houſes of Jeruſalem and the houſes of the kynges of Juda ſhalbe defyled, lyke as Topheth) because of al the houſes, in whoſe parlers they dyd ſacryfyce vnto all the hooſte of heauen and powred drynke offerynges vnto ſtraunge goddes. And ſo Jeremy cam from Topheth, where the Lorde had ſente hym to prophecie, and ſtode in the courte of the houſe of the Lorde, and ſpake to all the people: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hoſtes the God of Iſrael: Beholde, I wyll brynge vpon this cytie & vpon euery towne aboute it, al the plages that I haue deuiſed agaynſt them: Jere.vii.c. and.xiii.b. * for they haue bene obſtynate, and wolde nat obeye my warnynges.

¶ Jeremy is ſmytten and caſt into preſon, for preachynge of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captyuite of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mockynge ſtocke for the worde of God. He is compelled by the ſprete to preache the worde.

CAPI. XX.

A When Phaſhur the preeſte, the ſonne of Emer, cheefe in the houſe of the Lorde, harde Jeremy preache ſo ſtedfaſtly: Jer.xviii.c. and.xxiii.a. * he ſmote Jeremy & put hym in the ſtockes, that are by the hye gate of Ben Jamin, in the houſe of the Lorde. The nexte daye folowynge Phaſhur brought Jeremy out of the ſtockes agayne. Then ſayde Jeremye vnto hym. The Lorde ſhall call the nomore Phaſhur (that is excellente and increaſynge) but Magor (that is fearfull and afrayed) euery where. For thus ſayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll make the afrayed, euen thy ſelfe, and all that fauoure the: whiche ſhall peryſh with the ſwearde of theyr enemyes, euen before thy face.

B And I wyll geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, which ſhal carye ſome vnto Babylon preſoners, and ſleye ſome with the ſwearde. 4.Reg.xx.c. Jere.xv.c. and.xvii.a. * Moreouer, all the ſubſtaunce of thys lande, all theyr precyous and gorgeous workes, all coſtlyneſſe, and all the treſure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I geue into the handes of theyr enemyes, whiche ſhall ſpoyle them, & carie them vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Phaſhur) thou ſhalt be caryed vnto Babylon with all thyne houſholde, and to Babylon ſhalt thou come, where thou ſhalt dye, and be buryed, thou and all thy fauourers, to whom thou haſt preached lyes. O Lorde, If I am diſceaued, the haſt thou diſceaued me: thou haſte dealte ſtrongly, and haſt preuayled, and makeſt me ſtrong agayn. Thre.iii.b * All the daye longe am I deſpyſed, and laughed to ſcorne of euery man because I haue now preached longe agaynſt malycious Tyranny, & ſhewed the of deſtruccyon. * For the which cauſe they caſt the worde of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me euer to the worſt. Jere.vi.b.

C Wherfore, I thought from hence forth, nat to ſpeake of him, nor to preach any more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my herte and in my bones, whiche when I wolde haue ſtopped, I myght nat. For why * I harde ſo many deriſions & blaſphemies, yee, euen of myne owne companions, and of ſuche as were conuerſaunte with me: Pſa.xxxi.b whiche wente aboute to make me afrayed, ſayinge, vpon hym, let vs go vpon hym, to feare hym, and make hym holde his tonge: that we maye ouercome him, and be auenged of hym.

But the Lorde ſtode by me, lyke a myghtye gyaunte: therfore my perſecutours fell, and coulde do no thynge. They ſhall be ſore confounded, for they haue done vnwyſely, they ſhall haue an euerlaſtynge ſhame. * And nowe, O Lord of Hoſtes, thou righteous ſercher (whiche knoweſt the reynes and the very hertes:) let me ſe the puniſhed, for vnto the I commytte my cauſe. Jere.xi.d.

D Synge vnto the Lorde, and prayſe him, for he hathe delyuered the ſoule of the oppreſſed, frō the hande of the vyolent. Job.iii.a. Jere.xv.b. * Curſed be the day, wherin I was borne, vnhappye be the daye wherin my mother brought me forth. Curſed be the man, that brought my father the tydinges, to make him glad, ſaying: thou haſte gotton a ſonne. Lette it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties Gene.xix.c * whiche the Lorde turned vp ſyde downe (when he had hearde longe the wycked cumoure of them) becauſe he ſlewe me nat, as ſone as I cam out of my mothers wombe, and becauſe my mother was nat my graue her ſelf, that the byrth myght nat haue come out but remayned ſtyll in her. Job.x.c. * Wherfore cam I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of laboure and ſorowe, and to leade my lyfe with ſhame.

CAPI. XXI.

He prophecieth that Zedechiah ſhall be take, & the cytie burned.

A THESE are the wordes y the Lorde ſpake unto Jeremy what tyme as

Did not thy father eate and drincke, and proſpere well, as longe as he dealte with equite and ryghtuouſneſſe? Yee, when he helped the oppreſſed and poore to theyr ryght, then proſpered he well.

From whence came this / but onely becauſe he had me before his eyes, ſayeth the Lorde? Neuertheleſſe, as for thyne eyes and thyne herte, they loke vpon couetouſnes, to E ſhed innocent bloude, to do wronge ⁊ vyolence. *And therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde 4.Reg.23.e and.24.a Jere.36.b agaynſt Jehoakim, ẏ ſonne of Joſias kyng of Juda. They ſhal not mourne for him (as they vſe to do) alas brother, alas ſyſter. Nether ſhall they ſay vnto hym. Alas ſyr / alas for that noble prynce. CAPI. XXIIII.

A THE Lorde ſhewed me a vyſion: Beholde, there ſtode two maundes of fygges before the Temple of the Lorde/ afterthat * Nabuchodonoſor kyng of Babylon 4.Re.24.b had led awaye captyue Jechonias the ſonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda/ the myghtye men alſo of Juda, with the worke maiſters, and connynge men of Jeruſalem/ vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good fygges/ euen lyke as thoſe that be fyrſt rype In the other maunde were very naughtye fygges, which might not be eaten, they were ſo euyl. Then ſayd the Lord vnto me: what ſeyſt thou Jeremy/ I ſayde * fygges, Oſee.ix.b wherof ſome be very good, and ſome ſo euyl/ that no man may eate them.

B Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me/ after this maner: Thus ſayeth the Lord the God of Iſrael: lyke as thou knoweſt the good fygges/ ſo ſhall I knowe them led awaye, whom I haue ſent out of this place into the lande of the Caldees, for theyr profit and I wyl ſet myne eyes vpon them for the beſt, for I wyl bryng them agayne into this lande: I wyl buylde them vp, and not breke them downe: I wyll plante them, and not C rote them out. * And I wyll geue them an Deut.29.a Jere.xxx.b xxxi.f.32.c herte to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. They ſhalbe my people, and I wyll be their God, for they ſhall retourne vnto me with theyr whole herte.

Jere.xxix.c * And lyke as thou knoweſte the naughtie fygges, which may not be eaten, they are ſo euyll: Euen ſo wyll I (ſayeth the Lorde) let Zedekias the kynge of Juda, (ye and al his princes, and the reſidue of Jeruſalē that remayne ouer in this lande, and them alſo that dwelle in Egypte) to be vexed and plaged in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyl D make the to be a * reprofe, a comen by worde Pſal.79.a Baruc.1.a a laughyng ſtocke & ſhame/ in al the places where I ſhall ſcatre them. I wyll ſende the ſwearde, honger, and peſtilence amonge them/ vntyll I haue cleane conſumed them oute of the lande/ that I gaue vnto them/ and theyr fathers.

¶ Jeremy prophecyeth that they ſhalbe in captiuyte .lxx. yeres, bycauſe they contemned and deſpyſed the worde of God he ſheweth that after .lxx. yeares the Babilonians ſhulde be deſtroyed. The deſtruction of all nacyons is prophecied. He moueth the Preeſtes of the nacyons to waylinges.

CAPI. XXV.

A A SERMON that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſias kynge of Juda/ that was in the fyrſte yeare of Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon. Whiche Sermon/ Jeremye the Prophet made vnto al the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitours of Jeruſalem, on this maner.

From the thyrtene yeare of Joſias the ſonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto thys preſente daye (that is euen .xxiij. yeare) the worde of the Lorde hathe bene commytted vnto me. * And ſo I haue ſpoken to you, I Jere.xxix.c and 35.c.a xxxviii.a haue ryſen vp early/ I haue geuen you warnynge in ſeaſon/ but ye wolde not heare me. * Though the Lorde hathe ſente his 2.Par.36.c ſeruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you in ſeaſon, yet wolde ye not obey, ye wolde not enclyne your eares to heare.

He ſayde: tourne agayne euery man 4.Reg 17.c frome his euyll waye/ and frome your wycked ymaginacions/ and ſo ſhall ye dwel for euer in the lande/ that the Lorde promyſed you and your forefathers. And go not after ſtraunge Goddes, ſerue them not/ worſhyppe them nat, and angre me nat with the workes of youre handes: then wyll not I punyſhe you. Neuertheleſſe/ ye wolde not heare me (ſayeth the Lorde) but haue defyed me with the workes of your handes/ to your owne great harme.

B Wherfore thus ſayeth ẏ Lorde of hoſtes: * Becauſe/ ye haue not herkened vnto my Jeremy.i.b worde, lo/ I wyll ſende out, & call for all the people/ that dwell in the North, ſayeth the Lorde, and wyl prepayre Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of * Babylon my ſeruaunte/ and Eſay.v.a Jere.xvii.a wyll brynge them vpon this lande, & vpon all that dwell therin/ and vpon all the people that are aboute them/ and wyll vtterly rote them out. I wyl make of them a wyldernes a mockage, and a continual deſerte.

CAPI. XXVI.

A IN THE begynnynge of the raygne of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſiah kynge of IVDA / came thys worde frome the Lorde / ſayenge: Thus ſayeth the Lorde:
* Stande in the courte of the LORDES Jere.vii.a

pente of the plage, whiche I haue determy-ned to brynge vpon them, because of theyr wycked inuencyons.

B And after thys maner ſhalte thou ſpeake vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lord: yf ye wyl not obey me, to walcke in my lawes, whiche
I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my ſeruauntes the prophetes whō I ſent vnto you, ryſynge vp tymely, and ſtyll ſen-dynge: If ye wyll not folowe them (I ſaye)
Iere.vii.a. then wyll I do to this houſe * as I dyd C vnto Siloh, and wyll make this cytie to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the preaſtes, the prophetes and all the people herde Ieremye preache theſe wordes, in the houſe of the Lorde.

Nowe when he had ſpoken out all the wordes, that the Lorde commaunded hym to preach vnto the people, then the preſtes, ỹ prophetes and al the people toke holde vpō him, and ſayde: thou ſhalt dye. How darreſt thou be ſo bolde, as to ſaye in the name of ỹ
C Lorde: it ſhal happen to this houſe as it dyd vnto Siloh: and thys cytye ſhalbe ſo waſt /

And when all the people were gathered aboute Ieremy in the houſe of the Lord, the prynces of Iuda herde of this rumour, and they came ſoone out of the kynges Palace in to the houſe of the Lorde / and ſat them 4.Re.15.e Iere.20.b. downe before the * newe dore of the Lorde.
Then ſpake the preſtes and the prophetes
D vnto the rulers and to all the people / theſe Iohn.11.e Mat.26.g. wordes: * Thys man is worthy to dye, for he hathe preached agaynſte thys cytie, as ye youre ſelues haue herde with youre eares.

Then ſayde Ieremy vnto the rulers and to al the people: The Lorde hath ſent me to preach againſt this houſe and agaynſt this cyty all ỹ wordes that ye haue herde. Therfore amende youre wayes, and youre aduyſementes, and be obedient vnto the voice of the Lord your God: ſo ſhall the Lord repēte of the plage / that he had deuyſed agaynſte
you. Now as for me: I am in youre handes do with me, as ye thincke expedient & good.
But thiſ ſhal ye know: if ye put me to death / Math.23.c * ye ſhall make youre ſelues, this cytye and all the inhabytours therof / gyltye of inno-E cent bloude. For thys is of a trueth: that the Lorde hathe ſent me vnto you, to ſpeake all theſe wordes in youre eares.

Then ſayde the rulers and the people vnto
the preſtes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The Elders alſo of the lande ſtode vp, and ſayd thus vnto al the people: Micheah
the Moraſthite, * which was a prophet vn- Mich.i.a. der Ezekiah kyng of Iuda, ſpake to all the people of Iuda: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes: * Sion ſhalbe plowed lyke a felde, Mich.iii.c Ieruſalem ſhalbe an heape of ſtones / & the F hyl of the Lordes houſe ſhalbe turned to an hye wod. Dyd Ezekiah the kyng of Iuda & the people of Iuda put him to deth for this?
No verely, * but rather feared the Lorde, & Ionas.3.b made theyr prayer vnto him. For the which cauſe alſo the Lord repented of the plage, ỹ
he had deuyſed againſt thē. Shulde we thē do ſuch a ſhameful dede agaynſt our ſoules?
There was a prophet alſo, ỹ preached ſtifly G in the name of the Lorde / called Vriah the ſonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim, thys man preached alſo agaynſt this cyty and agaynſt this lāde, accordyng to al as Ieremy ſayeth. Nowe when * Iehoakim the kynge 3.Reg.22.b with al the eſtates and prīces had herde his wordes, the kyng went about to ſleye him. * 3.Reg.19.a Math.23.c.
Whē Vriah perceaued that, he was afraied and fled, and departed into Egypte.
Then Iehoakim the kyng ſent ſeruauntes into the lande of Egypte, Namely: Elnathā the ſonne of Achbor and certayne men with him into Egypte, which fetched Vriah oute of Egypt, & brought him vnto kyng Iehoa-kim, that ſlewe hym with the ſwearde, and caſt hys deed body into the comen peoples graue. But Ahikam the ſonne of Saphan helped Ieremy / that he came not in to the handes of the people to be ſlayne.

Ieremy at the commaundement of the Lorde ſendeth bondes to the kyng of Iuda / and to the other kynges that were nye, wherby they are monyſhed to become ſubiectes vnto Nabuchodonoſor. He warneth the people and the kynges and rulers, that they beleue not falſe prophetes.

CAPI. XXVII.

IN THE begynnynge of the reygne A of Iehoakim the ſonne of Ioſiah kynge of Iuda / came thys worde vnto Ieremye from the Lorde, whiche ſpake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and chaynes, and put them aboute thy necke / and ſende them to the kynge of Edom, to the kynge of Moab / to the kynge of Ammon, to the kyng of Tyrus, and to the kyng of Sidon: and that by the meſſaungers, which ſhall come to Ieru-ſalē vnto Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, and byd them ſaye vnto theyr maſters: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael, ſpeake thus vnto youre maſters: I am he that made the earth, the man and the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power and outſtretched arme, and haue geuen it vnto whom it pleaſed me. And nowe wyl I delyuer all theſe landes into the power of Nabuchodonoſor ẏ kynge of Babylon my ſeruaunte. The beaſtes alſo of the felde ſhall I geue hym to do him ſeruyce. And al people ſhal ſerue him, and hys ſonne, and hys ſonnes chyldren / vntyl the tyme of the ſame lande be come alſo: yee, many people and greate kynges ſhall ſerue hym.

Moreouer, that people and kyngdome whiche wyll not ſerue Nabuchodonoſor / and that wyll not put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the ſame people wyll I vyſet with the ſwearde, with honger, with peſtylence, vntyll I haue conſumed them in hys handes, ſayeth the Lorde. And therfore folowe not your Prophetes, ſoethſayers, expounders of dreames / charmers and wytches / which ſaye vnto you: ye ſhall not ſerue the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you lyes: to brynge you farre from your lande, and that I might caſt you out, and deſtroye you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yoke of the king of Babylon, and ſerue hym, thoſe I wyl let remayne ſtyll in theyr owne lande (ſayeth the Lorde) and they ſhall occupye it / and dwell therin.

All theſe thynges tolde I Zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and ſayde: Put youre neckes, vnder the yoke of the kyng of Babylon, and ſerue hym and hys people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylt thou and thy people peryſhe with the ſwearde, with honger, with peſtilence: lyke as the Lorde hathe deuyſed for all people, that wyll not ſerue the kynge of Babylon? Therfore geue no eare vnto thoſe Prophetes (that tel you: Ye ſhall not ſerue the kynge of Babylon (for they preache you lyes, neyther haue I ſente them / ſayeth the Lorde: howbeit they are bolde, falſlye to prophecye in my name: that I myght the ſooner dryue you oute / and that ye myght peryſh with your preachers. I ſpake to the Preſtes alſo, and to all the people: Thus ſayeth the Lorde: Heare not the wordes of thoſe Prophetes that preach vnto you, and ſaye: Beholde, the veſſels of the Lordes houſe ſhall ſhortly be brought hyther agayne from Babylon: For they prophecye lyes vnto you. Heare them not, but ſerue the kyng of Babylon, that ye maye lyue. Wherfore wyl ye make thys cytie to be deſtroyed? But yf they be true Prophetes in very dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be committed vnto them, then let them pray the Lorde of hooſtes, that the remnaunte of the ornamentes (which are in the howſe of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the houſe of the kynge of Iuda and at Ieruſalem) be not caryed to Babylon alſo. For thus hathe the Lorde of hooſtes ſpoken concernyng the pyllers, the lauer, the ſeate and the reſydue of the ornamentes that yet remayne in thys cytie / which Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon toke not, when he caryed away Iechoniah the ſonne of Iehoakim kynge of Iuda, with all the power of Iuda, and Ieruſalem / from Ieruſalem, vnto Babylon / captyue.

Yee / thus hathe the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael ſpoken, as touchynge the reſydue of the Ornamentes of the Lordes houſe of the kynge of Iudaes houſe, and of Ieruſalem: They ſhalbe caryed vnto Babylon, and there they ſhall remayne vntyll I vyſet them ſayeth the Lorde. Then wyl I brynge them hyther agayne. And this was done in the ſame yeare, euen in ẏ begynnynge of the reygne of Zedekiah / kynge of Iuda.

¶ The falſe prophecye of Hananiah the Prophete. Ieremye ſheweth that the prophecye of Hananiah is falſe, by the example of the other Prophetes. The [illegible] of the Lorde reproueth Hananiah, prophecyinge hys deathe.

CAPI. XXVIII.

BVT in the fourthe yeare of the raygne of Zedekiah kyng of Iuda, in the fyfth Moneth, It happened, that Hananiah the ſonne of Aſur the prophet of Gybeon, ſpake to me in the houſe of the Lorde / in the preſence of the preſtes and of al the people / and ſayde: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſraell: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and after two yeare wyl I brynge agayne into thys place / all the ornamentes of the Lordes houſe / that Nabuchodonoſor kynge of babylon caryed awaye from this place vnto Babilon. Yee, I wyll brynge agayne Iechoniah the ſonne of Iehoakim the kynge of Iuda him ſelf, with al the preſoners of Iuda (that are caried vnto Babylon) euen into this place, ſayeth the Lorde, for I wyl breake the yoke of the kynge of Babylon.

Then the prophet Ieremy gaue anſwere vnto the prophet Hananiah, before the preſtes ſtes and before all the people that were preſent in the houſe of the Lorde. * And the prophet Jeremy ſayde: Amen, the Lorde do that / and graunte the thynge whiche thou haſte prophecyed: that he may brynge agayn all the ornamentes of the Lordes houſe, and reſtore all the preſoners from Babylon in to thys place. Neuertheles / herken thou alſo / what I wyll ſaye, that thou and al the people maye heare: The prophetes that were before vs in tymes paſte / whiche prophecyed of warre / or trouble / or peſtylence / ether of peace / vpon many nacyons & great kyngdomes / were proued by this (yf God had ſende thē in very dede) * whē the thing came to pas: which that prophet told before.

Deut.18.b.
Ezech.xiii.a.

C And Hananiah the prophet toke the chayne from the prophet Jeremyes necke / and brake it / and with that ſayde Hananiah / that al the people myght heare: Thus hath the Lorde ſpoken: Euen ſo wyll I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon / from the necke of all nacyons / yee / and that within this two yeare. And ſo the prophet Jeremy wente his waye. Nowe after that Hananiah the prophet had takē the chayne from the prophet Jeremyes necke / and broken it. The worde of the Lorde came

D vnto the prophet Jeremy ſayinge: Go and tell Hananiah theſe wordes: Thus ſayeth the Lorde. Thou haſte broken the chaine of wod / but in ſteade of wod thou ſhalte make chaynes of yron. For thys ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: I wyll put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people / that they maye ſerue Nabuchodonoſor the kinge of Babylon / yee and ſo ſhall they do. And I wyll geue hym the beaſtes in the felde. Then ſayde the prophet Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananiah: * Heare me Hananiah: The Lorde hath not ſent the / but thou bringeſt this people into a falſe beleſe. And therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde: beholde / I wyll ſende the out of the lande / and within a yeare thou ſhalt dye, becauſe thou haſt falſely ſpoken agaynſt the Lorde. So Hananiah the prophet dyed the ſame yeare in the ſeuenth Moneth.

CAPI. XXIX.

A THESE are the wordes of the boke / that Jeremy the prophet ſent from Jeruſalē vnto the preſoners: the Senatours / preſtes / prophetes / and al the people whom Nabuchodonoſor had led from Jeruſalem vnto Babylon: after that tyme that kynge Jechoniah / and hys Quene / his chamberlaynes, the princes of Juda and Jeruſalem the workmaſters of Jeruſalem were departed thyther. whiche boke Elaſah the ſonne of Saphā and Gamariah the ſonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whom Zedekiah the kynge of Juda ſent vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon: theſe were the wordes of Jeremyes boke.

B Thus hathe the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael ſpoken vnto al the preſoners that were led from Jeruſalem vnto Babylon: * builde you houſes to dwel therin: plāte you gardens, that ye may enioy the frutes therof: * take you wyues, to beare you ſonnes & daughters, prouyde wyues for your ſonnes & huſbādes for your daughters yͭ they may get ſōnes & daughters, and yͭ ye may multiplye there. Jere. xxv. a and. 44. a. * I roſe vp early, & ſent vnto them / but they wolde not heare / ſayeth the Lorde. E Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde / all ye preſoners / whom I ſent from Jeruſalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael ſpoken of Ahab the ſonne of Colaiah, and of Zedekiah the ſonne of Maaſiah / which prophecye lyes vnto you in my name: Beholde / I wyll delyuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon / that he maye ſleye them before youre eyes. And all the preſoners of Juda that are in Babilon, ſhal take vpon thys terme of curſynge, and ſay: Nowe God do vnto the, as he dyd vnto Zedekiah and Ahab / whom the kynge of Babilon roſted in the fyre / because they ſynned ſhamefully in Iſraell.

For they haue not onely defyled their neighbours wyues, but alſo preached lyeng wordes in my name / whiche I haue not commaunded them. This I teſtyfy / and aſſure / ſayeth the Lorde. But as for Shemeiah the Nehelamyte thou ſhalte ſpeake vnto F hym: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: Because thou haſte ſealed letters vnder thy name / vnto all the people that is at Jeruſalem / and to Sophoniah the ſonne of Maaſiah the preſte / yee / and ſent them to all the preſtes: where in thou wryteſte thus vnto hym: The Lorde hathe 4. Reg. 11. a. 2. Pa. 23. a. ordeyned the to be preſte in ſteade of * Jehoiada the preſte / that thou ſhuldeſte be the chefe in the houſe of the Lorde aboue al prophetes / and preachers, and that thou mighteſt put the in preſon, or in the ſtockes. How happeneth it then, that thou haſt not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth / which neuer leaueth of his propheciynge. And beſyde al this / Jere. 29. c. he hath ſent vs worde * vnto Babylon / and tolde vs playnely / that oure captyuyte ſhal long endure: that we ſhulde builde vs houſes to dwel therin, and to plant vs gardens that we myghte enioye the frutes therof.

which letter Sophoniah the preſt vpdrew, and let Jeremy the prophet heare it.

G Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, ſayinge: Sende worde to all them that be in captyuyte / on thys maner: Thus hath the Lorde ſpoke concerning Shemeiah the Nehelamite: * Because that Shemeiah Jer. 11. c. hath prophecied vnto you without my commiſſion, and brought you in to a falſe hope / therfore thus the Lorde dothe certyfye you: Beholde / I wyl vyſet Shemeiah the Nehelamite, and his ſede: ſo that none of his ſhal remayne amonge this people, and none of them ſhall ſe the good, that I wyll do for thys people / ſayeth the Lorde. For he hathe preached falſely of the Lorde.

¶ The retourne of the people from Babylon. God by hys challenging ſheweth that the people is ſynfull. The delyueracyon of the enemyes of Iſrael.

CAPI. XXX.

THESE are the wordes, that the Lorde ſhewed vnto Jeremy, ſayinge. A Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Iſraell: * Jere. 36. a. Wryte vp diligently all the wordes, that I haue ſpoken vnto the, in a boke. For, lo, the tyme commeth (ſayeth the Lord) that I wyl brynge agayne the preſoners of my people of Iſraell and Juda, ſayeth the Lorde: For I wyll reſtore them vnto the lande / that I gaue to theyr fathers / and they ſhal haue it in poſſeſſyon .·.

Agayne / theſe wordes ſpake the Lorde / concerning Iſrael and Juda: Thus ſayeth the Lorde: We haue hearde a terryble crye / feare & dyſquietnes. For what els doth this ſignifye / that I ſee? And as for the / O my ſeruaunt Jacob / feare not (ſayeth the Lorde) and be not afrayed / O Iſrael. For lo I wil helpe the alſo from farre / and thy ſede from the lande of theyr captiuyte.

And Jacob ſhall turne agayne / he ſhall be in reſt, and haue a proſperous lyfe, & no man ſhall ſhal make him afrayed. For I am with the, to helpe the, ſayeth the Lord. * And though I ſhall deſtroy al the people, among whom I haue ſcatred the, yet wyll I not deſtroye the, but correcte the, * and that with dyſcrecyon. For I knowe, that thou art in no wiſe * without faute. Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde. I am ſory for thy hurte and woundes. And ſo Hananeell myne vncles ſon came to me in the courte of the pryſon (accordyng to the wordes of the Lorde) and ſayde vnto me, Bye my lande (I praye the) that lyeth in Anathoth in the countre of Ben Iamin: for by herytage thou haſt ryght to lowſe it out for thy ſelfe/ therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued, that this was the commaundement of the Lorde, and ſo I bought the lãde from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne Uncles ſõne/ and weyed him there the money: euen ſeuen ſycles, and ten ſyluer pens.

I cauſed him alſo to make me a wrytyng and to ſeale it, and called record therby, and weyed hĩ there the money vpon the wayghtes. So I toke the euydence with the copy (when it was orderly ſealed and red ouer) & I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the ſõne of Neriah the ſonne of Maaſiah in the ſyght of Hananeel my coſyn, and in the preſence of the wytneſſes, that be named in the euydẽce and before all the Iewes that were therby in the courte of the preſon.

Beholde, there are bulwarckes made nowe agaynſt the citie, to take it: and it ſhal be wonne of the Caldees that beſege it, with ſwearde/with honger and deathe, and loke what thou haſt ſpoken, that ſame ſhal come vpon them.

For lo, all thynges are preſente vnto the: E yet ſayeſt thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and cōmaundeſt me, that I ſhall lowſe a pece of lande vnto my ſelfe, & take wytneſſes therto: and yet in the meane ſeaſon the citie is delyuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me ſaying: Beholde, I am the Lord God of all fleſhe, is there any thynge then to harde for me? Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde: * beholde, I ſhal delyuer this cytie into ŷ power of the Caldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon / they ſhall take it. Jere.xxi.b For the Caldees ſhall come, and wynne this cytie, and ſet fyre vpon it / and burne it: with the gorgyous houſes, in whoſe parlers they haue made ſacryfyce vnto Baal, and poured drynke offerynges vnto ſtraunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For ſeyng the chyldren of Iſrael, and the chyldren of Iuda haue wrought wickednes before me euer frō their youth vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me with the workes of theyr owne handes/ſayeth ŷ Lorde.

Or, what hathe this cytie bene els, but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer ſence the daye that they bylded it, vnto this houre: wherin I caſt it out of my ſyght, because of the great blaſphemyes of the chyldren of Iſrael & Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yee, they, theyr kinges, theyr prynces/their Preſtes, their Prophetes, the men of Iuda, and the cytezyns of Ieruſalem.

F * When I roſe vp early, and taught thē and inſtructed thē, they turned theyr backes to me, and not theyr faces. Jere.ii.b They wolde not heare, to be refourmed and correcte: * but ſet theyr Idoles in the houſe / that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. Jere.vii.b They haue bylded hye places for Baal in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to bowe theyr ſonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought, to make Iuda ſynne wyth ſuche abhominacion.

And nowe therfore/thus hathe the Lorde God of Iſrael ſpoken, concernynge thys citie, whiche (as ye your ſelues confeſſe) ſhal be delyuered in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, whē it is wonne with the ſwerde / with honger and with peſtilence: * Beholde I wyl gather them together from al landes wherin I haue ſcatred them in my wrath in my fearefull and great diſpleaſure: and wyl brynge them agayne vnto this place, where they ſhall dwel ſafely. And they ſhall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God.

G * And I wyll geue them one herte & one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of theyr lyfe, that they and theyr chyldren after them may proſpere. * And I wyll ſet vp an euerlaſtynge couenaunt with them. Namely, that I wyl neuer ceaſſe to do thē good and that I wyl put my feare in theyr hertes ſo that they ſhall not runne away from me.

* Yee, I wyll haue a luſte and pleaſure to do them good, and faythfully to plant them in this lande, with my whole herte, & with all my ſoule.

For thus ſayeth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought al this great plage vpon thys people: ſo wyll I alſo brynge vpon them all the good, that I haue promiſed them. And men ſhal haue their poſſeſſions in this lāde wherof ye ſay nowe, that it ſhall neyther be inhabited of people nor of catel, but be delyuered into the hādes of ŷ Caldees: Yee, lande ſhal be bought for money, and euydences made therupon and ſealed before wytneſſes in the cōtre of Ben Iamin, and rounde about Ieruſalem: in the cities of Iuda/in the cities ŷ are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth/yee / and in the cities that are in the Southe. For I wyll brynge theyr preſoners hyther agayne, ſayeth the Lorde.

¶ The Prophete is monyſhed of the Lorde, to pray for the delyueraunce of the people, whiche the Lorde promyſeth. God forgeueth ſynnes and doth graciouſly to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the byrth of Chriſte. The kyngdome of Chriſte in the Churche ſhall neuer be ended.

ſhall offer vp gyftes in the houſe of the Lorde. For I wyll reſtore the captyuyte of thys lande, as it was afore / ſayeth the Lorde. Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hoſtes
It ſhall come yet therto / that in thys lãde, whiche is voyde from men and catell / and in all the cyties of the lande, there ſhall be ſette vp ſhepherdes cotages: in the cyties vpon the mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne / and in the cyties of the ſouthe. In the lande of Ben Iamin / in the feldes of Ieruſalem / and in the cyties of Iuda ſhall the ſhepe be nombred agayne / vnder the hande of hym / that tel-
C leth them / ſayeth the Lorde. *Beholde, Jer.xxiii.a the tyme commeth / ſayeth the Lorde / that I wyll perfourme that good thynge / which I haue promyſed vnto the houſe of Iſraell & to yͤ houſe of Iuda. In thoſe dayes & at the ſame tyme, I wyll brynge forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghtuouſnes, and he ſhall do equyte & ryghtuouſneſſe in the lande. In thoſe dayes ſhal Iuda be helped * and Ie- Esa.xxxii.e
ruſalem ſhal dwell ſafe, and he that ſhal cal her is euen God our ryghtuouſneſſe. For thus the Lorde promeſeth: * Dauid ſhall 2.Reg.vii.c neuer want one, to ſyt vpon the ſtole of the houſe of Iſrael: * neyther ſhall the preſtes i.Reg.ii.g.
and Leuytes want one to offre all waye before me burnt offeringes, to kyndle yͤ meatofferynges, and to prepare the ſacrifyces.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto D Ieremy after this maner: Thus ſayeth the Lorde: maye the couenaũt * whiche I haue Gene.viii.d made with daye and nyght be broken, that there ſhulde nat be daye and nyght in due ſeaſon? Then maye my couenaunt alſo be broken, which I made with Dauid my ſeruaunt, & ſo he nat to haue a ſonne to reygne in his Trone, & ſo ſhall alſo the preſtes and Leuytes neuer fayle, but ſerue me. * For 1.Pet.ii.a.
lyke as the ſtarres of heauen maye nat be Gene.xv.b
nombred, neyther the ſande of the ſee meaſu- and.xxii.c.
red: ſo wyll I multiplye the ſede of Dauid
my ſeruaũt, & the Leuites my mynyſters.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came to Ieremy, ſayenge: Conſydreſt thou nat what this people ſpeaketh? Two kynreddes (ſaye they) had the Lorde choſen, and thoſe ſame two hathe he caſt awaye. For ſo farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come together any more / and to be one people agayne. Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde: If I haue made no couenaunte with daye and nyght, and geue no ſtatute vnto heauen and earth: thẽ wyll I alſo caſt awaye the ſede of Dauid my ſeruaunte: ſo that I wyll take no prynce out of his ſede, to rule the poſteritie of Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne theyr captyuite, and be mercyfull vnto them.

¶ He threateneth that the cytie, and the kynge Zedekiah alſo, ſhalbe geuen into the handes of the kynge of Babylon.
He rebuketh them that brought ſuche of theyr brethren into captiuyte, as were pardoned to go at theyr lybertye.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

THESE are the wordes whiche the A Lord ſpake vnto Ieremy* what tyme Jer.xxxix.a as Nabuchodonoſor the kyng of Babylon, and all hys Hoſtes (out of all the kyngdomes that were vnder hys power) and al his people, fought agaynſte Ieruſalem and all the cytyes therof. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Iſrael: Goo, & ſpeake to Zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and tell hym. The Lorde ſendeth the thys worde: Beholde, * I 4.Re.25.a. wyl delyuer this cytie in to the hande of the Jer.xxxii.a.

kynge of Babylon, he ſhal burne it, & thou ſhalte nat eſcape hys handes, but ſhalte be led awaye preſoner, and delyuered into his power. Thou ſhalt loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, and he ſhall ſpeake with the mouth to mouth, and then ſhalt thou go to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O Zedekiah thou kynge of Juda: Thus ſayeth the Lorde vnto the: Thou ſhalte nat be ſlayne wyth the ſwearde, but ſhalt dye in peace. 4.Re.xxv.c * Lyke as thy fore fathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were brent: ſo ſhalt thou be brent alſo, and in the mournynge they ſhall ſaye: Oh Lorde. For thus haue I determyned, ſayeth the Lorde.

Then ſpake Jeremy the prophet all theſe wordes vnto Zedekiah kynge of Juda in Jeruſalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hooſte beſeged Jeruſalem, and the B remnaunt of the cyties: Namely, Lachis & Azecah, which yet remayned of the 2.Par.xi.b * ſtrong defenſid cyties of Juda.

Theſe are the wordes that the Lorde ſpake vnto Jeremy the prophet, when Zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Jeruſalem, that there ſhulde be proclamed Exo.xxi.a. Leui.xxv.f. Deu.xv.b. * a lybertye: ſo that euery man ſhulde let his ſeruant and handmayde go fre, Hebrue and Hebruesse, and no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had conſented, euen ſo they were obedient, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the ſeruauntes and handmaydes, whom they had let go fre & ſo make C them bonde agayne. For the whiche cauſe the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy from the Lorde hym ſelfe, ſayinge: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Iſrael: Deut.xv.c Exo.21.a * I made a couenaunte with youre fathers, when I brought the out of Egypte, (that they ſhulde no more be bondmen) ſayinge: When ſeuen yeares are out, euery mã ſhall let hys bought ſeruaunt an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue ſerued hym ſyxe yeares. But your fathers obeyed me nat & herkened nat vnto me. As for you ye were nowe turned, & dyd right before me, in that ye proclamed, euery man to let hys neyghboure go fre / and in that ye made a couenaunt before me/ in the temple that beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned youre ſelues agayne, and blaſphemed my name: In that euery man hathe requyred his ſeruaunt and handmayden agayne, whõ ye had let go quyte and fre, and cõpelled thẽ to ſerue you agayne/ & to be youre bonde men. D And therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde: ye haue nat obeyed me/ euery man to proclayme fredome vnto his brother & neyghbour: wherfore, ☞ I wyll call you vnto a fredome/ ſayeth the Lorde: euen vnto the ſwearde/ to the peſtilence/ and to honger / & wyll make you to be plaged in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Yee/ thoſe men that haue broken my couenaunte / and nat kepte the wordes of the appoyntement/ whiche they made before me: ☞ Gene.xv. * ☞ whẽ they hewed ŷ calfe in two and when there went thorow the two halfes therof. The Prynces of Juda, the Prynces of Jeruſalem, the gelded men, the Preſtes and al the people of the lande, which wente thorow the two ſydes of the calfe. Thoſe men wyl I geue into the power of their enemyes, and in to the handes of them that folowe vpõ theyr lyues. Psal.79.a. Jere.vii.d. * And their dead bodyes ſhalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beaſtes of the felde. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda and his Prynces, I wyl delyuer them into the power of theyr enemyes, and of them that deſyre to ſleye them, and in to the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoſte ☞ Jere.37.a. * ☞ whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my cõmaundement (ſayeth the Lorde) they ſhall come agayne before thys cytie, they ſhall fyght agaynſte it, wynne it, and burne it. Moreouer, I wyll laye the cyties of Juda ſo waſte, that no mã ſhall dwell therin.

¶ He propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabites, & therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threateneth punyſhmente vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promiſeth proſperite vnto Rechabites, for their obedience vnto their father.

CAPI. XXXV.

A THE wordes whiche the Lorde ſpake vnto Jeremy, in the rayne of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſiah kynge of Juda, are theſe: Go vnto the houſe of 4.Reg.x.c. * the Rechabytes, and call them out, and brynge them to the houſe of the Lorde in to ſome commodyous place/ and geue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniah the ſone of Jeremy the ſonne of Habazimah, & his brethren, and all his ſonnes, and the whole houſholde, of the Rechabytes: & brought thẽ to the houſe of the Lord in to the cloſet of the chyldren of Hanan the ſonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: whiche was by the cloſet of the Prynces, B that is aboue the cloſet of Maaſiah the ſonne of Selum, which is ŷ treaſures. And before the ſonnes of ŷ kynred of the Rechabites, I ſet pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and ſayde vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they ſayde: we wyll drynke no wyne / for Jonadab the ſonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs, ſayinge: ye and your ſonnes ſhall neuer drynke wyne * [illegible] buylde no houſes, ſowe no ſede, plante no vynes, yee, ye ſhal haue no vyneyardes, but for al your tyme ye ſhall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue long in the lande wherin ye be ſtraungers. Thus we haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab the ſonne of Rechab oure father, in all that he hathe charged vs, and ſo we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, oure ſonnes and oure daughters. Nether buylde we any houſe to dwell therin, we haue alſo amonge vs neyther vyneyardes, nor corne lande to ſowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accordynge vnto all, that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But nowe that Nabuchonoſor the kynge of Babylon came vp into yͤ lande, we ſayde, come let vs go to Jeruſalem, that we maye C eſcape the hooſte of the Caldees and the Aſſyrians: and ſo we dwell nowe at Jeruſalē. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy ſayenge: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: Go and tell the men of Juda and the inhabitours of Jeruſalem: Wyll ye not be refourmed, to obey my wordes ſayeth the Lorde? The wordes which Jonadab the ſonne of Rechab commaunded his ſonnes, that they ſhulde drynke no wyne, are faſt and ſurely kepte: for vnto thys daye they drynke no wyne, but obeye theyr fathers commaundement. But as for me, * I haue ſtande vp early, I haue ſpokē vnto you, and geuen you earneſt warnyng: and yet haue ye nat bene obedient vnto me. Je.vii.c. xxv.a. Yee, I haue ſent my ſeruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you, I roſe vp early, and ſent you worde, ſaieng: O turne you, nowe euery man from hys wycked waye: amende youre lyues, and go nat after ſtraunge goddes, to worſhyppe them: that ye maye contynue in the lande, which I haue geuen vnto you and youre fathers, but ye wolde neyther D heare me, nor folowe me. The chyldren of Jonadab Rechabs ſonne haue ſtedfaſtly kepte theyr fathers commaundement, that he gaue the, but thys people is nat obedient vnto me. And therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: Beholde, I wyll brynge vpon Juda and vpon euery E one that dwelleth in Jeruſalem, all the trouble that I haue deuyſed agaynſt the. * For I haue ſpoken vnto them, but they wolde nat folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuertheles they wolde geue me no anſwere. Prover.i.e. Eſa.lxv.b. Jere.vii.b. Jeremy alſo ſpake vnto the houſholde of the Rechabites: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hooſtes the God of Iſrael: For ſo muche as ye haue obeyed the cōmaundemēt of Jonadab your father: & kepte al his preceptes, & done accordyng vnto al that he had bydden you: Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hooſtes, the God of Iſrael: * Jonadab the ſonne of Rechab ſhall nat fayle, but haue one out of hys ſtocke, to ſtande alwaye before me. Je.xxxiii.c.

¶ Baruch wryteth (as Jeremy endyteth) the boke of the curſſes agaynſte Juda and Iſrael. He is ſent with the boke vnto the people, and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, and readeth it before them alſo. The rulers ſhewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehoakim taketh the boke, and readeth a lytell of it, and after caſteth it in the fyre. There is another wrytten, at the commaundement of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A IN the fourth yeare of Jehoakim yͤ ſonne of Joſiah kyng of Juda, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, ſayinge. * Take a boke, and wryte therin al the wordes, that I haue ſpoken to yͤ / agaynſt Iſrael againſt Juda / and agaynſte all the people / from the tyme that I beganne for to ſpeake vnto the (in the raygne of Joſiah) vnto this day. Jere.xxx.a. That when the houſe of Juda heereth of the plage, whiche I haue deuyſed for thē, they maye peraduenture * turne / euery man frō hys wycked way / that I may forgeue theyr offences and ſynnes. Jere.xviii.a. Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the ſonne of Neriah, * and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremy / all the wordes of the Lorde, which he had ſpoken vnto hym. Jere.xlv.a. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, ſaying: I am in preſon, B ſo that I maye nat come into the houſe of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou haſt wrytten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde, and rede them in the Lordes houſe vpon the faſtynge daye, that the people, whole Juda, & all they that come out of the cyties, maye heare: Peraduenture they wyll praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from his wycked waye. For greate is the wrath & dyſpleaſure, that the Lorde hathe taken agaynſte thys people.

So Baruch the ſonne of Neriah dyd, accordyng vnto all that Jeremy the prophete commaunded hym, readynge the wordes of yͤ Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes houſe. And this was done in yͤ fyft yeare of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſiah kynge of Juda, in the .ix. moneth * when it was commaunded, Jona.iii.a. that all the people of Jeruſalē ſhulde faſte before the Lord, & they all that were come from the cyties of Juda vnto Jeruſalem.

C Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy out of the boke with in ÿ houſe of the Lorde, out of the treaſury of Gamariah the ſonne of Saphan the Scrybe, whiche is beſyde the hyer lofte of the * newe dore of the Lordes houſe: that all the people myght heare. Jere.xxvi.a Nowe when Micheah the ſonne Gamariah the ſonne of Saphan had harde all the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke, he wente downe to the kynges palace in to the Scrybes chambre, for there all the Prynces were ſet: Elyſama the Scrybe, Dalaiah the ſõne of Semei, Elnathan the ſonne of Achbor, Gamariah the ſõne of Saphan, Zedekiah the ſonne of Hananiah, with all the Prynces. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes, that he harde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

D Then all the Prynces ſent Jehudi the ſonne of Nathaniah, the ſõne of Selamiah the ſonne of Chuſi, vnto Baruch, ſayinge: Take in thyne hande ÿ boke, wherout thou haſte rede before all the people, and come. So Baruch the ſonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hande, and came vnto the. And they ſayde vnto hym: Syt downe, and rede the boke ÿ we may heare alſo. So Baruch red that they myght here. Nowe when they had hearde all ÿ wordes, they were abaſhed one vpon another, and ſayde vnto Baruch: we wyll certyfye the kynge of all theſe wordes. E And they examyned Baruch, ſaying: tell vs, howe dydeſt thou wryte all theſe wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch anſwered them: He ſpake all theſe wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I wrote them in the boke.

Then ſayde the Prynces vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde the with Jeremy, ſo that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kynge to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chambre of Eliſama the Scrybe, and tolde the kynge all the wordes that he myght heare. So the kynge ſent Jehudi to fetch hym the boke, which he brought out of Eliſama the Scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red in it, that the kynge and all the prynces, whiche were about hym, myght heare. Nowe the kynge ſat in the wynter houſe, for it was in the .ix. Moneth, and there was a fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe/ and * caſt it into the fyre vpon the harth/ vntyll the boke was all brent in the fyre vpon the harth. i.Mal.i.c. F Yet no man was abaſhed therof, or rente his clothes: neyther the kynge hym ſelfe/ nor his ſeruauntes/ though they hearde all theſe wordes. Neuertheleſſe Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah beſought the kynge/ that he wolde nat burne the boke: natwithſtandynge the kynge wolde nat heare them/ but commaunded Jerahmael the ſonne of Amalech, Saraiah the ſonne of Ezriel and Selamiah the ſonne of Abdiel/ to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scrybe/ and vpon Jeremy the Prophete: but the Lorde kepte them out of ſyght. After nowe that the kynge had brent the boke/ and the ſermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy/ ſayinge: G Take another boke/ and ☞ wryte in it all the forſayde ſermons: that were wrytten in the fyrſt boke/ whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda hathe brente. H And tell Jeoakim the kynge of Juda: thus ſayeth the Lorde thou haſt brente the boke, and thoughteſt within thy ſelfe: Why haſt thou wrytte therin, that the kynge of Babylon ſhall come, & make thys lande waſte: ſo ÿ he ſhall make bothe people and catel to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde ſayeth of Jehoakim ÿ kynge of Juda: 4.Re.xi. Jere.xxii. * There ſhall none of hys generacyon ſyt vpon the throne of Dauid. hys dead corſe ſhalbe caſt out, that ÿ heate of the daye, and the froſt of the nyght maye come vpon hym. And I wyll vyſet the wyckednes of hym, of hys ſede and of hys ſeruaũtes. More ouer, all the euel that I haue promyſed them (though they herde me nat) wyl I brynge vpon them, vpon the inhabytours of Jeruſalem, & vpon all Juda. Thẽ toke Jeremy another boke, and gaue it Baruch the Scrybe the ſonne Neriah, whiche wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremy: all the ſermons that were in the fyrſt boke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And ther were added vnto the many mo ſermons, then before.

Zedekiah ſucceedeth Cononiah. He ſendeth vnto Jeremy to praye for hym. Jeremy goinge into the lande of Ben Jamin, is taken. He is beaten, and put in priſon. He is delyuered by kynge Zedekiah.

CAPI. XXXVII.

I 4.Re.xxv. Zedekiah the ſonne of Joſiah * which was made kynge thorowe Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon, reigned in the lande of Juda, in the ſteade of Cononiah the ſonne of Jehoakim. But neyther he, nor hys ſeruauntes, nor the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde whiche he ſpake by the Prophet Jeremy.

Neuer-

Jere.xxi.a and.xlii.a Neuertheles, Zedekiah the kynge ſent Jehucal the ſonne of Selemiah and Sophoniah the ſonne of Maaſiah the Preeſte to the Prophete Jeremye/ſayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked fre amonge the people at that tyme / and was not put in preſon as yet. * Pharaos hoſte alſo was come out of Eze.xvii.b Egypte: whiche when the Caldees that beſeged Jeruſalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto B Jeremy the Prophete, ſaying: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Iſrael, this anſwere ſhal ye geue to the kynge of Juda, that ſent you vnto me for councell: * Beholde, Pharaos Jere.xlvi.a hoſte which is come forth to helpe you, ſhal returne to Egypte into his owne lande: but the Caldees ſhall come agayne, and fyght agaynſt this cytie, wynne it/ and ſet fyre vpon it. For thus ſayeth the Lorde/ dyſceaue not youre owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: tuſh, the Caldees go nowe their way frome vs. No, they ſhall not go their waye For though ye had ſlayne the whole hoſte of the Caldees, that beſege you, and euery one of the ſlayne laye in his tente, yet ſhulde they ſtande vp, and ſet fyre vpon this cytie. Nowe when the hoſte of the Caldees was broken vp from Jeruſalem, for feare of the Egypcyans armye, Jeremye wente out of Jeruſalem towarde the lande of Ben Jamin/to get him from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamyns porte/there was a porter/called Jeriah, the C ſonne of Selemiah the ſonne of * Hana- Jere.xx.b niah, whiche fell vpon hym / and toke hym ſayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then ſayde Jeremye: It is not ſo, I go not to the Caldees. Neuertheleſſe, Jeriah wolde not beleue him / but brought Jeremy bounde before the Prynces. Wherfore the Prynces were angry with Jeremy/ and ſmote hym, and layed hym in preſon in the houſe of Jonathas the ſcrybe. For he was the ruler of the priſon. Thus was Je- D remy put into the dongeon and priſon, and Jere.lii.a ſo lay there a longe tyme. * Then Zedekiah the kynge ſent for him, and called him, & aſked him quyetly in his owne houſe, ſaying: thynkeſt thou this buſynes (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy anſwered: yee, that it doth: and thou (ſayde he) ſhalt be delyuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jeremy ſayd vnto kyng Zedekiah: What haue I offended agaynſt the, agaynſt thy ſeruauntes, or agaynſt this people, that ye haue put me in priſon? * Where Jere.27.c. are your prophetes which haue prophecied vnto you, & ſayde, that the kynge of Babylon ſhulde not come agaynſte you and thys lande? And therfore here nowe, O my Lorde the kynge: lette my prayer be accepte before the, and ſende me no more into the houſe of Jonathas the ſcrybe, that I dye not there. Then Zedekiah the kynge cōmaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entrye of the preſon/ and dayly to be geuen him a cake of breade, vntyll all the breade in the cytie was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entry in the preſon.

¶ By the mocyon of the rulers Jeremy is put in to a Dongeon. At the requeſte of Abedmelech the Chamberlayne, the kynge commaundeth Jeremye to be brought forthe of the Dongeon. Jeremy ſheweth the kynge howe he myght eſcape death.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

SAphatiah the ſonne of Mathan, Godoliah the ſonne of Phaſphur / Jucall the ſonne of Semeliah, and Phaſhur the ſonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had ſpoken vnto all the people, namely on this maner: Thus ſayth the Lord: * Who ſo remayneth in this citye, ſhall pe- Jere.xxi.b and.xxxvii.a ryſhe, eyther with the ſwearde, with honger or with the peſtylence: But who ſo falleth vnto the Caldees / ſhall eſcape wynnynge his ſoule for a pray, and ſhall lyue. * For Jere.xxii.a thus ſayeth the Lord: Thys cytie (no doute) muſte be delyuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon/and he alſo ſhall wynne it. Then ſayde the Prynces vnto the kyng: Syr, we beſeche you let this man be put to death. For thus he diſcourageth the handes of the ſoudyours that be in this cytie, and the handes of all the people, when he ſpeaketh ſuch wordes vnto them. This man verely laboureth not for peace of the people / but miſchefe. Zedekiah the kyng anſwered and ſayde: lo, he is in youre handes, for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremy, & caſt him into the dongeon of B Melchiah the ſonne of Hamelech that dwelt in the fore entre of the preſon. And they let downe Jeremy with cordes into a dōgeon / where there was no water/but myre. So Jeremy ſtacke faſt in the myre. Nowe when Abedmelech the Morian beyng a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderſtode, that they had caſt Jeremye into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges houſe, & ſpake to the kynge/ (whiche then ſat vnder the porte of Ben Jamin) theſe wordes: My Lorde the kynge, where as theſe men medle with Jeremy the Prophete, they do him wrong: C Namely, in ẏ they haue put him in preſon, there to dye of honger, for there is no more breade in the citie. Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Morian and ſayde: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wylte, and drawe vp Jeremy the prophete out of the dōgeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke ẏ men with hym, and went to the houſe of the kynge, & there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges & worne cloutes / & let them downe by a corde / into the dongeon to Jeremy.

And Abedmelech the Morian ſayd vnto the Prophete Jeremy: O, put theſe ragges D & cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwyxte them and the cordes: and Jeremy dyd ſo. So they drew vp Jeremy with cordes and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in Jere.37.c the fore entrye of the preſon. Then * Zedekiah the kynge ſent and cauſed Jeremy the prophete to be called vnto hi, into the thyrde entrye, that is in ẏ houſe of the Lorde. And the kynge ſayde vnto Jeremy: I wyll aſke the ſome what but hyde nothynge from me. Then Jeremy anſwered Zedekiah: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cauſe me to ſuffre death: If I geue the councel, thou wylte not folowe me. So the kynge ſwore an othe ſecretely vnto Jeremy, ſaying: As truely as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs theſe ſoules, E I wyll not ſleye the, nor geue the into the hādes of them that ſeke after thy lyfe.

Then ſayde Jeremye vnto Zedekiah: Jere.27.c Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hooſtes the God of Iſraell: * If caſe be, that thou wylte go forthe vnto the kynge of Babilons princes, thou ſhalt ſaue thy lyfe, and this cytie ſhall not be brente / yee, bothe thou and thy houſholde ſhall eſcape with your lyues. But yf thou wylte not go forth to the kynge of Babylons prynces / then ſhall this citie be delyuered into the handes of the Caldees, which ſhall ſet fyre vpon it, and thou ſhalte not be able to eſcape them. And the kynge Zedekiah ſayde vnto Jeremye. I am afrayed for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees / leaſt I come in theyr handes, and ſo they, to haue me in deriſion.

F But Jeremy anſwered: No, they ſhal not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beſeche the) whiche I ſpeake vnto the, ſo ſhalte thou be well, and ſaue thy lyfe. But yf thou wylte not go forthe, the Lorde hath tolde me this playnely: Beholde, al the wemen that are lefte in the kyng of Judaes houſe / ſhall go out to the kynge of Babylons Prynces. For they thynke / that thou arte diſceyued: and that the men in whome thou dyddeſt put thy truſt, haue gotten the vnder, and ſet thy fete faſte in the myre, and gone theyr way from the. Therfore all thy wiues & theyr children ſhall fle vnto ẏ Caldees, and thou ſhalte not eſcape theyr handes, but ſhalt be the kynge of Babylons priſoner, and this cytie ſhalt thou cauſe be brēt. Then ſayde Zedekiah vnto Jeremye: loke G that no body knowe of theſe wordes, & thou ſhalte not dye. But yf the princes perceaue, that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, ſayinge: O ſpeake, what ſaydeſt thou to the kynge? hyde it not from vs, and we wyll not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what ſayde the kynge to the? Se thou geue them this anſwere: I haue hūbly beſought the kynge, that he wyll let me lye nomore in Jehonathans houſe, that I dye not there? Then came al the prynces vnto Jeremye, & aſked hym. And he tolde them / after the maner as the kynge bad him. Then they helde theyr peace, for they perceyaued nothynge. Jere.39.c * So Jeremy abode ſtyll in the fore entrye of the preſon, vntyll the daye that Jeruſalem was wonne.

¶ Nabuchodonoſor beſegeth Jeruſalem. Zedekiah flyeth. he is taken of the Caldees, his ſonnes are ſlayne. His eyes are thruſt out. Jeremye is prouyded for. Abedmelech is delyuered frome captiuite, becauſe of the confydence that he hathe in God.

CAPI. XXXIX.

A Jere.52.a 4.Reg.25.a Nowe * when the cytye of Jeruſalem was taken / for in the .ix. yeare of Zedekiah kynge of Juda in the tenth Moneth / came Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon and all his Hoſte, and beſeged Jeruſalem. And in the .xi. yeare of Zedekiah in the fourth Moneth the .ix. daye of the Moneth, he brake into the cytie. Then all the princes of the kyng of Babilon, came in / and ſat them downe vnder the porte: Neregel, Sarezer / Samegarnabo, Sarſachim / Rabſaris Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the other Jere.52.a Prynces of the kynge of Babylon. * And when Zedekiah the kinge of Juda with his ſoudiours ſawe them, they fled / and departed out of the cytie by night thorowe the kynges garden, and thorowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and ſo they wente B towarde the wylderneſſe.

But the Caldees Hoſte folowed faſte after them / and toke Zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought him preſoner to Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath / that lyeth in the lande of Hemath where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the kynge of Babylon cauſed the chyldren of Zedekiah and all the nobles of Juda to be ſlayne / before his face at Reblath. And made Zedekias eyes to be put out/and bounde him with chaynes/and ſente him to C Babylon.

4.Reg.25.b Jere.52.b * Moreouer/ the Caldees brente vp the kynges palace/with the other houſes of the people, and brake downe the walles of Jeruſalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the citie/and ſuch as were come to helpe them(what ſoeuer was lefte of the comen ſorte) Nabuzaradan the cheife capytayne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne let the raſcal people(and thoſe that had nothynge) dwell ſtyll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vyneyardes and corne feldes at the ſame tyme Nabuchodonoſor alſo the kynge of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge / concernynge Jeremye / ſayinge: take and cheryſhe hym, and make muche of hym: ſe thou do hym no harme, but intreate him after his owne deſyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe, captayne / Nabuſaſban the chefe chamberlayne, Nergalſarezer the treaſurer and all the kyng of Jere.38.d Babilons lordes/ſent for Jeremy * ⁊ cauſed him to be ſet out of the fore entrye of the preſon, D Jere.41.b and committed him vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam the ſonne of Saphan: that he ſhulde cary him home, * and ſo he dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jeremye laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the preſon/the worde of the Lorde came vnto him, ſayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Moryan: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of Hoſtes the God of Iſrael: Beholde/the cruell ⁊ ſharpe plage yͭ I haue deuyſed for this cyte, wyl I brynge vpon them / that thou ſhall ſe it: but I wyll delyuer the (ſayeth the Lorde) and thou ſhalte not come in the handes of thoſe men / whom thou feareſt. For douteles I wyll ſaue the, ſo that thou ſhalt not peryſhe with the ſwearde: but thy lyfe ſhalbe ſaued, and that becauſe thou haſt put thy truſte in me/ſayeth the Lorde.

¶ Jeremy hath lycence to go whether he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jeruſalem, ouer whome Godoliah ruleth. Johanã prophecyeth deth vnto Godoliah

CAPI. XL.

A Jere.xliiii.a THIS is the maner howe the Lorde intreated Jeremy, * when Nabuzaradã the chefe Captayne had let him go fre from Psalm.18.b * Ramah, whyther he had led hym bounde amonge all the preſoners, that were caryed from Jeruſalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chefe captaine called for Jeremy, ⁊ ſaid vnto him: The Lorde thy God ſpake myghtely before of the myſerye vpon this place: Nowe the Lorde hath ſente it, and perfourmed it as he had promyſed. For ye haue ſynned agaynſt the Lorde, and haue not bene obedyent vnto his voyce, therfore commeth thys plage vpon you. Beholde, I lowſe the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf thou wylte nowe go wyth me vnto Babylon/ vp then: for I wyll ſe to the / and prouyde for the: But yf thou wylte not go wyth me to B Babylon, then remayne here. * Beholde, al Gene.xiii.b Tobi.i.b the lande is at thy wyll, loke where thou thynkeſt conuenient and good for the to abyde/there dwell. If thou canſt not be content to dwell alone/then remayne with Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam / the ſonne of Saphan: * whom the kynge of Babylon 4.Reg.25.c hathe made gouernoure ouer the cytyes of Juda, and dwel with him amonge the people, or remayne where ſoeuer it pleaſeth the So the chefe Capytayne gaue him his expenſes with a rewarde/and let hym go.

* Then wente Jeremye vnto Godoliah the Jere.39.c ſonne of Ahikam to Mizpa, and dwelt there with him amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

Nowe when the captaines of the Hoſte of C Juda(whiche with theyr felowes were ſcatred abrode on euery ſyde in the lande) vnderſtode that the kynge of Babylon had made Godoliah, the ſonne of Ahicam gouernour in the lande, and that man, wyfe and chylde/yee/and the poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) ſhuld be vnder his iuriſdiccion: They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely, Iſmaell the ſonne of Nathaniah, Johanan ⁊ Jonathan the ſonnes of Careah, Sareah the ſonne of Thanhometh, the ſonnes of Ophai the Netophathite/ Jeſaniah the ſõne of Maachati, with theyr companions. And Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam/the ſõne of Saphan, ſwore vnto them and their felowes in this maner: 4.Reg.25.c * Be nat afrayed to ſerue yͤ Caldees, dwell in the lande/⁊ do the kynge of Babylon ſeruice/ſo ſhal ye proſpere. Beholde/ I dwel at Mizpa to be an officer in yͤ Caldees behalfe/ ⁊ to ſatiſfye ſuche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne/corne and oyle/ and kepe them in your ware houſes, and dwel in your cities that ye haue in keppynge.

Yee, al the Jewes alſo yͭ dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea ⁊ in all the countrees/whẽ they herde, that the king D of Babylõ had made Godoliah the ſonne of

Ahicam

Ahicam the ſonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon thē yͤ were left in Juda. Al the Jewes (I ſay) returned out of al places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, & gathered wyne and other frutes, & that very muche.

Morouer, Johanan the ſone of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoſte, that were ſcatred on euery ſyde in the lande, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, and ſayde vnto hym: knoweſt thou not that Baalis kynge of the Ammonites hath ſent Iſmaell the ſonne of Nathaniah, to ſleye the? But Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then ſayde Johanan the ſonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa theſe wordes ſecretely: Let me go, I praye the, and I wyll ſleye Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, ſo that no body ſhall knowe it. Wherfor wyl he kyll the, that al the Jewes whiche reſorte vnto the / myght be ſcatred, and the remnaunt in Juda periſhe? Johanan the ſonne of Careah: Thou ſhalt not do it, for they are but lyes / yͤ thou ſayeſt / of Iſmael.

¶ Iſmaell kylleth Godoliah gylefully, and many other with hym. Johanan foloweth after Iſmael.

CAPI. XLI.

A 4.Re.25.b

BUt in the ſeuenthe Moneth it happened that * Iſmaell the ſonne of Nathaniah the ſonne of Eliſama (one of the kynges bloude) came wyth them that were greateſt aboute the Kynge / and tenne men that were ſworne with him: vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, and they dyd eate together. And Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah with thoſe ten mē that were ſworne to him, ſtarte vp, and ſmote Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam the Sonne of Saphan with the ſwearde / and ſlewe him / whom the kynge of Babylon had made gouernour of the lande. Iſmael alſo ſlewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa / and all the Caldees that he founde there waytynge vpon him.

The nexte daye after that he had ſlayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certaine mē from Sichem, from Siloh & Samaria / to the nombre of .lxxx. which had ſhauen their beardes, rente theyr clothes, & were al heuy, bryngyng meate offrynges, and incenſe in theyr hādes, to offre it in the houſe of the Lorde. B And Iſmael the ſōne of Nathaniah wēt forth of Mizpa * wepyng, to mete them. Eccle.xii.c Nowe when he met thē he ſayd: Go youre way to Godoliah the ſōne of Ahicā. And when they came in the myddeſt of the cytie, Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah (with thē that were ſworne vnto hym) ſlewe them, euen at the myddeſt of the pyt. Among theſe .lxxx. men there were ten / that ſayd vnto Iſmael: Oh ſleye vs nat / for we haue yet a greate treaſure in the felde, of wheate / barlye / oyle / and hony. So he ſpared them, and ſlewe them not with theyr brethren. Nowe the pyt wherin Iſmael dyd caſte the deade bodyes of the men (whom he ſlewe becauſe of Godoliah) had kynge Aſa cauſed to be made, for feare of Baaſa the kynge of Iſraell / and the ſame pytte dyd Iſmael fyl with ſlayne men. 3.Reg.15. As for the remnaunte of the people / the kynges daughters and all the people that were yet lefte at Mizpa, C vpon whome * Nabuſaradan the chefe captayne had made Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam gouernoure: 4.Reg.25. Iſmael the ſonne Nathaniah caryed them awaye preſoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Johanan the ſonne of Careah and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoſte with him / herde of all the wyckedneſſe that Iſmael the ſōne of Nathaniah had done: they toke theyr companions / and went out for to fyght with Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah and founde hym by the greate waters that are in Gibeon. Gene.14.c 2.Re.2.b Nowe when all the people / whom Iſmael led captyue, ſawe Johanan the ſonne of Careah and al the other Cappytaynes of the hoſte, they were glad. So all the people yͤ Iſmael had caryed away from Mizpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Johanan the ſonne of Careah. But Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah fled from Johanan with eyght of his ſworne companions, and wente to the Ammonytes. D Then Johanan the ſonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoſte yͤ were with hī, toke all the remnaunt of the people, whom Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had led away (whē he had ſlayne Godoliah the ſōne of Ahicam) whom they alſo had reſcued from him: fyghtynge men / wemen and chyldren, and gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gibeon: and went from thence, and ſat thē downe at Geruth Camaam, whiche lyeth beſyde Bethlehem * that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Caldees: Iere.xlii.a of whom they were afrayed / becauſe that Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah had ſlayne Godoliah Ahikams ſonne * whom the kynge of Babylon had made gouernour in the lande. Iere.xl.

CAPI. XLII.

¶ The Captaynes aſke councell of Jeremye what they ought to do. Jeremy monyſheth the remnaunt of the people not to go into Egypte.

A SO AL the captaynes, and Johanan the ſonne of Kareah/ Jezaniah the ſonne of Oſayah came with all the people from the leaſte vnto the moſte / and ſayde vnto Jere.xxi.a. Luk.17.a. Jeremye the prophet. * O heare oure petycyon / that thou mayeſte praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God/ namely/ for al the remnaunt, wher of there be very fewe of vs left of many / as thou ſeeſt vs : that the Lorde/ thy God may ſhewe vs a waye to go in, and tell vs/ what we ſhulde do. Then Jeremye the Prophet ſayde vnto them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God your Lorde / as ye haue requyred me: and loke what anſwere the Lorde geueth you/ I ſhal certyfye you therof / and kepe nothynge backe from you. And they ſayde vnto Je-Joſue.1.a. Mach.2.b. Jere.xliii.a. remy. * The Lorde of trueth and faythfulnes be oure recorde, that we wyll do all that the Lorde thy god commaundeth vs, whe-
B ther it be good or euyl. We wyll herke vnto yͤ voyce of our Lorde God to whō we ſende the, that we maye proſpere, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lorde oure God. And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the ſonne of Kareah, and al the captaynes of the people that were with him: yee, ⁊ all the people from the leaſte to the mooſte/ and ſayde vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lord God of Iſraell vnto whom ye ſente me / to Jere.xxi.b. laye forthe your prayers before hym: * If ye wyll dwell in thys lande, I ſhal buylde you vp, and not breake you downe: I ſhal plant you, and not rote you out: for O I repente, as cōcernyng the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kynge of Babylon/ of whom ye ſtande in awe : O, be nat afrayed of him, ſayeth the Lorde: for I wyll be with you, to helpe you, and delyuer you from his hande. I wyll pardon you. I wyll haue mercy vpon you, and brynge you agayne into youre owne lande.

C Neuertheles, yf ye purpoſe not to dwell in thys lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God : but wyll ſaye thus/ we wyll not dwell here / but go into Egypte: wher we ſhall nether ſe warre, heare yͤ noiſe of the trompe/ nor ſuffre honger/ there wyll we dwell. wherfore, heare nowe yͤ worde of Jere.7.a. the Lorde O ye remnaunt of Juda. * Thus ſayeth yͤ Lorde of hooſtes the god of Iſrael: If ye be wholy purpoſed to go into Egypt,
Jere.xliii.c. and to be there as ſtraungers: * the ſwearde that ye feared, ſhall ouer take you i Egypt: and the honger wherof ye be here afrayed ſhall hange vpon you and folowe you into Egypte/ and ther ye ſhall dye. And all they, that of ſet purpoſe vndertake to go in to Egypte/ to ſogeourne there/ ſhall peryſhe with the ſwearde / with honger and peſtylence : not one of them ſhall remayne/ there ſhal none eſcape the plage, that I wil bring vpon them.

For thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: lyke as my wrath and indignacyon is moued agaynſt the inhabytours of Jeruſalē, ſo ſhal my diſpleaſure be kindled agaynſt you alſo, yf ye go into Egypte: D
⁊ there ye ſhalbe reuiled/ abhorred, brought to ſhame and confuſyon : and as for thys place ye ſhall neuer ſe it more. The Lorde forbyddeth you (O ye remnaunte of Juda) that ye ſhall not go into Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earneſtly thys daye, for ye haue dyſſembled with me. * For ye ſente me vnto the Lorde Jere.xlii.a. youre God, and ſayde: O praye thou the Lorde oure God for vs : and loke what anſwere the Lorde oure God geueth the, that brynge vs agayne, and we ſhall do therafter. Nowe haue I ſhewed / ⁊ declared vnto you the voyce of the Lorde youre God / for the whiche cauſe he hathe ſente me to you. Nowe therfore, * If ye wyll not folowe it/ Deut.28.c. be ſure, yͤ ye ſhall peryſhe with the ſwearde, with honger ⁊ peſtylence: euen in the ſame place, where youre luſt is to go, and dwell.

¶ Johanan caryeth the remnaunte of the people into Egypte/ contrary to the mynde of Jeremye. Jeremye propheſyeth the deſtruccyon of Egypte.

CAPI. XLIII.

NOwe when Jeremy had ended all the A wordes of the Lorde his god vnto the people (for theyr ſakes to whom God had ſent him) Azariah the ſonne of Oſaiah/ and Johanan the ſonne of Kareah with all the proude perſonnes/ ſayde vnto Jeremye.
* Thou lyeſt, the Lorde oure God hath not Jere.xlii.a. ſente the to ſpeake vnto vs, that we ſhulde not go into Egypte/ and dwell there : But B Baruch the ſonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynſte vs, that he myghte brynge vs into the captyuytye of the Caldees : that they myght ſleye vs, and cary vs away preſoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the ſonne of Kareah, and al the captaynes of the hooſte, and al yͤ people folowed nat the commaundement of the Lorde : Namely/ to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the ſonne of Kareah ⁊

all the captaynes of the hooſt, caryed awaye all the remnaunt in Juda, & that were come together agayne from all the Heythen (among whom they had bene ſcatred) to dwel in the lande of Juda: Men/ wemen/ chyldren/ the kynges daughters: all thoſe that Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had lefte with Godoliah the ſonne of Ahikam / the ſonne of Saphan. They caried awaye alſo the prophet Jeremy / Baruch the ſonne of Neriah/ and ſo came into Egypte: for they were not obedyent / vnto the commaundement of god. Thus came they to Taphnis.

Iere. xli. c.

C And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy / ſayenge: Take great ſtones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the bryche wall / vnder the dore of Pharaos houſe in Taphnis / that al the men of Juda may ſe it, & ſaye vnto thē: Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſraell: Beholde, I wyll ſende and call for Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon my ſeruaunte / and wyll ſet his ſeate vpon theſe ſtones that I haue hyd, and he ſhall ſprede hys tente ouer them.

Iere. xlvi. c.

D And when he commeth / he ſhall ſmyte the lande of Egypte, ſome with ſlaughter, ſome with preſonment, and ſome with ŷ ſwearde. He ſhall ſet fyre vpon the temples of the Egypcyans goddes / and burne them vp/ and take the ſelues preſoners. Moreouer, he ſhall araye him ſelfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a ſhepherde putteth on hys cote/ and ſhall departe his way from thence in peace. E The pyllers alſo of the temple of the Sunne that is in Egypte: ſhall he breake in peces / and burne the temples of the Egypcyans goddes.

He reproueth the people for theyr Idolatrye. They that ſet lyght by the thretenynge of the Lorde, are threatened. The deſtruccion of Egypte and the Jewes therin, is prophecied.

CAPI. XLIIII.

A THYS is the worde that was ſhewed to Jeremy concernyng al the Jewes/ whyche dwelte in Egypte: at Mygdol/ at Taphnis, at Noph, and in the lãde of Patures. Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſraell: ye haue ſene all the myſery, that I haue brought vpon Jeruſalem and vpon al the cytyes of Juda: ſo that this day they are deſolate and no man dwellinge therin: and that becauſe of the greate blaſphemies which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they wente backe to do ſacryfyce, and worſhyppe vnto ſtraunge goddes: whom neyther they / nor ye / nor youre forefathers haue knowne. Howbeit I ſent vnto them my ſeruauntes, al the prophetes: I roſe vp early, I ſent vnto thē, and gaue them warninge. O do no ſuche abhomynable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herken, to turne from their wyckednes, and to do nomore ſacryfyce vnto ſtraunge goddes.

B Wherfore myne indygnacyon and wrathe was kyndled, and it brente vp the cytyes of Juda / the ſelues with the ſtretes of Jeruſalem, ſo that they were made waſte and deſolate, as it is come to paſſe this day. Nowe therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſrael: Howe happeneth it / that ye do ſo great euel vnto youre owne ſoules thus to deſtroye the men and wemen, chyldre and babes of Juda: ſo that none of you is left becauſe ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of youre owne handes: when ye offre vnto ſtraunge goddes in the lãde of Egipt, where as ye be gone to dwel. That ye might vtterly periſhe, and that ye myght be reuiled and ſhamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednes of your forefathers, the wyckednes of the kynges of Juda and their wyues, the wyckednes that ye youre ſelues and your wyues haue done in the lãde of Juda, and in the ſtretes of Jeruſalem?

C Yet are ye not ſory thys daye, ye feare not nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and youre forefathers. Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſraell: I am ſtedfaſtly aduyſed and determyned, to punyſhe you, and to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda that purpoſly wente into Egypte, there to dwell, I wyll take them, & and they ſhall al be deſtroyed. In the lande of Egipte ſhall they periſhe beynge conſumed with the ſwearde and with honger. For from the leaſt vnto the mooſt, they ſhall peryſhe with the ſwearde and with honger. Moreouer/ they ſhalbe reuyled/ abhorred/ ſhamed and confounded. For I wyll vyſet them that dwell in Egypte, as I haue vyſyted Jeruſalem: with the ſwearde, with honger and with peſtylence. So that none of the remnaunte of Juda / whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte: ſhall be lefte to come agayne into the lande of Juda, al though they thinke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none ſhall come agayne / but ſuche as are fled awaye.

Iere. xlii. c. and. xliiii.

D Then all the men whiche knewe that theyr wyues had offred vnto ſtraunge goddes/ & a great ſorte of wyues that ſtode there, yee/ and al the people that dwelt there in Egipt in the cytye of Pathures / anſwerde Jeremy, and ſayde. As for the wordes that thou haſt ſpokē vnto vs in the name of the Lord we wyll in no wyſe heare them: but what ſoeuer goeth out of our owne mouthe, that wyll we do. We wyll do ſacryfyce, and offre oblacions vnto the Quene of heauen, & lyke as we and our forefathers, our kinges and our heades haue done in the cities of Juda, and in the ſtretes and feldes of Jeruſalem. For then had we plenteouſneſſe of vytales, then were we in proſperyte/ and no myſfortune came vpon vs.

*But ſens we lefte, to offre/and to do ſacryfice vnto the Quene of heauen, we haue had ſcarcenes of al thīges, and periſhe with the ſwearde and honger. Laſte of all / when we wemen dyd ſacrifice and offred vnto the Quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes & poure vnto her drinkofferinges, to do her ſeruice, without oure huſbandes wylles?

Then ſayde Jeremy vnto all the people, to the men, to the wemen and to all the folcke, which had geuen hym that anſwere. Dyd not the Lorde remembre the ſacryfices that ye, youre forefathers, youre kinges and rulers (with all the people) haue offred in the cyties of Juda in the ſtretes and land of Jeruſalem? and hath he not conſydred this in his mide? Jn ſo much, that the Lord might no longer ſuffre the wyckednes of youre inuencyons / and the abhomynable thynges which ye dyd? * Js not youre lande deſolate and voyde, yee and abhorred, ſo that no man dwelleth therin eny more, as it is come to paſſe this daye?

*Dyd not all this happen vnto you, becauſe ye made ſuch ſacrifice / and ſynned agaynſt the Lorde? Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walcke in hys lawe, in his ordynaunces and ſtatutes.

Yee, thys is the cauſe, that all myſfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to paſſe this day. Moreouer, Jeremy ſpake vnto al the people and to all the wemen. Heare the worde of the Lord al Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egypte. Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Jſrael. Ye and youre wiues haue ſpoken with youre owne mouthe/ the thynge that ye haue fulfylled in dede. *Yee, thus haue ye ſayde: we wyl not fayle/ but perfourme the vowes that we haue vowed, we wyll do ſacryfice and powre out drincke offrynges to the Quene of heauen.

Purpoſly wyll ye ſet vp youre owne meanynges, and perfourme youre vowes. And therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that dwell in the lande of Egypte.

G

Gen. xxii. c.

Beholde, * J haue ſworne by my greate name, ſayeth the Lorde, that my name ſhall not be rehearſed thorowe any mans mouth of Juda, in all the lande of Egypte: to ſaye: The Lorde God lyueth, For J wyl watche/ to plage them, and not for theyr wealthe.

Jere. xliii. c.

* And all the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypte / ſhall peryſhe wyth the ſwearde and with honger, vntyl they be vtterly deſtroyed.

Neuertheleſſe, thoſe that fled awaye for the ſwearde, ſhal come agayne into the land of Juda / but there ſhall be very fewe of them. And all the remnaunte of Juda/that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, ſhall knowe whoſe wordes ſhalbe founde true: theyrs or myne. Take thys for a token that J wyll vyſet you in thys place/ſayeth the Lorde/and that ye maye knowe/howe that J (without doute) wyll perfourme my purpoſe vpō you to puniſh you. Beholde, ſaieth the Lorde, J wyll deliuer Pharao Hophrea kynge of Egypte into the handes of his enemyes, that ſeke after his lyfe: * euen as J gaue Zedekias the kynge of Juda into the handes of Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylō his enemy which ſought after his lyfe.

THESE are the wordes that Jeremy the prophet ſpake vnto Baruch ẏ ſōne of Neriah/* after that he had wrytten theſe Sermons in a boke at the mouthe of Jeremy. Jn the fourth yeare of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſias kynge of Juda ſayinge.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Jſraell vnto the, O Baruch: Jn ſo moche as thou thoughteſt thus (whā thou waſt wrytynge) wo is me, the Lorde hathe geuen me payne for my trauayle. J haue weryed my ſelfe with ſyghynge/and haue founde no reſte. Therfore tell him, O Jeremy, that the Lord ſayeth thus: Beholde, The thynge that J haue buylded, wyl J breake downe agayne and rote out the thing, that J haue planted yee, this whole lande. And ſekeſt thou yet promocyon? Loke not for it/ & deſyre it not. For J wyll brynge a myſerable plage vpon all fleſhe, ſayeth the Lorde. * But thy lyfe wyl J geue the for a pray in al places, wher ſo euer thou goeſt.

¶ He prophecyeth the deſtruccyon of Egypte. Delyueraunce is promyſed to Jſrael.

CAPI. XLVI.

Here

A HERE folowe the wordes of the Lord to the Prophete Jeremye, whiche he ſpake agaynſte all the Gentyles.

Eſa.xix.b. and.xx.a./ Eze.29.a. 30.and.31. 4.Re.24.b.

These wordes folowynge preached he to * the Egypcyans concernynge the hoſte of Pharao Necho kynge of Egypte, * when he was in Charcamis beſyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon ſlewe him. In the fourthe yeare of Jehoakim the ſonne of Joſias kynge of Juda.

Jer.xxxi.a.

* Make redy buckler and ſhylde/ and go forth to fyght: harneſſe your horſes, and let youre ſelues vpõ them: ſet your ſalettes faſt on, brynge forth ſpeares/ ſcoure youre ſwerdes and put on your breſte plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, that I ſe you ſo afrayed? why ſhrynke ye backe? Their worthyes are ſlayne. Yee, they runne ſo faſt awaye, that none of them loketh behynde him. Fearfulnes is fallen vpon euerychone of them ſayeth the Lorde. The lyghteſte of fote ſhall not fle awaye/ and the worthyes ſhall not eſcape.

B Towarde the Northe by the water of Euphrates, they dyd ſtoble and fall. But what is he this, that ſwelleth vp, as it were a floude roarynge and ragynge lyke the ſtreames of water? It is Egypte that ryſeth vp lyke the floude, and caſteth out the waters with ſo greate noyſe.

And he ſayde: I wyll go vp, and wyll couer the earthe: I wyll deſtroye the cytye, with them that are therin. Get you vp ye horſes/ roll forthe ye Charettes/ come forthe worthies: ye Morians, ye Lybeans with youre bucklers, ye Lydeans with youre bowes:

C This daye of the Lorde God of hooſtes, a daye of vengeaunce/ that he may avenge him of his enemyes. The ſwearde ſhal deuoure, it ſhall be ſatyſfyed and bathed in theyr bloude. For the Lorde God of hooſtes ſhall haue a ſlayne offerynge towarde the Northe, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Gilead) and brynge tryacle vnto the daughter of Egypte.

But in vayne ſhalte thou go to ſurgery/ for thy wounde ſhall not be ſtopped. The Heythen haue hearde of thy ſhame, and the lande is full of thy confuſion: for one ſtronge man dyd ſtumble vpon another/ and they are fallen both togther.

D Jer.xliii.b.

¶ These are the wordes that the Lord ſpake to the prophet Jeremy, concernynge the commynge of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon, whiche was ſente to deſtroye the lande of Egypte: Preach out thorowe the lande of Egypte/ and cauſe it to be proclamed at Mygdol/ Noph and Taphnis, and ſaye: Stande ſtyl/ make the redye/ for the ſwearde ſhall conſume the rounde aboute. Howe happeneth it that thy myghtye worthyes are fallen? why ſtode they not faſt? Euen becauſe the Lord thruſt them downe. The ſlaughter was greate: for one fell euer ſtyl vpon another. One cried vpõ another, Up/ let vs go agayne to oure owne people/ and to our owne natural countre, from the cruell ſwearde.

E They dyd crye euen there: O Pharao kyng of Egypte, the time wyl bringe ſedicion. As truly as I lyue (ſayeth the Kynge * whoſe name is the Lorde of hoſtes) it ſhal come as the mount of Thabor, and as Lybanus yt ſtode in the ſee. O thou daughter of Egypte make redy thy geer to flit. For Noph ſhalbe voyde and deſolate, ſo that no mã ſhal dwel therin. The lande of Egipt is like a goodly faire calf, but one ſhal come out of the north to pricke her forward. Her wagied ſoudiers that be with hir, are lyke fat calues.

Eſa.[illegible] and.li.

They alſo ſhall fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye of theyre ſlaughter and the tyme of theyr vyſytacyon ſhal come vpon them.

F The crye of them ſhall make a noyſe as the blaſt of a trompete. For they ſhall entre in with theyr hooſtes, & come with axes/ as it were hewers downe of wod. And they ſhall cut downe her wod, ſayeth the Lorde. For they ſhall be mo in nõbre then the greſhoppers, ſo that no man ſhalbe able to tell them. The daughter of Egypte is confounded, and delyuered into the hãdes of the people of the Northe.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes the God of Iſraell. Behold, I wyll vyſet that reſtleſſe people of Alexandria. Pharao and Egypte, yee/ bothe theyr Goddes and theyr kynges, euen Pharao/ and all them that put theyr truſte in hym.

Yee, I wyll delyuer them into the handes of thoſe/ that ſeke after theyr lyues. Namely/ into the power of Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon/ and into the power of his ſeruauntes. And after all theſe thynges it ſhalbe inhabyted as afore tyme ſaieth the Lorde.

G But be not thou afrayed (O my ſeruaunte Jacob) feare not thou, O Iſrael. For lo/ I wyl helpe the from farre, and thy ſede from the lande of theyr captiuite. Jacob alſo ſhal come agayne, and be in reſt, he ſhal proſpere and no man ſhal do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my ſeruaunt) ſayth the Lorde/ for I am with the: and wyll deſtroye all nacyons / amonge whom I haue ſcatred the. Neuertheleſſe/ I wyll not conſume the/ but chaſten the ⁊ correcte the: yee, and that with diſcrecion: neyther wyll I ſpare the as one that were fautleſſe.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynſt the Philiſtines.

CAPI. XLVII.

A THESE are the wordes, that the Lorde ſpake vnto Jeremye the Prophete agaynſt the Philiſtines, before that Pharao ſmote the cite of Azah. Thus ſayth the Lorde Beholde/ there ſhal waters aryſe out of the North: and ſhall growe to a greate floude / runnynge ouer and coueryng the lande / the cities/ and them that dwel therin.

B And the men ſhall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande, ſhall mourne at the noiſe and ſtampynge of theyr ſtronge barbed horſes/ at the ſhakynge of theyr charettes, and at the rombling of the wheles. The fathers ſhal not loke to theyr chyldren, ſo feable and wery ſhal their handes be: at the ſame tyme when he ſhalbe there, to deſtroye the whole lande of the Phyliſtines. He ſhal make waſt both Tyrus / Sydon and all other that are ſworne vnto them.

C For the Lorde wyll deſtroye the Philiſtines/ the remnaunt of the Jle of Caphtor. Baldenes is come vpon Azah, Aſcalon with her other valleys ſhall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wilt thou ſlepe / O thou ſwearde of the Lorde? When wylt thou ceaſſe? Turne agayne into thy ſwete reſt/ and leaue of. But howe can it ceaſſe, when the Lorde hym ſelfe hath geuen him a charge agaynſt Aſcalon/ and rayſed it vp agaynſt the cities of the ſee coſte?

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynſt the Moabites.

CAPI. XLVIII.

A THus ſayeth the Lorde of Hooſtes the God of Iſrael agaynſt * Moab: wo be to the cytie of Nebo / for it is layed waſte, brought to confuſyon, and Kariathiarim is taken/ Myſgab is brought to ſhame/ and afrayed: Moab can boſte nomore of Heſebon for they haue craſed agaynſt it. Come (ſhal they ſay) let vs rote them out, that they may be nomore amonge the nombre of the Gentiles / and that thou Madmen maye nomore be thought vpon: and the ſwearde ſhal perſecute the: A voyce ſhall crye from Horonaim: with great waſtynges and deſtruccion/ is Moab made deſolate.

Eſay.xv.a
Jere.xlix.a
Ezec.xxv.b
Sophon.ii.b

Chyldren coulde tell of the crye thereof: For at the goynge vp vnto Luyth he aroſe with lamentacion and mournynge/ ⁊ downe towarde Horonaim/ they herde a cruell and a deadely crye: Get you awaye/ ſaue your lyues/ and be lyke vnto the heeth in the wyldernes. * For because thou haſt truſted in thine owne workes and treaſure/ thou ſhalt be také. Chamos with his preſtes and prynces ſhall go away into captyuyte.

Eſay.xi.b
Jere.xlvi.b
Ezec.xxix.b

B The deſtroyer ſhall come vpon al cyties none ſhall eſcape. The valleys ſhalbe deſtroyed/ and the feldes ſhalbe layed waſte: lyke as the Lorde hath ſpoken.

Make a token vnto Moab/ that ſhe get her away ſpedely: for her cytties ſhalbe made ſo deſolate/ that no man ſhall dwell therin. Curſed be he that dothe the worcke of the Lorde neglygently/ and curſed be he that kepeth backe his * ſwearde from ſheddyng of bloude.

Jere.47.b

Moab hath euer bene ryche and careles from her youth vp/ ſhe hath ſytte and taken her eaſe with her treaſure. She was neuer yet put out of one veſſell into another (ẏ is) ſhe neuer went away into captiuite, therfore her taſte remayneth, and her ſauoure is not yet chaunged.

C But lo, the tyme cómeth, ſayeth the Lorde that I ſhall ſende her truſſers to truſſe her vp, to prepare and ſeaſon her veſſels: ye her tanckerdes ratell and ſhake to and fro. And Moab ſhalbe aſhamed of Chamos/ lyke as Iſraell was aſhamed of * Bethel, wherein ſhe put her truſt.

3.Re.xii.g

Wherfore do ye thynke thus: we are myghtye/ and ſtronge men of warre? Moab is deſtroyed, and her cytties brent vp: her choſen yong men be ſlayne, ſayeth the kyng, whoſe name is the Lorde of Hooſtes. The deſtruccion of Moab commeth on a pace / and her fall is at hande.

Al her neyghbours ſhal mourne for her/ and al they that knowe her name/ ſhall ſay. O howe happeneth it, that the ſtrong ſtaf ⁊ the goodly rod is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe frõ thy glory and ſyt in pouertie. For he that deſtroyeth Moab, ſhal come vp to the alſo/ and breake downe thy ſtronge holdes.

D And thou that dwelleſt in Aroer, get the to the ſtrete, and loke aboute the: aſke them that are fled ⁊ eſcaped/ and ſay: what thinge is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye / tell it out at Arnon/ ẏ Moab is deſtroyed. For miſery ſhal come vpon the playne lande. Namely/ vpon Holon, ⁊ Iahazah: vpon Mephaath ⁊ Dibon, vpon upon Nabo and the houſe of Deblathaim / upon Cariathaim and upon the houſe Gamul, upon the houſe Maon and Carioth / upon Boſrah and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

¶ The horne of Moab is ſmyten downe & her arme broken, ſayeth the Lorde. Make her droncken, for ſhe magnyfieth her ſelfe aboue the Lorde, that men may clappe their handes at her vomite, and that ſhe alſo may be laughed to ſcorne: O Iſrael, ſhalte thou not laugh him to ſcorne, when he is taken amonge theues. * Yee, becauſe of thy wordes that thou haſt ſpoken agaynſte hym, thou ſhalt be dryuen awaye. Yee Moabites ſhall leaue the cyties, and dwel in rockes of ſtone and become lyke doues, that make their neſtes in holes.

Nume. 21. a * As for Moabs pryde / we haue herde of it / ſhe is verye hye mynded. I knowe her

E ſtoutneſſe / her boſtynge / her arrogancye and the pryde of her ſtomacke / ſayeth the Lorde. For her furiouſneſſe maye neyther upholde her with ſtrength nor dede. Therfore ſhall their mournynge be made for Moab, and euery man ſhal cry for Moabs ſake: a lamentacyon ſhalbe made to the men that ſtande upon the wall. So wyll I mourne for the alſo / O Iazar / and for the / O thou vyneyarde of Sabamah.

Eſai. xvi. b
Iere. xlix. c. Thy wyne braunches ſhall come ouer the ſee / and the braunches of Iazer but unto the ſee: the deſtroyer ſhall breake into thy harueſt and grape gatherynge: Myrth and cheare ſhalbe taken awaye from the tymbre felde / and from the whole lande of Moab.

There ſhal be no ſwete wyne in the preſſe, the treader ſhall haue no ſtomacke to crye yee / there ſhalbe none to crye unto him: whiche aforetyme were herde from Heſebon to Eleale and Iahaz, whiche lyfted up theyr voyce from Zoar unto Horonaim, that the bullockes of thre yeare olde. The waters alſo of Nemrim ſhalbe dryed up.

F Moreouer / I wyll make Moab ceaſſe (ſayeth the Lorde) frome the offrynges and cenſinge that ſhe hath made unto her Goddes in hye places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy ſonge: for the mens ſake of the bryck wall my herte mourneth alſo / euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull ſonge: for they ſhalbe very fewe / and deſtroyed.

Eſay. 15. b * All heades ſhalbe ſhauen / and all berdes clypped, all handes bounde, and lyne gyrded aboute with ſacke clothe. Upon all the houſe toppes and ſtretes of Moab / there ſhalbe mournynge: For I wyll breake Moab lyke an unprofytable veſſell, ſayeth the Lorde. O howe is ſhe deſtroyed? O / how mourneth ſhe? O / howe doth Moab hange downe her heade / & is aſhamed? Thus ſhal Moab be a laughyng ſtocke / & had in deriſion of al them, that be rounde aboute her.

For thus ſayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the enemy ſhall come flyenge as an Aegle: and ſprede his wynges upon Moab. They ſhall clyme ouer the walles, & wynne the ſtronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens hertes in Moab ſhalbe lyke the herte of a woman trauelynge with chylde. Deut. 28.
Iere. 49. c

And Moab ſhalbe made ſo deſolate, yͭ ſhe ſhall no more be a people, becauſe ſhe hathe ſette up her ſelfe agaynſt the Lorde. * Feare / pyt / and ſnare / ſhal come upon the (O Moab) ſayth the Lorde. Who ſo eſcapeth the feare / ſhall fall in the pyt / and who ſo getteth out of the pyt / ſhal be taken in the ſnare. Eſay. 24.

For I wyll brynge a yere of viſytacyon upon Moab / ſayth the Lorde. They that are able to flye / ſhall ſtande under the ſhadowe of Heſebon. For there ſhall go a fyre out of Heſebon / and a flame frome Syon / & ſhal burne up that proude people of Moab both before and behynde.

Wo be unto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos ſhalt peryſſhe: Yee thy ſonnes and daughters ſhall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the laſt wyl I bryng Moab out of captiuyte agayne / ſayth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

¶ The worde of the Lord agaynſt the Ammonytes / againſt Idumea / Damaſcus / Cedar and Elam.

CAPI. XLIX.

A AS concernynge the Ammonytes / thus the Lorde ſayth: Hath Iſraell no chyldren / or is he without an heyre? Why hath your kynge then taken Gad in? wherfore doth his people dwell in his cyties? Beholde therefore / the tyme commeth (ſayth the Lorde) that I wyll brynge a noyſe of war into Rabah of the Ammonytes. Rabel ſhalbe deſolate / and her cyties brent up, and the Iſraelytes / ſhall be lordes ouer thoſe that had them in poſſeſſion afore, ſayth the Lord. Heſebon ſhall mourne / for it ſhall be roted out of the grounde, ſayth the Lorde. The cities of Rabah ſhal crye out, & gyrde them ſelues with ſacke cloth: they ſhall mourne, and runne aboute the walles, for their kynge ſhall be led awaye preſoner: yee his preſtes and prynces with hym. Ezech. 25.
Amos. 1.
Sopho. 2.

B Wherfore truſteſt thou in the water ſtreames that flowe to and fro, O thou fearce daughter: and thynkeſt thou art ſo ſafe (by reaſon of thy treaſure) that no man ſhall come to the?

Beholde, I wyll brynge a feare vpon the, ſayeth the Lord God of hoſtes, from al thoſe that be aboute the: ſo that ye ſhal be ſcatred euery man from another, and no man ſhall gather them together agayne that be fled. But after that/ I wyll brynge the Ammonytes alſo out of captiuite agayne.

[illegible] * Vpon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hooſtes ſpoken on this maner. Is there no more wyſdome in Theman? Is there no more good councell amonge his people? Is their wyſdome then turned clene to naught? Get you hence, turne your backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye cytezyns of Dedan.

For I wyll bryng deſtruccion vpon Eſau, yee, and the day of his viſitation. Yf ý grape gatherers came vpon the, ſhulde they not leaue ſome grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the, ſhulde they not take ſo much as they thought were ynoughe?

C But I wyll make Eſau bare, and diſcouer her ſecretes, ſo that he ſhal not be able to hide the. His ſede ſhalbe waſted away/ yee/ his brethre and his neyghbours, and he him ſelfe ſhall not be lefte behynde.

Thou ſhalt leaue thy fatherleſſe chyldren behynde the and I wyll kepe them, and thy wydowes ſhall take their comforte in me. [illegible] For thus hath the Lorde ſpoken. * Beholde, they that me thought were vnmete to drink of the cuppe, haue dronken with the firſt: and thynkeſt thou then to be fre?

No, no, thou ſhalt neither be quyte nor fre but thou muſt drinke alſo. For why, I haue ſworne by my ſelfe (ſayeth the Lorde) that Bozrah ſhall become a wyldernesse, an open ſhame, a laughyng ſtocke and curſyng: and all her cyties ſhalbe a continuall deſerte.

D For I am perfectly infourmed of ý Lord, that he hath ſent a meſſage all redy vnto the Heathen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynſt them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo, * I wyll make the but ſmall amonge the Heathen, and lytle regarded amonge men.

* Thy hye ſtomake & the pryde of thy hert hath diſceyued the, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of ſtony rockes, and haue the hye mountaynes in poſſeſſyon. Neuertheleſſe, thoughe thy neſt were as hye as the Aegles, yet wyll I caſt the downe, ſayeth the Lorde. Moreouer, Idumea ſhal be a wyldernesſe: * Who ſo goeth by it, ſhalbe abaſhed, & wonder at her miſerable plages, * Like as Sodome, Gomor, and the cyties that laye there aboute, were turned vp ſyde downe (ſayeth the Lorde) ſo ſhal no body dwel in Idumea, and no man ſhal haue his habitacyon there. Beholde, lyke as the Lyon cometh vp from the pleaſaūt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene paſtures of Etham, ſo wyll I dryue him, and make him runne agaynſt her. But who is the yonge man that I wyll ordayne therto? Who is lyke vnto me? What is he ý wyl ſtryue with me? What ſhepherde maye ſtande in my handes?

* Therfore, heare the coūcel of the Lord, that he hath taken vpon Idumea: & his purpoſe, that he hath deuyſed vpon the cytezyns of Theman: The leaſte of the flocke ſhall teare them in peces/ and loke what fayre thynge they haue/ they ſhall make it waſte, and them ſelues alſo. At the noyſe of theyr fall, the earthe ſhall quake, the crye of theyr voice ſhalbe herde vnto the red ſee. Behold, * the enemye ſhall come and fle vp hyther/ lyke as it were an Aegle, and ſprede his wynges vpon Bozrah. Then ſhall the hertes of the worthyes in Edom be as the herte of a woman trauaylyng of chylde. * Vpon Damaſcus, ☞ Hemath & Arphad ſhal come cōfuſion/ for they ſhall heare euell tydynges: they ſhalbe toſſed to and fro lyke the ſee that can not ſtande ſtyll. Damaſcus ſhalbe ſore afrayed, and ſhall fly, tremblynge ſhal come vpon her. Sorow and payne ſhal ouer take her as a woman trauaylyng of chylde. But howe ſhulde ſo worſhypfull and glorious a cytie be forſaken? Heare therfore: her yonge men ſhall fall in the ſtretes/ and all her men of warre ſhall be taken away in that tyme/ ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes. I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damaſcus, which ſhal conſume the place of Benhadad.

* As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hazor/ whome Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon ſmote downe/ the Lorde hath ſpoken thus vpon them: Aryſe, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and deſtroy the people towarde the Eaſte. Theyr tentes and their flockes ſhal they take away/ yee their hangynges & theyr veſſell. Their Camels alſo ſhall they carye awaye with them. They ſhall come aboute them on euery ſyde wyth a fearefull crye.

F Fle, get you ſoone awaye/ crepe into caues, that ye may dwell there: O yee/ inhabitours of Hazor ſayeth the Lorde, for Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon hath holden a councel concernyng you, and cōcluded his deuyſe agaynſt you. Aryſe, and get you vp agaynſt yonder riche and careles people (ſayeth the Lorde) whiche haue neither gates nor dore barres, but dwell alone. Their Camels ſhalbe ſtollen, and the droues of theyr cattell dryuen awaye.

Moreouer, theſe ỹ be ſhauen wyll I ſcatter towarde all the wyndes, and bryng them to deſtruccion: yee, and that thorowe theyr owne familiers, ſayeth the Lorde. Hazor alſo ſhalbe a dwellynge for Dragons, and an euerlaſtyng wyldernesse: ſo that no body ſhal dwel there, and no man ſhal haue there his habitacyon.

G These are the wordes, that ỹ Lord ſpake to the Prophete Ieremy concernyng * Elã, in the begynnyng of the reygne of Zedekiah kynge of Iuda. Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes: Beholde, I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take away theyr ſtrength: and vpon Elam I wyl brynge the foure windes from the foure quarters of heauen, and wyl ſcatre them agaynſt the ſame foure wyndes. And there ſhalbe no people, but ſome of Elã ſhal flee vnto them.

For I wyll cauſe Elam to be afrayed of theyr ennemies, and of them that ſeke theyr lyues and wyll brynge vpon them the indignacyon of my wrath, ſayeth the Lorde. And I wyll perſecute them with the ſwearde/ ſo long tyl I haue brought them to naught. I wyll ſet my ſtole in Elam, I wyll deſtroye both the kyng and the prynces from thence, ſayeth the Lorde. But in proceſſe of tyme I wyll bryng Elam out of captyuite agayne/ ſayeth the Lorde.

¶ He prophecyeth the deſtruccion of Babylon, and the delyueraunce of Iſrael, whiche was in captiuite.

A THE wordes that the Lorde ſpake vnto the Prophete Ieremy, concernynge Babylon, ⁊ the lande of the Caldees: * preache amonge the Gentyles, lette youre voyce be hearde, make a token: crye out kepe no ſylence, but ſaye: Babylon is wonne. * Bel is confounded, and Merodach is ouercome * Yee, theyr goddes be brought to ſhame and theyr ymages ſtande in feare. For out of the Northe ☞ there dothe come a people agaynſt her/ whiche make her lande ſo waſt that no body dwell therin, neyther man nor beaſte/ for they flye and departe from thence * In thoſe dayes and at that tyme ſayeth the Lorde, the Chyldren of Iſrael ſhal come they and the chyldren of Iuda, weppyng and makyng haſte, and ſhal ſeke the Lord theyr God. They ſhall aſke the way to Sion thyther ſhall they turne theyr faces, and come ⁊ hange vpon the, in a couenaunte that neuer ſhalbe broken.

My people hathe bene a loſte * flocke/ ☞ my ſhepherdes haue diſceyued them, and haue made them go aſtray vpon the hylles. the God of Iſrael: Beholde, I wyll vyſit the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdome * I haue viſited the kynge of the Aſſirians and wyll brynge Iſrael agayne to his pleaſaunte paſture, that he may fede vpon Charmel and Baſan, and be ſatiſfyed vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad. * In theſe dayes and at the ſame tyme (ſayeth the Lorde) yf the offence of Iſrael be ſought for, there ſhal none be founde: yf men enquere for the ſynne of Iuda, there ſhalbe none: for I wyll be mercyfull vnto them, whom I ſuffer to remayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemies lāde, and viſet them that dwel therin: downe with them, and ſmyte them vpon the backes, ſayeth the Lorde: do accordyng to al, that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of a ſlaughter & great murthur, namely on thys maner. Howe happeneth it, that the hāmer of the whole worlde is thus broken and broſed in ſondre? Howe chaūceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernes amonge the Heathen on thys maner? I my ſelfe haue layed wayte for the, and thou art takē vnwares: art thou trapped & ſnared: for why, thou haſte prouoked the Lorde vnto anger: The Lorde hathe opened his houſe of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapens of his wrath. For yͤ thing that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lorde of hoſtes worcke.

Theſe thynges ſhal come vpon her at the laſte, they ſhall breake into her preuy chambres, they ſhall leaue her as bare as ſtones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They ſhal ſo deſtroye her, that nothing ſhalbe left. They ſhal ſleye al theyr myghtie ſouldyers, and put them to death. Wo be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of theyr vyſitacion is at hande. Me thynke I heare all ready a crye, of them that be fled and eſcaped out of the lande of Babylon, which ſhewe in Syō the vengeaunce of the Lorde our God/the vengeaūce of his temple: yee, a voyce of thē, crye agaynſt Babylō: Cal vp al the archers agaynſt Babylon, pytch your tentes rounde about her, that none eſcape. * Recompence her/as ſhe hathe deſerued: and accordynge as ſhe hath done, ſo deale with her agayne/ for ſhe hathe * ſet vp her ſelfe agaynſte the Lorde, agaynſt the holy one of Iſrael: Therfore ſhall her yonge men fall downe in the ſtretes / and all her men of warre ſhalbe roted out in that daye, ſayeth the Lorde. Beholde / I ſpeake vnto the (O thou proude) ſayeth the Lorde God of hoſtes: for thy daye ſhall come / euen the tyme of thy vyſytacyon. And the proude ſhall ſtomble and fall, and no man ſhall helpe hym vp. I wyll burne vp hys cytyes with fyre/ and it ſhall conſume all that is rounde aboute hym.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes: The chyldren of Iſraell and Iuda ſuffer violence together. All they that haue them in captyuyte, kepe them faſte, and wyll nat let them go, but theyr auenger and redemer is myghtye, whoſe name is the Lorde of Hoſtes: he ſhall maynteyne theyr cauſe, he ſhal make the lande ſhake, and iudge them that dwel therin, one with another. The ſwearde ſhall come vpon the Caldees, ſayeth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon theyr prynces, and vpon theyr wyſe men: The ſwearde vpon theyr ſothſayers/ as for thoſe (they ſhall become fooles.) The ſwearde vpon theyr worthyes, ſo that they ſhall ſtande in feare: The ſwearde vpon theyr horſmen and charettes, and vpon all the comen people that dwell vnder them: ſo that they ſhall all become lyke wemen. The ſwearde vpon theyr treaſure, ſo that it ſhall be ſtolen awaye. The ſwearde vpon theyr waters, ſo that they ſhalbe dryed vp. For the lande worſhyppeth ymages, & delyteth in ſtraunge wondrefull thynges. Therfore ſhall wylde beeſtes, Apes, and Eſtriches dwel therin/ for there ſhall neuer man dwel there, neyther ſhall any man haue his habytacyon there for euermore. Lyke as God deſtroyed * Sodome and Gomorre, with the cyties that laye there aboute, ſayeth the Lorde: So ſhall no man dwell there alſo/ neyther ſhall any man haue there his habytacyon * Beholde, there ſhal come a people from the North with a great bonde of men, and many kynges ſhall ſtande vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes and buclers, cruell are they and vnmercyfull.

A piteous crye ſhalbe hearde from Babylon, and a great myſery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde deſtroyeth thē and when he dryueth out the hye ſtomacke and proude boſtynge, wherwith they haue bene as furious as the waues of great water floudes/ and made greate crakes with theyr wordes. Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde of hooſtes: The thycke wall of Babylō ſhalbe bro- G hen, and her hye gates ſhalbe brent vp. And the thynge that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with great trauayle and laboure / ſhall come to naught and be conſumed in the fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the ſonne of Neriah, the ſonne of Maaſiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, in the .iiij. yeare of hys raygne. Nowe thys Saraiah was a peaceable prynce. Jeremy wrote in a booke all the myſery that ſhulde come vpon Babylon, yee, and all theſe ſermons that be wrytten agaynſte Babylon, and gaue Saraiah thys charge. When thou commeſt vnto Babylon, ſe that thou reade all theſe wordes, and ſaye. O Lorde, thou arte determyned to rote out this place ſo that neyther people nor catell ſhall dwell there any more, but to lye waſt for euer: and when thou haſt redde out the booke, bynde a ſtone to it, and caſte it in the myddeſt of Euphrates, and ſaye, Euen thus ſhall Babylon ſyncke, and be thruſt downe with the burthen of trouble, that I wyll brynge vpõ her: ſo that ſhe ſhall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremy.

¶ He repeteth the takynge of Zedekiah. Jeruſalem is taken of the Chaldees. Zedekiahs ſonnes are ſlayne before his face, and hys eyes put out. The cytie is burned. The temple ſpoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jeruſalem are caryed to Babylon. Kynge Jehoakyn is brought forth of preſon, and fed lyke a kynge.

CAPI. LII.

A 4.Re.24.d. 2.Par.36.b. Zedekiah was * one & .xxx. yeare olde, whē he was made kynge, and he raygned eleuen yeare in Jeruſalem. Hys mothers name was Hamutall, Jeremyes daughter of Lybna. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoakim dyd. For the Lorde was angry at Jeruſalem & Juda, ſo longe tyll he had caſt them out of his preſence. And Zedekiah fel from the kynge of Babylō. Jere.39.a. 4.Re.25.a. * But in the nynth yeare of his raygne, In the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylon with al his hoſte came before Jeruſalem, & beſeged it / and made them bulworkes rounde about it. And thys beſegynge of the cytie endured vnto the eleuenth yeare of kynge Zedekiah.

B 4.Re.25.a. Jere.39.b. Jere.39.a. * And in the fourth moneth, the .ix. daye of the moneth, there was ſo great honger in the cytie: that there were no more vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the ſoudyers brake awaye, and fled out of the cytie by nyght thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had cōpaſſed the cytie rounde about, yet went theſe men theyr waye towarde the wyldernes.

And ſo the Caldees folowed vpon thē, and toke Zedekiah the kynge in the felde of Jericho, when his hooſt was runne from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye preſoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. Jere.39.

C The kynge of Babylon alſo cauſed Zedekias ſonnes to be ſlayne before his face, yee, & put all the prynces of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer, he put out the eyes of Zedekiah, cauſed hym to be bounde with cheynes, to be caried vnto Babylon: and let hym lye in preſon, tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in yͤ nynth yeare of Nabuchodonoſor kyng of Babylon / Nabuſaradan the chefe captayne and the kynge of Babylons ſeruauntes came vnto Jeruſalem, and brent vp the houſe of the Lorde. He brent vp alſo the kynges palace, all the houſes & all yͤ gorgeous buyldynges in Jeruſalem. And the whole hooſt of the Chaldees that were with the chefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jeruſalem rounde aboute.

D As for the poore people and ſuche folke as yet was left in the cytie / which alſo were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuſaradan the chefe captayne caryed them awaye preſoners. But the poore people of the countre, dyd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vyneardes and feldes. The Caldees alſo brake the brazen pyllers that were in the houſe of the Lord, yee, the ſeate and the brazen lauer that was in the houſe of the Lorde: and caryed all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye alſo the Cauldrons / ſhouels, fleſh hokes, ſprinklers, ſpones, and all the brazen veſſell that was occupyed in the ſeruyce: with the baſens, colepannes / ſprynklers / pottes / candelſtyckes / ſpones, and cuppes: wherof ſome were of golde / and ſome of ſyluer.

E The chefe captayne toke alſo the two pyllers / the lauer / the twelue brazen bullockes that ſtode vnder yͤ ſeate, * which kyng Salomon made in the houſe of the Lorde: and all the veſſel conteyned ſo much metal, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piller was eyghtene cubytes hye: and the rope yͭ went aboute it, was twelue cubytes / & foure fyngers 3.Re.7.

gers thycke and rounde. Nowe vpon the tope were bꝛaſen knoppes, ⁊ euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates rounde aboute of cleane bꝛaſſe.

After this maner were bothe the pyllers faſhyoned with the pomgranates, whereof there were an hundꝛeth ⁊ xcvj. whiche hanged vpon the whopes rounde aboute. The chefe captayne alſo toke Sariah the hye pꝛeeſt and Sophoniah that was chefe nexte hym, F and the thꝛe kepers of the treaſury. He toke out of the cytie a chamberlayne which was a captayne of the ſouldyers, and ſeuen men that were the kynges ſeruauntes, whiche were founde in the citie: and Sepher a captayne that vſed to muſter the men of warre:
with thꝛeſcoꝛe men of the countre that were taken in the cytie, These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kynge of Babylon cauſed them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath.
And thus Juda was led awaye captyue / out of hys owne lande. This is the ſome of the people, whome Nabuchodonoſoꝛ led away captiue.

G In the ſeueth yere of his raygne / he caryed away of the Jewes, thꝛe thouſand and thꝛe and twenty. In the.xviij. yeare Nabuchodonoſoꝛ caried awaye from Jeruſalem eyght hundꝛeth thirtye and two perſonnes.
In the.xxiij. yeare of Nabuchodonoſoꝛ Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, toke awaye ſeuen hundꝛeth fourty and fyue Jewes pꝛeſoners.
The whole ſumme of all the pꝛeſoners, is foure thouſande and ſyxe hundꝛeth.
* In the.xxxvij. yeare after that Jehoacin the kynge of Juda was caryed away in the.xxv. daye of the.xij. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babilon (the ſame yeare that he reygned) gaue Jehoacin the kynge of Juda his pardon, and let hym out of pꝛeſon / and ſpake louyngly to hym. And ſet his trone aboue the trones of the other kynges that were with hym in Babylon. He chaunged alſo the clothes of his pꝛeſon, yee, and he dyd eate with hym al his lyfe longe. And he had a contynuall lyuynge geuen hym of the kynge of Babylon, euery day a certayne thynge alowed hym all the dayes of his lyfe vntyll he dyed.

CAPITV. I.

IT chaunced in
A the .xxx. yeare / the fifth day of the fourth moneth, that I was among the prisoners
by the ryuer of Cobar
b & whē the heauens opened, & I ſawe a viſion of God. Nowe yͤ
v. daye of the moneth made out the .v. yeare of kynge Iohacins captyuyte. At the ſame tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechyel the ſonne of Buzi the Preſte / in the lande of the Chaldees
Eze.x.b. by the water of Cobar. * where ^ the ^ hande of the Lorde came vpon hym
And I loked, and beholde a ſtormy wynde
B came out of the North with a greate cloude full of fyre, whiche with hys glyſtre lyghtened al rounde aboute. And in the myddeſt of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an aungel, and as it were the lykenes of foure beaſtes, which were faſhyoned lyke a man:
ſauyng, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.
Theyr legges were ſtreyght, but theyr fete
* were lyke bullockes fete, and they glyſtered, as it had bene fayre ſcoured metal. Under theyr winges vpon al the foure corners they had mens handes. Theyr faces and theyr wynges were towarde the foure corners:
yet were the wynges ſo, that one euer touched another. When they wente, they turned them not aboute: but eche one went ſtreyght forwarde.
C * Upon the ryght ſyde of theſe foure, theyr Eze.x.b. faces were lyke the face of a man, & the face of a lyon. But vpon the lefte ſyde they had the face of an oxe/ and the face of an aegle.
Theyr faces alſo and theyr wynges were ſpred out aboue: ſo that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another/ and with the other they couered theyr body. Euery one when it wente, it wente ſtreyghte forwarde. Where as the ſpryte led them/Eze.x.c. thyther they wente/ * and turned not about in theyr goynge.
The faſhyon and countenaunce of the D beaſtes was lyke hoote coales of fyre, euen as though burnyng creſſets had bene amōg the beaſtes: ^ (thys was the vyſyon) and the ^ fyre gaue a glyſtre, and out of the fyre there wente lyghtenynge. When the beaſtes wente forwarde and backwarde, one wolde haue thought it had lyghtened. Nowe whē
I had well conſydered the beaſtes, I ſawe a worke of wheles vpon the earthe with foure faces alſo nye vnto the beaſtes.
The faſhyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the ſee. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one went forwarde, they wente all foure/ and turned them not aboute in theyr goynge.
They were large, great and horrible to loke vpon. Their backes were full of eyes roūde about them all foure. When the beaſtes wente/ the wheles wente alſo with them.
And when the beaſtes lyfte them ſelues vp from the earthe, the wheles were lyfte vp E alſo. Whyther ſoeuer the ſpryte wente, thither wente they alſo / and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them: for the ſpryte of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beaſtes went forth, ſtode ſtyll, or lyfte thē ſelues frō
the earth, then the wheles alſo wente, ſtode ſtyll, and were lyfte vp, for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.
Aboue, ouer the heades of the beaſtes
there was a fyrmamēt, whych was faſhyoned as it had bene of yͤ moſte pure Chryſtal and that was ſpred out aboue vpon theyr heades: vnder the ſame fyrmament were theyr wynges layed abrode, one towarde another, and two wynges couered the body of euery beaſt And when they wente forth,
I hearde the noyſe of theyr winges, lyke the F noyſe of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great God, and a ruſſhyng together as it were of an hooſt of men. And when they ſtode ſtyll, they lette downe theyr wynges. Nowe whē they ſtode ſtyl, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in yͤ firmamente that was aboue theyr heades.
Aboue the firmament that was ouer theyr heades, there was the faſhyon of a ſeate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Upō the ſeate G there ſatt one lyke a man. * I behelde hym, Eze.viii.a. and he was lyke an aungell, as it had bene
all of fyre within from hys loynes vpwarde.
And beneth, when I loked vpon hym vnder
yͤ loynes, me thought he was lyke a ſhynynge fyre, that geueth lyght on euery ſyde.

yee, the ſhyne & glyſtre that lightened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynbowe, whiche in a raynye daye apeareth in the cloudes. Euen ſo was the ſymylytude / wherin the glory of the Lorde appeared. When I ſawe it / I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that ſpake.

¶ The prophete is ſende to call agayne the people from theyr errour.

AFTER thys / ſayde he vnto me: A Thou ſonne of man / eate that / whatſoeuer it be: yee / * eate that cloſed booke / Iere.xv.c. Apo.x.b. 4.Eſd.14.e

Then dyd I eate the boke, * and it was in Pſal.xix.b and.cxix.n. Apoc.x.b. Ieremi.xv.c.

Thus the Lorde God hath ſpoken, whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the ſpryte toke me vp. And I heard the noyſe of a great ruſſhynge and remouynge of the moſt bleſſed glory of the Lorde out of hys place.

I hearde alſo the noyſe of the wynges of the beaſtes, that ruſſhed one agaynſte another, yee, and the ratling of the wheles, that were by them, whiche ruſſhynge and noyſe was very greate.
Eze.i.a.and
* Nowe when the ſpryte toke me vp, and caryed me awaye, I wente wyth an heuy and a ſorowful mynde / but the hande of the Lorde comforted me ryght ſoone.

And ſo in the begynnynge of the moneth D

by the water of Cobar / & remayned in that place / where they were: And ſo continued I amonge them ſeuen dayes being very ſory.

And when the ſeuen dayes were expyred/ Eze.xxxiii.b the Lorde ſayde vnto me: * Thou ſonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vnto the houſe of Iſrael: therfore take good hede to the wordes, and geue them warnynge as my commaundement.

E If I ſaye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man/ that (without doute) he muſte dye and thou geueſte hym not warnynge/ nor ſpeakeſt vnto hym/ that he maye turne from hys euyll waye/ and ſo to lyue: Then ſhal the ſame vngodly man die in his owne vnryghteouſneſſe: but hys bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheleſſe/ yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forſake not hys vngodlyneſſe: then ſhall he dye in hys owne wyckedneſſe/ but thou haſt dyſcharged thy ſoule.

Neuertheleſſe, yf thou exhorteſt the ryghteous, that he ſynne not/ and ſo the ryghteous do not ſynne: then ſhal he lyue, becauſe he hathe receaued thy warnynge, and thou haſt dicharged thy ſoule. And there came þ hande of the Lorde vpon me/ and he ſayde vnto me: Stande vp/ and go into the felde/ that I may there talke with the.

So when I had ryſen vp, and gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glory of the Lord Ezec.i.a. ſtode there, * lyke as I ſawe it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Ezec.ii.a. G * Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the ſpyrete came in to me, which ſet me vp vpon my fete, & ſayd thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and ſparre thy ſelfe in thine houſe. Beholde (O thou ſonne of man) there ſhall chaynes be brought for the/ to bynde the withall/ ſo that thou ſhalt not eſcape out of the. And I wyll make thy tunge cleue ſo to the rofe of thy mouth/ that thou ſhalte be domme/ and not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obſtynate houſholde.

But when I ſpeake vnto the/ then opē thy mouth, & ſay: Thus ſayeth Lorde God: who ſo heareth/ let him heare: who ſo wyl not, let hym leaue: for it is an obſtinate houſholde.

¶ The ſege of the cytye of Jeruſalem is ſignifyed. The longe contynuaunce of the captyuyte of Iſrael. An hunger is prophecyed to come in the captyuyte.

CAPI. IIII.

THOV ſonne of man: take a tyle ſtone, and laye it before the/ and deſcrybe A vpon it the cytye of Jeruſalem/ howe it is beſeged/ howe bulwerckes and ſtronge dyches are grauen on euery ſyde of it deſcribe alſo tentes/ and an hooſte of men rounde aboute it.

Moreouer/ take an yron panne/ and ſet it betwixte the and the cytye, in ſteade of an yrō wall. Then ſet thy face towarde it, beſege it, and laye ordinaunce againſt it to wynne it. This ſhalbe a tokē vnto the houſe of Iſrael. But thou ſhalte ſlepe vpon thy left ſyde: and lay the ſynne of the houſe of Iſrael vpō the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou ſhalt ſlepe vpon that ſyde, and beare their ſynnes. B * Neuertheleſſe, I wyl appoynte the a tyme Dani.ii.a (to put of theyr ſynnes) & the nombre of the dayes: Thre hundreth and .xc. dayes muſt thou beare the wyckedneſſe of the houſe of Iſrael. Whē thou haſt fulfylled theſe dayes lye downe agayne, and ſlepe vpō thy ryght ſyde, .xl. dayes, and beare the ſynnes of the houſe of Juda.

* A daye for a yeare, a daye (I ſaye) for a Num.14 yeare, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore ſet now thy face agaynſt that beſeged Jeruſalem/ and dyſcouer thyne arme/ that thou mayeſt prophecye agaynſte it.

Beholde I wyll laye chaynes vpon the, that thou ſhalte not turne the from one ſyde to another, tyl thou haſt ended the dayes of thy ſege.

Wherfore/ take vnto the wheate barly/ C beanes, growell ſede, Millium and fytches: and put theſe together in a veſſel, and make the loaues of bred therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou muſt lye vpō thy ſyde: that thou mayeſt haue bred to eate/ for thre hundreth and .xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eateſte/ ſhall haue a certayn wayght appoynted: namely twenty ſycles euery daye. Thys appoynted meate ſhalte thou eate daylye/ from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou ſhalt drynke alſo a certayne meaſure of water: Namely, the ſyxte parte of an Hin ſhalt thou drynke daily frō the begynnynge vnto þ ende. Barly cakes ſhalt thou eate, yet ſhalt thou fyrſt ſtrake them ouer wᵗ mans donge, that they maye ſe it. And with that ſayde the Lorde: Euen thus ſhall the children of Iſrael eate theyr defyled bred in the myddeſt of the Gentiles/ among whom I wyll ſcatre them.

Then ſayde I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, D

my ſoule was yet neuer ſtayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this houre/ I dyd neuer eate of a dead carcaſe, or of that whiche was ſlayne of wylde beaſtes, neyther cã there euer any vnclene fleſhe in my mouth.

Where vnto he anſwered me, and ſayde: well than, I wyll graunt the to take cowes donge, for the donge of a man, and to ſtrake the bred ouer with all / before them.

ech. v. b .iiii. d. Reg. 25. a And he ſayd vnto me: Beholde thou ſõne of man, * I wyll mynyſhe all the prouiſion of bred in Jeruſalem, ſo that they ſhall wey their bred, and eate it with ſcarceneſſe. But as for water, they ſhal haue a very lytle meaſure therof, to drynke. And when they haue nomore bred nor water, one ſhal be deſtroied with another, & famyſhe away for theyr wickedneſſe.

¶ The rydle of the hearres, by whiche is ſygnified the deſtruccyon of the people. The cauſes of the anger of God towarde the people. The Lorde diſcloſeth the rydle of the hearres.

CAPI. V.

A O Thou ſonne of man / take the then a ſharpe knyfe/ namely/ a raſour. Take that and ſhaue the hearre of thy heade and berd: Then take the ſcales and the weyght and deuyde the hearre a ſunder. And burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyre in the myddeſt of the cytie, after that the dayes of the beſegynge are fulfylled / then cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. * As for the thyrde p̃te that remayneth/ caſte it in the wynde, & I wyl draw out ỹ ſwerde after the. Jer. vii. b

Yet afterwarde/ take a lytle of the ſame/ and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curteſy of it/ and caſt in it the myddeſt of the fyre: and burne it in the fire. Out of the ſame fyre ſhall there go a flame / vpon the whole B houſe of Iſrael. Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: This ſame is Jeruſalem. I ſet her in the myddeſt of the Heathen & nacions that are rounde aboute her, but ſhe hath deſpyſed my iudgementes more then the Gentiles them ſelues, & broken my commaundementes more then the nacions, that lye round aboute her: For they haue caſt out myne ordinaunces/ and not walcked in my lawes. Leui. 18. b Therfore/ thus ſayeth the Lord God: * For ſo muche as ye with your wickedneſſe farre exceade the Heythen / that dwell rounde aboute you: (For ye haue nat walcked in my lawes neyther haue ye kepte myne ordynaunces nor accordynge to the ryghtuouſnes of the Gentyles / whyche are aboute you/ ye haue not done.) Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God:

C I wyl alſo come vpon the/ for in the myddeſt of the/ wyll I ſyt in iudgemente/ in the ſyght of the Heathen/ and wyl handle the of ſuche a faſhyon/ as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do frome that tyme forthe, and that becauſe of all thyne abhominaciõs For in the, fathers * ſhall be fayne to eate theyr owne ſonnes, & the ſonnes theyr owne fathers. Deut. 28. c Treno. 4. b 4. Reg. 16. f Suche a courte wyll I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunt of the wyl I ſcatre into all the wyndes.

Wherfore, as truly as I lyue (ſayeth the Lorde God) ſeyng thou haſt defyled my Sanctuary, with al maner of abhominaciõs and with all thy ſhamefull offences: For this cauſe wyl I alſo deſtroy the. Myne eye ſhal not ouerſe the, neyther wyll I ſpare the.

Jere. xv. a * One thyrde parte within the/ ſhall dye of the peſtylence and of hongre: Another thyrde parte ſhall be ſlayne downe rounde aboute the/ with the ſwearde: The other thyrde parte that remayneth / wyll I ſcatre abrode towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the ſwearde after them. D Thus I wyll perfourme my indygnacyon / and ſet my wrath agaynſt them/ and eaſe my ſelfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre agaynſte them/ they ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde / whiche with a feruente gelouſy haue ſpoken it. Moreouer, I wyll make the waſte and abhorred / before all the Heathen that dwell aboute the/ and in the ſyght of al them, that go by the: ſo that when I punyſh the in my wrath, in myn angre/ and with the plage of my whole dyſpleaſure: thou ſhalte be a very abhominacyon/ ſhame/ a gaſynge and wondrynge ſtocke / amonge the Heathen that lye aboute the. Euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it/ and it ſhall come to paſſe / when I ſhute amonge them the perlous dartes of honger, whiche ſhalbe but death: Yee, therfore ſhall I ſhute them/ becauſe I wyll deſtroye you: * I wyll encreaſe hunger / and mynyſhe all the prouyſyon of breade amonge you. Ezech. 4. c

Plages and myſery wyl I ſende you, yee & wylde beaſtes alſo to deſtroye you. Peſtylence and blodſheding ſhal come vpon you, & the ſwerde wyl I brynge ouer you. Euen I the Lorde, haue ſayde it.

¶ He ſheweth that the people ſhall be plaged for the ſynne of Idolatrye. He prophecyeth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, and theyr delyueraunce. The deſtruccyon of the frowarde is prophecyed.

CAPI. VI.

A AND the worde of the Lord came vnto me, ſaying: Thou ſonne of man, turne thy face to the * mountaynes of Iſraell / that Ezec. 36. a that thou mayſt prophecye vnto them / and ſaye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Iſraell: Thus hath the Lorde God ſpoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll brynge a ſwearde ouer you / and deſtroye your hye places: I wyll caſt downe your aulters, and breake downe your temples. Your ſlayne men wyll I laye before your goddes / and the deed carcaſes of the chyldren of Iſraell wyll I caſt before theyr Idolles / youre bones wyll I ſcatre rounde aboute your aulters, and dwellyng B places.

The cyties ſhalbe deſolate, the hylchapels layed waſte: youre aulters deſtroyed / and broken: youre goddes caſte downe / and taken awaye, your tempels layd euen with the grounde, youre owne workes cleane roted out.

Your ſlayne men ſhall lye amonge you / that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. Thoſe that among you haue eſcaped the ſwearde / wyll I leaue amonge the Gentyles / for I wyll ſcatre you among the nacio̅s. And they that eſcape from you / ſhal thynke vpon me amonge the Heathen, where they ſhalbe in captiuite.

As for that whoryſh and vnfaythful hert of theyrs, wherwyth they runne awaye fro me / I wyll breake it: yee, and put out thoſe eyes of theyrs / that commytte fornycacyon with their Idols.

C Then ſhal they be aſhamed / and diſpleaſed with theyr ſelues, for the wyckedneſſes and abhominacions, whiche they haue done and ſhal lerne to knowe, howe that it is not in vayne, that I the Lorde ſpake, to brynge ſuche myſery vpon them.

The Lord ſayd moreouer vnto me: Smite thine handes together, and ſtampe with thy fete / and ſaye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wyckednes of the houſe of Iſrael for because of them, they ſhall peryſhe with the ſwearde, with honger & with peſtylence. Who ſo is farre of, ſhal dye of the peſtyle̅ce: he that is nye at hande, ſhall peryſhe with the ſwearde: and the other that are beſeged ſhall dye of honger.

D Thus wyll I ſatiſfye my wrothfull diſpleaſure vpon them. And ſo ſhall ye learne to knowe / that I am the Lorde, when youre ſlayne men lye amonge your Idols, and aboute your aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees / amonge al thycke okes: eue̅ in the places, where they dyd ſacryfice to all theyr Idols. I wyll ſtretche my hande out vpon them, and wyll make the lande waſte: So that it ſhal lye deſolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of ☞ Deblothah forth, thorow all theyr habytacions: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. ☞

¶ The ende of all the lande of Iſrael ſhall ſodenly come. The cauſe of the deſtruccion therof. The Prophete is commaunded to ſhewe the ſynnes of the captiues that are at home.

CAPI. VII.

A THE worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: The I cal, O thou ſo̅ne of man. Thus ſayeth Lorde God vnto the lande of Iſrael: The ende commeth / yee, verely the ende commeth vpon al the foure corners of the earth.

But nowe ſhall the ende come vpon the: for I wyll ſende my wrath vpon the / & wyll punyſhe the accordynge to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thy abhominacyons.* Eze.7.a.b Myne eye ſhall not ouerſe the, neyther wyll I ſpare the: but rewarde the, accordynge to thy wayes / and declare thy abhominacyo̅s. Then ſhall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus ſayeth the Lord God: Beholde, one myſery and plage ſhall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I ſaye) that wayteth for the, is come all readye, the houre is come agaynſt the, that dwelleſt in the lande.

B The tyme is at hande, the day of ſedicyon is harde by, and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaines. Therfore, I wyl ſhortly poure out my ſore diſpleaſure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the al thy abhomynacions.

Eze.7.a.b C * Myne eye ſhal not ouerſe the, neither wyll I ſpare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and ſhewe thy abhomynacyons, to learne you for to knowe, how that I am the Lord that ſmyteth. Beholde, the day is here the daye is come, the houre is runne out, the rodde floriſheth, wilfulneſſe waxeth grene / malicious viole̅ce is growen vp, and the vngodly waxen to a ſtaf. Yet ſhal there no complaynte be made for them, nor for the trouble that ſhall come of theſe thynges.

The tyme co̅meth, the daye draweth nye: * Who ſo byeth, let him not reioyſe: he that ſelleth, let him not be ſory: for why. * Trouble ſhall come in the myddeſt of all reſte: ſo that the ſeller ſhall not come agayne to the byer, for neyther of them both ſhal lyue. For the viſion ſhall come ſo greatly ouer al, that it ſhall nat be hyndered: No man alſo wyth his wickednes ſhal be able to ſaue his owne lyfe. batayle/ for I am wrothe with al the whole multitude.

E The ſwearde ſhalbe without, peſtylence and honger within: ſo that who ſo is in the felde, ſhalbe ſlayne with the ſwearde: and he that is in the cytie * ſhall peryſhe with honger and peſtylence. Deu.xxii.d

And ſuche as eſcape and fle from among them, ſhalbe vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the felde: euery one ſhalbe afrayed, becauſe of his owne wyckedneſſe.

F All handes ſhalbe let downe, & all knees ſhalbe weake as the water: they ſhall gyrde them ſelues with ſacke cloth / feare ſhall fal vpon them. They ſhall not ſatiſfye theyr hongry ſoules, neyther fyll theyr emptye bellyes therwith: For it is become their owne decaye thorowe theyr wyckednes: becauſe they * made thereof not onely coſtely Jewelles for theyr pompe and pryde/ but alſo abhomynable ymages and Idoles. For this cauſe wyll I make them to be abhorred. Moreouer, I wil geue it into the handes of the ſtraungers to be ſpoyled: and to the wycked/ for to be robbed, and they ſhall deſtroye it. My face wyll I turne from them / my treaſury ſhalbe defyled: for the theues ſhall go in to it/ and ſuſpende it. I wyll make cleane riddaunce, for the lande is whole defyled with vnryghteous iudgement of innocente bloude / and the cite is full of abhominacions. Osee.viii.a

G Wherfore I wyl brynge the moſt cruel tyrauntes from amonge the Heathen, to take theyr houſes in poſſeſſion. I wyll make the pompe of the proude to ceaſſe, and they ſhall take in theyr Sayntuary. When thys trouble commeth they ſhall ſeke peace, but they ſhall haue none. One myſchefe and ſorowe ſhal folowe another, and one rumoure ſhall come after another: * Then ſhall they ſeke vyſions in vayne at theyr Prophetes. The lawe ſhalbe gone from the preſtes, and wyſdome frome the elders. The kynge ſhal mourne, the princes ſhalbe clothed with heuynes, and the hādes of the people in the lande ſhall tremble for feare. I wyll do vnto them after theyr owne wayes, and accordynge to theyr owne iudgementes wyll I iudge them: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Tren.ii.c ¶ An apperaunce of the ſymplytude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jeruſalem in the ſprete. The Lorde ſheweth the Prophete the Idolatryes of the houſe of Iſrael, and the ſely of the Preaſtes.

CAPI. VIII.

A IT happened, that in the ſyxte yeare the fyfth day of the ſyxte moneth I ſat in my houſe, and the Lordes of the councell of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fel euen there vpon me. And as I loked vp, * I ſawe as it were a lyckeneſſe of fyre from hys loynes downewarde, and from his loynes vpwarde it ſhyned maruelous cleare & lyke an angell to loke vpon. * This ſymylitude ſtretched out an hande, and toke me by the hearye lockes of my heade, and the ſprete lyft me vp betwyxte heauē and earth: and brought me in a vyſyon to Jeruſalem, into the entrye of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there ſtode an ymage, wt whom he that hath al thynges in his power was very wroth. Ezechiel.i.e Ezech.iii.b and.xl.d B

And beholde, the glory of the God of Iſrael was in the ſame place: euen * as I had ſene it afore in the felde. And he ſayde vnto me: Thou ſōne of man, O lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the North. Then lyft I vp myne eyes towarde the north, & beholde: beſyde the porte Northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacion in the very entryng in. And he ſayde further more vnto me: Thou ſonne of mā, ſeiſt thou what theſe do? Seyſt thou the greate abhomynacions that the houſe of Iſrael cōmytteth in this place? which ought not to be done in my ſainctuary? But turne the about, & thou ſhalt ſe yet greater abhomynacions. And wt that brought he me to the court gate: & whē I loked, beholde/ there was an hole ī ẏ wal. Ezech.i.a C

D Then ſayde he vnto me: Thou ſōne of man, dygge thorowe the wal. And whē I dygged thorowe the wal, beholde, there was a dore. And he ſayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhomynacyons they do here. So I went in, and ſawe: and beholde/ there were all maner ymages of wormes & beaſtes, all Idoles and abhomynacyons of the houſe of Iſrael paynted euery one roūde about the wall. There ſtode alſo before the ymages * lxx. And beholde, there ſat women mournynge for Thamus. Then ſayde he vnto me: haſte thou ſene this/thou ſonne of man? Turne the aboute, and thou ſhalt

And ſo he broughte me in to the inwarde courte of the Lordes houſe: and beholde at the porte of the Lordes houſe/ betwyxte the fore entrye and the aulter/ there were fyue and twentye men/that turned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Lorde/and theyr faces towarde the eaſte, and theſe worſhypped

And he ſayd vnto me: haſt thou ſene this thou ſonne of man? Thynketh the houſe of Juda/that it is but a tryfle, to do theſe abhomynacyons here? Shulde they fyl the lande ful of wyckedneſſe/ and vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yee, and purpoſely to caſt vp theyr noſes vpon me? C But as for thoſe, that haue the marcke vpō them: ſe that ye touch thē nat, * and begynne at my Sanctuary. Then they began at the elders, whiche were in the temple, for he had ſayde vnto them: when ye haue defyled the temple/and filled the courte with the ſlayne, then go your waye forthe. So they went out, & ſlewe downe thorowe the cyte. Nowe whē they had done the ſlaughter, and I yet eſcaped: I fell downe vpon my face, &

D cryed, ſayinge: O Lorde God wylte thou then deſtroye all the reſydue of Iſraell/ in thy fore dyſpleaſure/that thou haſte poured vpon Jeruſalem? Then ſayde he vnto me: The wyckednes of the houſe of Iſraell and Juda is very greate: ſo that the lande is ful of bloude/ and the cyte full of vnfaythfulneſſe: For they ſaye: * Tuſhe the Lorde regardeth not the earth/he ſeyth vs not. CAPI X.

A AND as I loked, behold/in the fyrmament that was aboue the Cherubyns there appered the ſymylytude of a ſtole of Saphyr vpon them: * Then ſayde he that ſat therin, to him that had the lynen raymēt vpon hym: Crepe in betwene ye wheles that are vnder the Cherubynes/ and take thyne hande ful of hoate coales out from betwene the Cherubyns/and caſt them ouer the cyte. Now the Cherubins ſtode vpon the ryght ſyde of the houſe, when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the inner courte. * But the glory of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns/and came vpon the threſholde of the houſe: ſo that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the courte was full of the ſhyne of the Lordes glory. Yee/and the ſounde of the Cherubynes wynges was hearde in to the fore courte/ lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almyghtye almyghtye God, when he ſpeaketh. Nowe when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynen/ to go and take the hoate coales from the myddeſt of the wheles/ whiche were vnder the Cherubyns: he wente and ſtode beſyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe hys hande from vnder the Cherubyns/ vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubyns/ and toke therof/ and gaue it vnto him that had on the lynen raymente in hys hande/ whiche toke it/ B and wente out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns/ there appeared the lyckneſſe of a mans hande: I ſawe alſo foure wheles beſyde the Cherubyns/ ſo that by euery Cherub there ſtode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the faſhion of the precyous ſtone of Tharſys: yet (vnto the ſyght) were they faſhyoned and lyke/ as C yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth/ they wente all foure together, nat turnynge about in theyr goynge: But where the fyrſt wente/ thyther wente they after alſo/ ſo that they turned nat aboute in theyr goynge. Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backes/ theyr handes & wynges/ yee, and the wheles alſo/ were all ful of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. ech.i.b. And I hearde hym call the wheles. * Euery one of them had foure faces: ſo that one face was the face of a Cherub, the ſeconde of a man/ the thyrde of a lyon/ the fourth of an Aegle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beaſt/ that I ſawe at the water of Cober. Nowe when the Cherubyns went/ the wheles wente with them/ and when the Cerubyns ſhoke theyr wynges to lyfte them ſelues vpwarde, the wheles remayned nat behynde/ but were with thẽ alſo. Shortly, when they ſtode/ theſe ſtode alſo. And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp alſo with them, for the ſprete of lyfe D was in the wheles.

ech.xi.d viii.a. * Then the glory of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threſholde of the temple/ & remayned vpon the Cherubins. And the Cherubyns flackred wyth theyr wynges, & lyfte them ſelues vp frõ the earth: ſo that I ſawe when they wente, and the wheles with thẽ. And they ſtode at the eaſte ſyde of the porte that is in the houſe of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. Thys is the beaſt that I ſawe vnder the God of Iſrael/ by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued/ that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces/ and euery one foure wynges/ and vnder theyre wynges/ as it were mens handes. Nowe the fygure of theyr faces was, euen as I had ſene them, by the water of Cober, and ſo was the countenaunce of them: Euery one in hys goynge wente ſtrayght forwarde.

Who they were that ſeduced the people of Iſrael. Agaynſte theſe he prophecyeth, ſhewynge them howe they ſhalbe ſcatered abroade. The renuynge of the herte commeth of God, otherwyſe can we nat walke in his commaũdementes. He threateneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counſelles.

CAPI. XI.

A Moreouer, the ſprete of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the Eaſte porte of the Lordes houſe. And beholde/ there were .xxv mẽ vnder the dore amonge whome I ſawe Iaazaniah the ſõne of Azur and Pheltiah the ſonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then ſayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou ſonne of man: theſe men ymagyn myſchefe, and a wycked councell take they in this cytie, ſayinge: Tuſh, there is no deſtruccyon at hande, let vs buylde houſes: this Ieruſalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleſh. Therfore ſhalt thou prophecye vnto them, yee, prophecye ſhalt thou vnto them, O ſonne of man. B And with that fell the ſprete of the Lorde vpõ me, and ſayde vnto me: Speake, thus ſayeth the Lorde: On thys maner haue ye ſpoken (O ye houſe of Iſrael) and I knowe the ymagynacyons of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthured in thys cytie, and fylled the ſtretes full of the ſlayne. Therfore/ thus ſayeth the Lorde God: The ſleyne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in thys cytye, are the fleſh, and thys cytye is the Eze.24.a. Mat.26.c. cauldron: * But I wyll brynge you out of it, & ye haue drawen out the ſwearde, euẽ ſo wyll I alſo brynge a ſwearde ouer you/ ſayeth the Lorde God. I wyll dryue you out of thys cytie and delyuer you into youre enemyes hande, and wyll condemne you. Ye ſhalbe ſlayne in all the coaſtes of Iſrael, I wyll be auenged of you, to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thys cytie ſhall not be youre cauldron, neyther ſhall ye be the fleſh therin: but in yͤ coaſtes of Iſraell wyll I punyſh you, that ye maye knowe/ that I am the Lorde: in whoſe commaundementes ye haue nat walked, not kepte his Leui.18.a. Deu.xii.b. lawes: * but haue done after the cuſtomes of the Heathen, that lye round aboute you.

C Nowe whẽ I preached, Pheltiah the ſonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face, & cryed with a loude voyce: ſayeng O Lorde God, wylt thou thẽ vtterly deſtroye all the remnaũt in Iſrael? And ſo yͤ worde of the Lorde came to me on thys maner: thou ſonne of man: thy brethren / thy kynſfolke/and the holy houſe of Iuda whiche dwell at Ieruſalem/ſaye. They be gone farre from the Lorde/but the lande is geuen vs in poſſeſſyon. Therfore tell them/thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyll ſende you far of amonge the Gentyles, and ſkatre you amonge the nacyons, and I wyll halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye ſhall come. Tell them alſo / thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and brynge you from the countryes where ye be ſcatered/& wyll geue you the lande of Iſrael agayne: and thyther ſhall ye come. And as for all impedimentes/and all youre abhomynacyons: I wyll take them awaye.

D * And I wyll geue you one herte/and I wyll plãte a newe ſprete within youre bowels. That ſtony herte wyll I take out of youre bodye, and geue you ☞ a fleſſhy herte that ye maye walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinaunces, and do thẽ that ye may be my people, and I your God. But loke whoſe hertes are dyſpoſed to folowe theyr abhomynacyons and wycked lyuenges: thoſe mens dedes wyll I brynge vpon theyr owne heades/ſayeth the Lorde God. After thys dyd the Cherubyns lyfte vp theyr wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glorye of the Lorde of Iſrael was vpon them. * So the glorye of the Lorde wente from the myddeſt of the cytie, and ſtode vpon the mounte of the cytye towarde the eaſt. * But the wynde toke me vp, and in a viſion (which came by the ſprete of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the preſoners. Then the viſyon that I had ſene vaniſhed awaye from me. So I ſpake vnto the preſoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, which he had ſhewed me.

CAPI. XII.

A THE worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ſayinge, Thou ſonne of man, thou dwelleſt in the myddeſt of a frowarde houſholde: * whiche haue eyes to ſe / and yet ſe nat: eares haue they to heare/ and yet heare they nat, for they are an obſtinate houſhold. Therfore (O thou ſonne of man) make thy gere redy to flyt / and go forth by fayre daye lyght / that they maye ſe. Yee, euen in theyr ſyght ſhalte thou go from thy place to another place: yf paraduenture they wyl conſydre, that they be an vnobedyent houſholde. Thy gere that thou haſte made redy to flyt withall, ſhalt thou beare out by fayre daye lyght, that they maye ſe: and thou thy ſelf ſhalt go forth alſo at euẽ in theyr ſyght, as a man dothe when he flytteth. Dygge thorowe the wall / that they maye ſe / and beare thorowe it the ſame thynge/that thou tokeſte vp in theyr ſyght.

B As for thy ſelfe/ thou ſhalte go forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face that thou ſe not the earthe / for I haue made the a ſhewtoken vnto the houſe of Iſrael. Nowe as the Lorde commaunded me, ſo I dyd: the gere that I had made redy/ brought I oute by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorowe the wall wyth my hande: and when it was darcke, I toke the gere vpon my ſhoulders/and bare them out in theyr ſyght.

C And in the mournynge, cãme the worde of the Lorde vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man/yf Iſrael that frowarde houſholde aſke the/and ſaye: what doeſt thou there? Then tell thẽ. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: This punyſhmente toucheth the chefe rulers at Ieruſalem/& all the houſe of Iſrael, that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am youre ſhew token: lyke as I haue done/ ſo ſhall it happen vnto you: Flyt ſhall ye alſo/ and go into captyuyte. * The chefeſt that is amonge you / ſhall lade hys ſhulders in the darcke / and get hym awaye. He ſhall breake downe the wall/to carye ſtuffe therthorowe:

D He ſhall couer his face/ that he ſe nat the grounde, with hys eyes. * My lyne wyll I ſprede out vpon hym/and catch him in my net, and cary hym to Babylon, in the lande of the Caldees: whiche he ſhall nat ſe/and yet ſhall he dye there. As for al his helpers, and all hys hoſtes/that be aboute hym, I wyll ſcater thẽ towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out a ſwearde after them. * So when I haue ſcatred them amonge the Heathen/and ſtrowed them in the landes, they ſhall knowe, that I am the Lorde. But, I wyll leaue a lytle nõbre of them frõ the ſwearde, hunger and peſtilence: to tel all theyr abhominacions among the Heathen, where they come: ỹ they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

E Moreouer/the worde of the Lorde came vnto me ſainge: Thou ſonne of man: wyth a fearfull trẽblyng ſhalt thou eate thy bred/ with carefulneſſe & ſorow ſhalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande, ſpeake thou on thys maner: Thus ſayeth ſayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jeruſalem, and to the lande of Iſraell: ye ſhall eate your bred with ſorowe, and drynke youre water with heuyneſſe: Yee, the lãde with the fulneſſe therof ſhalbe layde waſte/ for the wyckedneſſe of them that dwel therin. ¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynſt falſe prophetes, whiche teach the people the councelles of theyr owne hertes.

CAPI. XIII.

A THE worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſaying, Thou ſõne of man. Speake prophecye agaynſt thoſe prophetes/ that preache in Iſrael: and ſaye thou vnto them that prophecye out of theyr owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus ſayeth em.34.a. the Lorde God * Wo be it vnto thoſe folyſh prophetes, that folowe theyr owne ſprete and ſpeake where they ſe nothynge. O Iſrael, thy prophetes are like the foxes vpõ the drye felde: For they ſtande nat in yͤ gappes, nether make they an hedge for the houſe of Iſrael, that men myght abyde the parel xxvii.c in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thynges they ſe / and tell lyes / to * mayntayne theyr preachynges with al. The Lorde (ſaye they) hath ſpoken it, whã in very dede the Lorde hath nat ſent them. Vayne viſyons haue ye ſene, and ſpoken falce prophecyes/ when ye ſaye the Lorde hathe ſpoken it/ where as I neuer ſayde it.

B Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Becauſe youre wordes be vayne / and ye ſeke out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, ſayeth the Lorde God. Myne handes ſhall come vpon yͤ prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they ſhall nat be in the councell of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the houſe of Iſraell, neyther ſhall they come in the lande of Iſraell: that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde God. And that for thys cauſe: they haue Jere.viii.b dyſceaued my people, * and tolde them of peace, where no peace was. One ſetteth vp a wall / and they dawbe it with lowſe claye. Therfore tell them whiche dawbe it with vntempered morter: that it ſhall fal. Mat.vii.c. * For there ſhall come a greate ſhower of rayne, greate ſtones ſhall fall vpon it/ and a ſore ſtorme of wynde ſhall breke it/ ſo ſhall the wall come downe. Shall it nat then be ſayde vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it withal? Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyll breake out in my wrathfull dyſpleaſure with a ſtormy wynde, ſo that in myne anger there ſhall come a myghtye ſhower of rayne/ ⁊ hayle ſtones in my wrath, to deſtroye withall.

C As for the wall / that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter / I wyll breake it downe, make it euen with the grounde/ ſo that the: foundacyon therof ſhall remoue/ and it ſhal fall, yee, and ye youre ſelues ſhal peryſh in the myddeſt therof: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrathe vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I ſaye vnto you: The wall is gone/ and the dawbers are awaye. Theſe are the prophetes of Iſraell, whiche prophecye vnto the cytye of Jeruſalem, and loke out vyſyons of peace for them, wher as no peace is, ſaieth the Lorde God. Wherfore (O thou ſonne of man) ſet thy face agaynſte the daughters of thy people, whiche prophecye out of theyre owne hertes, and ſpeake thou prophecye agaynſte them, and ſaye. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Wo be vnto you, that ſowe pylowes vnder all arme holes and bolſters vnder the heades bothe of yonge and olde/

D to catch ſoules with all. * For whan ye haue gotten the ſoules of my people in youre captyuyte, ye promyſe them lyfe, and diſhonour me to my people, for an hande full of barly, and for a pece of breade: whan ye kyll the ſoules of thẽ, that dye nat, and promes lyfe to thẽ, that lyue nat: Thus ye diſſemble with my people / that beleueth youre lyes.

[illegible] Mich. iii. b

Wherfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God Beholde / I wyll alſo vpon the pyllowes, wherwith ye catch ỹ ſoules in flyenge: them wyll I take from youre armes, and let the ſoules go / that ye catch in flyenge. Youre bolſters alſo wyll I teare in peces, and delyuer my people out of youre handes ſo that they ſhal come no more in your handes to be ſpoyled / and ye ſhall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Seynge that with youre lyes ye diſcomforte the herte of the ryghteous, whõ I haue nat diſcomforted: Agayne: Forſomoch * as ye corage the hande of the wycked ſo ỹ he may nat turne frõ his wycked waye, & lyue: therfore ſhal ye ſpye out nomore vanyte, nor prophecye youre owne geſſynges: for I wyll delyuer my people out of youre hande, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

CAPI. XIIII.

A THERE reſorted * vnto me certayne of the elders of Iſrael / and ſat downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, ſayeng: Thou ſonne of man, theſe men beare theyr Idols in theyr hertes / and go purpoſly vpon the ſtomblinge blocke of theyr owne wyckedneſſe: howe darre they then aſke councell at me? Therfore ſpeake vnto them / and ſaye, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Euery man of the houſe of Iſrael that beareth hys Idols in hys herte / purpoſyng to ſtomble in his owne wyckednes / and cõmeth to a prophet / to enquere any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde myſelfe geue anſwere, accordynge to the multytude of hys Idols: that the houſe of Iſrael may be ſnared in theyr owne hertes / becauſe they be clene gone fro me / for theyr abhomynacyons ſakes.

Ezech. 13. a.

B Wherfore / tell the houſe of Iſrael: thus ſayeth the Lorde God. * Be conuerted / forſake youre Idols, and turne youre faces from all youre abhomynacyons. For euery man, (whether he be of the houſe of Iſraell or a ſtraunger, that ſogeourneth in Iſrael) which departeth fro me, and caryeth Idols in hys herte / purpoſynge to go ſtyll ſtomblynge in hys owne wyckedneſſe / and commeth to a Prophet, for to aſke councel at me thorowe hym: vnto that man, wyll I the Lorde geue anſwere, by myne owne ſelfe. C I wyll ſet my face agaynſte that man / and wyll make hym to be an example for other, yee, and a comen byworde: and wyl rote him out of my people, that ye may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * And yf that Prophete be dyſceaued / when he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lorde my ſelfe haue dyſceaued that Prophet, and wyll ſtretch forth myne hande vpon hym / to rote hym out of my people of Iſraell, and they bothe ſhalbe punyſhed for theyr wyckednes. D According to the ſynne of hym that aſketh / ſhall the ſynne of the Prophete be: that the houſe of Iſrael be led nomore fro me thorow erroure, & be nomore defyled in theyr wyckedneſſe: but that they maye be my people / & I theyr God, ſayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of ỹ Lorde came vnto me / ſaying: Thou ſonne of man / when the lande ſynneth agaynſte me (and goeth forth in wyckedneſſe: I wyll ſtretch out myne hande vpon it, * and deſtroye all the prouyſyon of theyr breade / and ſende derth vpon them, to deſtroye man and beaſte in the lande. ‡ And though Noe / Daniel & Iob, theſe thre men were among thẽ / yet ſhal they ĩ theyr righteouſneſſe delyuer but theyr owne ſoules, ſaith the Lorde God. ¶ As the vnprofytable woode of the vyne tree is caſt in to the fyre, ſo ſayeth he that Jeruſalem ſhalbe brent.

CAPI. XV.

A THE worde of the Lord came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man: what cōmeth of the vyne amonge all other trees? and of the vyne ſtocke amonge al other tymbre of the groaue? Do men take wodde of it, to make any worke with all? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hange any thynge vpon? Beholde, it is caſt in the fyre to be brēt, the fyre conſumeth bothe the endes of it/the myddeſt is brente to aſſhes. Js it mete then for any worke? No.

B Seynge then, that it was mete for no worke, beynge whole: muche leſſe may there any thynge be made of it, when the fyre hath conſumed and brent it. And therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Lyke as J caſte the vyne into fyre for to be brente, as other trees of the wod: Euen ſo wyl J do with them that dwell in Jeruſalem, and ſet my face agaynſt them: they ſhal go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre ſhall conſume them. * Then ſhal ye knowe/that J am the Lorde, when J ſet my face agaynſt them, and make the lande waſt: becauſe they haue ſo ſore offended/ſayeth the Lorde God.

Ezec.vii.c and.xiii.b.

¶ The Prophete entendynge to ſpeake of the abhomynacyons of Jeruſalem: doth fyrſt ſhewe the benefytes of God towarde it. Jeruſalem is reproued of vnkindnes, for her fornycacion with Idoles. Shuld I make my wrath to be ſtyl, take my gelouſy from the, be contente, & no more to be diſpleaſed, ſeinge thou remembreſt not the dayes of my youthe, but haſte prouoked me to wrath in all theſe thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyll brynge thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, ſayeth the Lorde God: howbeit, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordynge to thy wyckedneſſe and all thy abhomynacions. Beholde/, all they that vſe comen prouerbes, ſhall vſe this prouerbe alſo agaynſt the: ſuche a mother, ſuche a daughter.

But thy yongeſte ſyſter that dwelleth on thy ryght hande, is Sodoma & her daughters. Yet haſte thou not walked after their wayes / nor done after theyr abhomynacyons: but in all thy wayes thou haſte bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue/ ſayeth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy ſyſter with her daughters/hath not done ſo euell/ as thou and thy daughters. Beſydes that/they reached not theyr hande to the poore and nedy/ but were proude, and dyd abhominable thynges before me: therfore I toke them awaye/when I had ſene it. Neyther hath Samaria done halfe of thy ſynnes/ * yee, thou haſte exceaded them in wyckedneſſe: In ſo muche that in comparyſyon of all the abhomynacyons whyche thou haſte done/ thou haſte made thy ſyſters good women. Therfore beare thyne owne ſhame/ thou that in ſynne haſte ouercome thy ſyſters: ſeynge thou haſte done ſo abhomynably/ that they were better then thou. CAPI. XVII.

A THE worde of the Lorde vnto me, ſayenge, Thou ſonne of man, put forthe * a darcke ſpeakyng and a parable, vnto the houſe of Iſraell, and ſaye. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. There came a greate * Aegle with great wynges, yee, with myghtye long wynges, and full of fethers of dyuerſe coloures, vpon the mounte of Libanus, and toke a braunche from a Cedre tre, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caryed it into the lande of Canaan, and ſet it in a cyte of marchauntes. He toke alſo a braunche of the lande, and planted it in a frutefull groũde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and ſet it as a wyllowe tree therby. Then dyd it grow/and was a great vyneſtock/but lowe by the grounde: whoſe braunches bowed towarde hym, and the rotes thereof were vnder him. Thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth bloſſomes, and ſpred out braũches. B But there was another Aegle, a great one, whiche had great wynges and many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of this vine had an hunger after him, and ſpred out his braũches towarde him, to water his frute: Neuertheleſſe, it was planted vpon a good groũde beſyde greate waters: ſo that (by reaſon) it ſhulde haue broughte out braunches and fruyte/and haue bene a goodly vyne.

Dani.vii.?

C Speake thou therefore/ thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Shall this vyne proſpere? ſhall not his rotes be pluckte out/ his frute be broken of, his grene braunches/ wyther and fade away? yee/without eyther ſtrong arme or many people, ſhall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: ſhal it proſpere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and wythered, yee, euen in the ſhutynge out of his bloſſomes/as ſone as the eaſt wynde bloweth?

D Morouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me ſayeng: Speake to that frowarde houſholde: knowe ye not, what theſe thinges do ſygnyfye? Tell them: Beholde, * ỹ kyng of Babylon came to Ieruſalẽ, and toke the kynge and hys Prynces, and ledde them to Babylon.

4.Re.24.c.

He toke of the kynges ſede, and made a couenaunte with hym / and toke an othe of hym: The Prynces of the lande toke he with hym alſo / that the lande myght be holden in ſubieccyon, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt / and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym and ſent his Embaſſatours into Egipt that he myght haue horſes & muche people. Shulde that proſpere? Shulde he be kepte ſafe / that doth ſuche thynges? Or ſhulde he eſcape / that breaketh his couenaunte? As

E truely as I lyue ſayeth the Lorde God: He ſhall dye at Babylon / in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made him kyng: whoſe othe he hath deſpyſed / and whoſe couenaunt he hath broken. Neyther ſhall Pharao with his greate hoſte and multytude of people / mayntayne him in the warre: when they caſt vp ditches, and ſet vp bulworkes to deſtroy much people. For ſeyng he hath deſpyſed the othe / and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hande there vpon) and done all theſe thynges / he ſhall not eſcape.

F Therfore thus ſayeth the Lord God: As truely as I lyue / I wyll brynge myne othe that he hath deſpyſed / and my couenaunte that he hath broken / vpon his owne heade. * I wyll caſte my net aboute hym / and catche hym in my yarne. Ezech.xii.b. Ezech.xxxii.a. To Babylon wyll I carye hym / there wyll I punyſhe hym / becauſe of the greate offence that he made me. As for thoſe that flye frome hym out of the hooſte / they ſhalbe ſlayne with the ſwearde. The reſydue ſhalbe ſcatred towarde all the windes: and ye ſhal knowe / that I the Lord haue ſpoken it.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyl alſo

G take a braunche from an hye Cedre tre, and wyll ſet it, & take the vppermoſt twyg / that yet is but tendre / and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Iſraell wyll I plante it: that it maye brynge forthe twygges, and geue fruite / and be a great Cedre tree: ſo that al maner of foules may byld in it / and make their neſtes vnder the ſhadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde ſhall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, & ſet the lowe tree vp: that I haue dryed vp the grene tree / and made the drye tree to floryſh: Euen I the Lorde that ſpake it / haue alſo brought it to paſſe.

¶ He ſheweth that euery man ſhall beare his owne ſynne. To hym that amendeth, is ſaluacyon promyſed. Deathe is prophecyed to the ryghtuous, whiche turneth backe frome the ryght waye.

CAPI. XVIII.

THE worde of the Lord came vnto me, A on this maner: what meane ye by this comen prouerbe / that ye vſe in the lande of Iſrael / ſayinge: * The fathers haue eaten Iere.xxxi. ſoure grapes, & the chyldrens teth are ſet on edge? As truely as I lyue, ſayeth the Lorde God, ye ſhall vſe this byworde nomore in B Iſrael.

Beholde * all ſoules are myne. Lyke as ẏ father is myne, ſo is the ſone myne alſo. The Deut.x. ſoule that ſynneth, ſhall dye. * If a man be Rom.ii. godly, and do the thynge that is equall and ryght / he eateth not vpon the hylles: he lyfteth not his eies vp to ẏ foule Idols of Iſrael: he defyleth nat his neyghbours wyfe: he medleth with no menſtruous womã: he greueth no body: he geueth hỹ detter his pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: * he parteth his mete with the hongrye: he clotheth the naked: * he lendeth no Esa.lviii. Psal.xv. thynge vpon vſury: he taketh nothynge ouer: he withdraweth his hãde from doynge wrong: he handleth faythfully betwyxt man & man: he walketh in my commaundementes and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth thẽ faythfully: * This is a ryghtuous man / he Rom.x. ſhall ſurely lyue ſayeth the Lorde God.

If he nowe get a ſonne, that is a murtherer / a ſheder of bloude: yf he do one of theſe thinges * (though he do not al) he eateth vpon Iaco.ii. the hylles: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth and ſpoyleth: he geueth nat the detter his pledge agayne / he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, and medleth with abhomynable thynges: he lendeth vpon vſury, and taketh more ouer. Shall thys man lyue? He ſhal not lyue. Seynge he hath done al theſe abhominacions / he ſhall dye / hys bloude ſhalbe vpon him.

Nowe yf this man get a ſonne alſo, that C ſeyth all his fathers ſynnes, whiche he hath done: and feareth / neyther dothe ſuche lyke: Namely / he eateth not vp the mountaynes: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Iſraell: he defyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neyther ſpoyleth, nor robbeth eny man: he dealeth his meate with the hungrye: he clotheth the naked: he oppreſſeth not the poore: he receaueth no vſury / nor any thynge ouer: he kepeth my lawes / and walketh in my commaundementes:

Thys man ſhall not dye in hys fathers ſynne, but ſhall lyue wythout fayle. As for hys father: becauſe he oppreſſed and ſpoiled hys brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is deed in his owne ſynne. And yet ſaye ye: Wherfore then ſhulde not thys D ſonne beare his fathers ſynne? Therfore: becauſe the ſonne hath done equite and right, hathe kepte al my commaundementes, and done them: therfore ſhall he lyue in dede.

Deut. 24.d. 4.Re. 14.a. 2.par. 25.b The ſame ſoule that ſynneth, ſhall dye. * The ſonne ſhall not beare the fathers offence / neyther ſhall the father beare the ſonnes offence. The ryghteouſnes of the ryghtuous ſhalbe vpon him, and the wyckednes of the wycked ſhalbe vpon him ſelfe alſo. * Eze. xviii.e Ezech. 33.c. But yf the vngoly wyl turne away from al hys ſynnes that he hathe done / and kepe all my commaundementes / and do the thynge that is equall and ryghte, doutleſſe he ſhall lyue, and not dye. As for all his ſynnes that he did before, they ſhal not be thought vpon but in his righteouſnes that he hath done / he ſhall lyue. * For haue I eny pleaſure in 2.Pet. 3.b. death of a ſynner, ſaieth the Lorde God, but rather that he cõuert, frõ his wayes & lyue?

Agane, yf the ryghtuous turne awaye from his rightuouſnes, and do iniquite, acordyng to all the abhominacyons, that the wycked man dothe: ſhall he lyue? All the ryghtuouſneſſe that he hath done, ſhall not be thought vpon: but in the faute that he hath offended withal / and in the ſynne that he he hath done / he ſhall dye.

Ezech. 33.b. And yet ye ſaye: Tuſh * the waye of the Lorde is not indyfferente. Heare therfore ye houſe of Iſraell: Is not my waye ryghte Ezech. 33.c. Or, are not youre wayes rather wycked? *

When a ryghtuous man turneth awaye from his ryghtuouſneſſe, and medleth with vngodlyneſſe: he muſte dye therin: yee / for the vnryghtuouſneſſe that he hathe done / Mat. 3.b. muſt he dye. Agayne: * when the wycked man turneth awaye from his wyckedneſſe / that he hathe done / and dothe the thynge whiche is equall and ryghte: he ſhall ſaue E his ſoule alive. For in ſo much as he remembreth hym ſelfe / and turneth hym from all the vngodlynes that he hathe vſed, he ſhall lyue and not dye.

And yet ſayeth the houſe of Iſrael: Tuſhe / the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnryght? O ye houſe of Iſrael: Are not your waies rather vnequal? As for me, I wyll iudge euery man, accordinge to hys Mat. 3.b. Caſte awaye fro you all youre vngodlyneſſe that ye haue done: * make you newe hertes and a newe Ezech. 11.d and. 36.e. ſpryte. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye houſe of Iſraell? ſeynge I haue no pleaſure in the deathe of hym that dyeth / ſayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye ſhall lyue.

¶ The captyuytye of Iehoahaz & of Iehoacin is lamented by the lions whelpes, and by the vyne. He ſetteth out the proſperyte of the cytie of Ieruſalem that is paſt / and the myſerye therof that is preſent.

CAPI. XIX.

A BVT mourne thou for the prynces of Iſraell / and ſaye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyoneſſe amonge the lyons / and norysshed her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes ſhe brought vp, and it became a lyon: it lerned to ſpoyle, and to deuoure folke. The Hethen herde of hym / and toke hym in theyr nettes / & brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

B Nowe when the damme ſawe / that all her hope and comforte was awaye / ſhe toke another of her whelpes / and made a lyon of hym: whiche went amonge the lyons / and became a fearce lyon: lerned to ſpoyle and to deuoure folcke, he deſtroyed theyr palaces / and made theyr cytyes waſte. In ſo much that the whole lande and euery thing therin / were vtterly deſolate / thorowe the very voyce of hys roarynge.

Then came the Heathen together on euery ſyde oute of all countrees agaynſt hym / layed theyr nettes for hym / and toke him in their pitte. * So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kynge of Babylon: 4.Reg. 25.a Iere. 39.a. and. 52.a. which put him in preſon, that his voyce ſhulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael. As for thy mother, ſhe is lyke C a vyne in thy bloude / planted by the water ſyde: her frutes and braũches are growe out of many waters, her ſtalkes were ſo ſtrong that men might haue made ſtaues therof for offycers: ſhe grewe ſo hye in her ſtalkes.

So whan men ſawe that ſhe exceaded the heygth and multytude of her braunches / ſhe was roted out in dyſpleaſure / and caſte downe to the grounde. The Eaſte wynde dryed vp her frute, her ſtronge ſtalkes were broken of / wythered and brent in the fyre.

But nowe ſhe is planted in the wyderneſſe / in a drye and thurſtye grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her ſtalckes / whiche hathe brente vp her braunches and her frute: ſo that ſhe hathe no mo ſtronge ſtalckes / to be ſtaues for offycers. Thys is a pyteous and myſerable thynge.

A Eze. xiiii. a IN THE .vij. yeare the .x. daye of the .v. moneth, * it happened/that certayne of the elders of Iſraell came vnto me/ for to aſke councell at the Lorde/ and ſat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou ſonne of man: ſpeake vnto the elders of Iſraell/ and ſaye vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Are ye come hyther to aſke eny thing at me? As truly as I lyue (ſaieth the Lorde) I wyl geue you no anſwere. Wylt thou not reproue them (thou ſonne of man) wilt thou not reproue them? Shew them the abhomynacyons of theyr forefathers, and tel them, B Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye Exod. iii. b when I choſe Iſraell/ and lyfte vp myne hande vpon the ſede of the houſe of Iacob/ and ſhewed my ſelfe vnto them in the lande of Egipte: Yee, when I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them/ and ſayde: I am the Lorde your God/ euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them/ to brynge them out of the lande of Egypte/ vnto a lande that I had prouyded for them/ whiche floweth wyth mylcke and hony/ and is a pleaſaunt lande among all other. Then ſayde I vnto them: Deu. vii. a. * Caſt awaye euery man the abhomynacyons that he hath before him/ and defyle not your ſelues with the Idoles of Egypte/ for I am the Lorde youre God.

But they rebelled agaynſt me, and wolde not folowe me: to caſt awaye euery man the abhomynacyons of his eyes, and to forſake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to ſatiſfye my wrath vpon them: yee, euen in the myddeſt of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it/ for my names ſake: that it ſhuld not be vnhalowed before the Heathē/ amonge whom they dwelte/ and amonge whom I ſhewed my ſelfe vnto them, that I wolde brynge them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe when I had caryed them out of the lande of Egypte/ and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundmētes, and ſhewed them my lawes, Deu. iiii. b. Gala. iii. b. Luke. x. a. And yet the houſe of Iſraell rebelled agaynſt me in the wyldernesse/ they wolde not walke in my commaundementes, they haue caſte awaye my lawes (whiche whoſo kepeth ſhal lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

C [illegible] * Then I made me to poure out my indygnacyon vpon them/ and to conſume them in the wylderneſſe. Yet I wolde not do it/ for my names ſake: leſte it ſhulde be dyſhonoured before the Heathen, from the which I had caryed them awaye. But I ſwore vnto them in the wylderneſſe, that I wolde not brynge them in to the lande, whiche I gaue them: a lāde that floweth wyth milcke and hony/ and is a pleaſure of all landes: and that becauſe they refuſed my lawes/ and walcked not in my commaundementes but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes/ for theyr herte was gone after theyr ydoles.

Neuertheleſſe/ myne eye ſpared them/ ſo that I woled not vtterly ſleye them/ and conſume them in the wylderneſſe. Moreouer, I ſayde vnto theyr ſonnes in the wildernes: [illegible] * walcke not in the ſtatutes of youre forefathers/ kepe not theyre ordynaunces/ and defyle not youre ſelues wyth theyr ydoles/ for I am the Lorde youre God. But walcke in my ſtatutes/ kepe my lawes and do them halowe my Sabbathes: * for they are a token [illegible] betwyxte me and you/ that ye maye knowe howe that I am ỹ Lorde your God. Notwithſtandinge, theyr ſonnes * rebelled [illegible] agaynſt me alſo: they walked not in my ſtatutes they kepte not my lawes to fulfyll them (which he that doth ſhal lyue in them) neyther halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indyngnacyon ouer them/ and ſatyſfye my wrath vpon them in the wylderneſſe. Neuertheleſſe/ I wythdrewe my hande for my D names ſake/ leſt it ſhulde be vnhalowed amonge the Heathen/ before whom I had brought them forthe. I lyft vp myne hande ouer them alſo in the wylderneſſe/ that I wolde ſcatre them among the Heathen, and ſtrawe them amonge the nacyons/ becauſe they had not kepte my lawes, but caſte aſyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbathes, and lyfte vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers Idoles. Wherfore I gaue them alſo commaundemētes not good, and lawes thorowe the whiche they ſhulde not lyue. and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes * (when I appoynted for my ſelfe all Exo. xiii. their fyrſt borne) to make them deſolate: that they might know, how that I am the Lord.

E Therfore (O thou ſonne of man, tell the houſe of Iſrael, thus ſaieth the Lorde God)

Beſyde all thys/ youre forefathers haue yet blaſphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynſt me: For after I had brought them in to the lande / that I promyſed to gyue them, when they ſawe euery hye hyll and all the thycke trees: they made there theyr offrynges/ and prouoked me with their oblacions, makynge ſwete ſauoures there/ and poured out their drynck offringes. Then I aſked them: what haue ye to do withall that ye go thyther? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto thys daye. Wherfore, ſpeake vnto the houſe of Iſraell: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vncleane as your forefathers, and commytte whoredome alſo with theyr abhomynacions. In all your Idoles, where vnto ye bryng your oblacions * and to whoſe honoure ye burne your chyldren: ye/ defyle your ſelues / euen vnto thys daye: howe dare ye then come, and aſke any queſtyon at me? O ye houſholde of Iſraele As truly as I lyue (ſayeth the Lorde God) ye get no anſwere of me: ⁊ as for the thynge that ye go about/ it ſhall not come to paſſe/ where as ye ſaye: we wyl be as the Heathen and do as other people in the lande / wood and ſtone wyll we worſhyppe.

Mourne

B Mourne therfore (O thou ſonne of man) that thy loynes cracke withall, ye mourne bytterly for them: And yf they ſaye, wherfore mourneſt thou? Then tell them: for the tydynges that cõmeth, at the which all hertes ſhall melte, all handes ſhalbe letten downe, all ſtomackes ſhall faynte, & all knees ſhall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth and ſhalbe fulfylled, ſayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man, prophecye, & ſpeake: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: ſpeake / the ſwearde is ſharpened and well ſcoured. Sharpened it is for the ſlaughter / C and ſcoured that it maye be bryghte. O / the deſtroyenge & ſtaffe of my ſonne, ſhal brynge downe al wod. He hathe put hys ſwearde to ẏ dighteynge, ẏ good holde may be taken of it. Thys ſwearde is ſharpened and dyght, ẏ it may be geuen into the hãde of the mã ſlayer. Crye (O thou ſonne of man / and howle / for this ſwearde ſhall ſmyte my people / & al the rulers in Iſrael) which with my people ſhal be ſlayne downe to the grounde thorow this ſwearde. Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore ſhulde not the plage and ſtaffe of D iudgement come? Prophecye thou ſonne of man, and ſmyte thine hãdes together: make the ſwearde two edged, yee make it thre edged, ẏ manſlayers ſwearde, ẏ ſwearde of the greate ſlaughter / whiche ſhall ſmyte them euen in theyr preuychambers: to make them abaſhed and faynte at the hertes, and in all gates to make ſome of them fall. The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne ſayenge: Thou ſonne of man, make the two ſtretes, that the ſwearde of ẏ kynge of Babylon maye come. Both theſe ſtretes ſhal go out of one lande. He ſhal ſet him vp a place, at the hede of the ſtrete ſhal he choſe him out a corner. Make the a ſtrete that the ſwearde may come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites: & to the ſtronge cytye of Ieruſalem. Neuertheles, as for the ſotheſayenge, they ſhall holde it but for vanite, euen as though a ieſte were tolde them: yee, and they them ſelues remembre theyr wyckednesse, ſo that by ryght they muſt be taken and wonne. F Therfore ſaieth the lorde God: For ſo much as ye your ſelues ſhewe your offence, & haue opened your wickednes, ſo ẏ in al your workes men may ſe your ſynnes: yee, in ſo much (I ſay) that ye your ſelues haue made mencyon therof / ye ſhall be taken by vyolence.

O thou ſhamefull wycked gyde of Iſrael whoſe daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednes ſhal haue an ende: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the garlande, & put of the crowne, and ſo is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyſhe / punyſhe / yee / punyſhe them wyll I, and deſtroye them: and that ſhall not be fulfylled vntyll he come, to whome the iudgemente belongeth / and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O ſonne of man) prophecy, and ſpeake: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God to the chyldren of * Ammon / and to theyr blaſphemye, ſpeake ẏ: The ſwearde, ẏ G ſwearde is drawẽ forth alredy to ẏ ſlaugter & ſcoured ẏ it gliſtreth (becauſe ẏ haſt loked ẏ out vanities, & prophecyed lyes) ẏ it maye come vpõ thy necke like as vpõ ẏ other vngodly which be ſlaine: whoſe day came whã theyr wyckednes was ful. Though it were put vp agayn into the ſheath, yet wil I punyſhe ẏ, in the lande wher ẏ waſt norished & borne, & poure my indignacyon vpon ẏ and wyl blow vpõ the in ẏ fyre of my wrath, & delyuer ẏ vnto cruel people, which are lerned to deſtroy. Thou ſhalt fede ẏ fyre & thy bloud ſhalbe ſhed in ẏ lande, that ẏ mayeſt be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it.

CAP XXII.

A Moreouer, ẏ worde of ẏ Lorde came vnto me, & ſayde: ẏ ſonne of man, wylt thou not reproue thys bloudthurſty cytye? Shewe the theyr abominaciõs: & tel thẽ: Thus ſaieth ẏ Lorde God: O ẏ cytie, ẏ ſheddeſt bloude in the myddeſt of ẏ, that thy tyme maye come alſo & makeſt the Idoles to defyle ẏ withal. Thou haſt made thy ſelfe gyltye, in ẏ bloude that thou haſte ſhed: and defyled the in the Idoles, whiche thou haſt made. Thou haſt cauſed the dayes to drawe nye, ⁊ made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therfore wyl I make the to be confounded amonge the Hea- B the, ⁊ to be deſpyſed in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they ſhall laugh the to ſcorne, thou that haſt gottē the ſo foule a name, and arte full of myſchefe. Beholde, I haue ſmytten my handes vpon thy couetouſneſſe, that thou haſt vſed, and vpon the bloude whiche hath bene ſhed in the. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ſaying: Thou ſonne of man, ...ay.i.c * the houſe of Iſraell is turned to droſſe. All they that ſhulde be braſſe/tynne/yron / and leade, are in the fyre become droſſe. Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: For ſo muche as ye all are turned into droſſe/beholde: I wyl bring you together vnto Ieruſalem, lyke as ſyluer/braſſe, yron/tynne and leade are put together in the fornace / and the fyre blowen E there vnder to melte them: Euen ſo wyll I gather you/put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacyon. I wyll brynge you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell dyſpleaſure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke as the ſyluer is melted in the fyre, ſo ſhall ye alſo be melted therin: that ye may knowe, howe that I the Lorde haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of yͤ Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, tell her: Thou art an vnclene lande, whiche is not rayned F vpon in the day of yͤ cruel wrath: Mich.iii.c. * thy Prophetes that are in the, are ſworne together to deuoure ſoules, lyke as a roarynge Lyon, yͤ lyueth by his praye. Therfore/wyll I poure out my cruel dyſpleaſure vpon them, and burne thē in the fyre of my wrathe: theyr owne wayes wyl I recompence vpon their heades ſaieth the Lorde God.

¶ Of the fornycacion, that is to ſaye, of the Idolatrye of Samaria and Ieruſalem, vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibah. In comparyſon of Samaria he ſheweth that the fornycacyon of Ieruſalem is the fylthyer. The deſtruccyon of Ieruſalem is prophecyed. The aduoutry of both the whores is founde out. Theyr deſtruccyon.

CAPI. XXIII.

THE worde of the Lord came vnto me A ſayinge: Thou ſōne of mā, there were two women/that had one mother. These (when they were yonge) beganne to play the Ezech.xx.a harlottes * in Egypt. There were theyr breſtes broſed/and the pappes of theyr mayden heade deſtroyed. The eldeſt of them was called Oholah and her yōgeſt ſyſter Oholibah These two were myne/and bare ſonnes and daughters. Their names were Samaria, ⁊ that was Oholah: and Ieruſalem, that was Oholibah. As for Oholah ſhe begāne to go 4.Reg.15.b a whoring, whē I had takē her to me. * She was ſette on fyre vpon her louers the Aſſyryans/ryans; whiche had to do wyth her: euen the Prynces and Lordes that were deckte in coſtely araye: fayre yonge men/luſty ryders of horſes.

B Thus thorow her whoredome, ſhe cleaued vnto all the yongemen of Aſſiria. Yee, ſhe was mad vpon them, and defyled her ſelfe with al theyr Idols. Nether ceaſſed ſhe from the fornacyon, that ſhe vſed with the Egypcyans: for in her youthe they laye with her/ they broſed the breſtes of her maydenhead, & poured theyr whoredome vpō her. Wherfore 4.Re.17.c * I delyuered her into the handes of her louers, euen the Aſſyrians, whom ſhe ſo loued These dyſcouered her ſhame, toke her ſōnes and daughters, & ſlewe her with the ſwerde: An euyl name gat ſhe of all people, and they punyſhed her.

Iere.iii.b * Her ſyſter Oholibah ſawe this/and deſtroyed her ſelfe with inordynate loue, more then ſhe, & exceaded her ſyſter in whoredome 4.Re.16.b Eze.xvi.c * ſhe loued the Aſſyrians (whiche alſo lay wt her, namely/the prynces and great Lordes/ that were clothed with all maner of gorgeous apparell, all luſty horſemen and fayre yonge perſonnes.

C Then I ſawe, that they bothe were defyled a lyke. But ſhe increaſed ſtyll in whoredome/for when ſhe ſawe men paynted vpon the wal, the ymages of the Caldees ſet forth with freſſhe colours/ with fayre gyrdles about them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, lokynge all lyke Prynces (after the maner of the Babylonians and Caldees in theyr owne lande (where they be borne) immediatly/as ſone as ſhe ſawe them, ſhe brēt in loue vpon them/ & ſente meſſaungers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Nowe when the Babylonyans came to her/they laye with her, and defyled her with theyr whoredome, and ſo was ſhe polluted with them. And when her luſte was abated Eſa.47.a Naum 3.b Ezec.xvi.d frome them / * her whoredome and ſhame was diſcouered and ſene then my herte forſoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her ſyſter alſo. Neuertheleſſe/ ſhe vſed her whoredome euer the longer the more/and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin ſhe had played the harlot in the lande of Egypt: Ezec.xvi.c * ſhe brent in luſte vpon them, whoſe fleſſhe was lyke the fleſſhe of Aſſes / and theyr ſede lyke the ſede of horſes. Thus thou haſt renued the fylthyneſſe of thy youth/ when thy louers broſed thy pappes/and marred thy breſtes in Egypte.

D Therfore (O Oholibah) thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyl rayſe vp thy louers (with whom thou haſt ſatyſfyed thy luſt) agaynſt the/and gather them together rounde about the: namely/the Babylonians / and all the Caldees / rulers/myghtye men & tyrauntes/ with all the Aſſyrians: all yonge and fayre louers: Prynces and Lordes/knightes and gentylmen/ whiche be all good horſemen. Theſe ſhall come vpon the with horſes/charettes/and a great multitude of people: whiche ſhalbe harneſſed aboute the on euery ſyde with breſtplates/ſheldes and helmettes. I wyll punyſh the before them/yee/they them ſelues ſhall punyſh the accordynge to theyr owne iudgement. I wyll put my gelouſy vpon the, ſo that they ſhal deale cruelly with the. They ſhal cut of thy noſe & thyne eares/ and the rēnaunt ſhal fal thorowe the ſwerde. They ſhall carye awaye thy ſonnes and daughters/and the reſydue ſhalbe brente in the fyre. They ſhall ſtrype the out of thy clothes, and cary thy coſtely Iewels awaye with them.

E Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fylthyneſſe and whoredome, whiche thou haſte brought out of the lande of Egypte: ſo that thou ſhalte turne thyne eyes nomore after them/and caſt thy mynde nomore vpon Egypte. For thus ſayeth the Lorde God/ beholde, I wyll delyuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hateſt, yee, euen into the handes of them, with whom thou haſte fulfylled thy luſt, whiche ſhall deale cruelly wt the. All thy laboure ſhall they take wyth them/and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the ſhame of thy fylthy whoredome ſhal come to lyght. All theſe thynges ſhal happē vnto the, becauſe of thy whoredome, whiche thou haſt vſed amonge the Gentyles / with whoſe Idols thou haſt defiled thy ſelf. Thou haſt walked in the waye of thy ſyſter, therefore wyl I geue the her cup in thy hande.

Thus ſayeth the Lord God: Thou ſhalt drincke of thy ſyſters cuppe, howe depe and farre ſo euer it be to the botome. Thou ſhalt be laughed to ſcorne, and had as greately in deriſyon, as is poſſyble. Thou ſhalte be full of dronckēnes and ſorowe, for the cup of thy ſyſter Samaria is a cuppe of deſtruccyon & waſtynge: the ſame ſhalt thou drincke, and ſuppe it out euen to the dregges, yee/yͧ ſhalt eate vp the broken peces of it, and ſo teare thine owne breſtes: For euen I haue ſpoken it ſayeth the Lorde God.

F Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: For ſo much as thou haſt forgotten me, and caſt me aſyde, ſo beare nowe thyne owne fylthynes & whoredome. The Lorde ſayde more vnto me: Thou ſonne of man, wylt thou not reproue Oholah & Oholibah? Shewe them their abhominacyōs: namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and ſtayned theyr handes with bloude: yee, euen with their ydoles haue they cōmytted aduoutry, * and offred them theyr owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yee, and thys haue they done vnto me alſo: they haue defiled my Sanctuary in that ſame day, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had ſlayne their children for theyr Idoles, they came the ſame daye into my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my houſe: Beſyde al this, thou haſt ſente thy meſſaungers for men out of farre countrees and when they came, thou haſt bathed, trymmed and ſet forth thy ſelf of the beſt faſhion: thou ſatteſt vpon a goodly bed, and a table ſpred before the: wherupō thou haſt ſet mine * incenſe and myne oyle.

O all ye that loue vertu and ryghtuouſnes, iudge them, punyſh them: * as aduouterers and murtherers ought to be iudged & punyſhed. For they are brekers of wedlock, and the bloude is in theyr handes. Wherfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: brynge a greate multytude of people vpon them, and make them be ſcatred and ſpoyled: theſe ſhal ſtone them, and gore them with theyr ſweardes. They ſhal ſleye theyr ſōnes and daughters/ and burne vp theyr houſes with fyre:

Thus wyl I deſtroye all ſuche fylthynes out of the lande: that all wemen may learne not to do after your vnclennes. And ſo they ſhall laye your fylthynes vpon youre owne ſelues, and ye ſhalbe puniſhed for the ſinnes that ye haue cōmitted with your Idols: and ye ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

¶ He proueth the ſyrynge of Jeruſalem by a parable of a ſethynge potte. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe beyng dead, whiche he after expoundeth.

CAPI. XXIIII.

A IN THE nynth yeare, in the tenth moneth/ the tenthe daye of the Moneth/ came the worde of the LORDE vnto me/ ſayenge: O thou ſonne of man/ wryte vp the name of this daye/ yee/ euen the houſe of thys preſente daye: when the kyng of Babylon ſet hym ſelfe agaynſte Jeruſalem. Shewe that obſtynate houſholde * a parable, and ſpeake vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Get the a potte, ſet it on/ and poure water into it: put all the peces together in it/ all the good peces: the loyne & the ſhoulder, and fyll it with the beſt bones. Take one of the beſt ſhepe, and an heape of bones withall: let it boyle well, and let the bones ſeeth well therin.

Ezech.xi.b

B With that ſayde the Lorde God on thys maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy cyty & the pot, wherupon the ruſtynes hangeth, and is not yet ſcoured awaye. Take out the peces that are in it/ one after another: there neade not lottes be caſt therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne drye ſtone hathe ſhe poured it, and not vpon the grounde, that it myght be couered with duſte. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne drye ſtony rocke/ becauſe it ſhuld not be hyd, and that I myght brynge my wrothful indignacyon and vengeaunce vpon her.

Naum.3.c
Aba.ii.b

C Wherfore, thus ſayeth the Lord God: O wo be vnto the bloude thurſty cyte, for whō I wyl prepare a heape of wodde: beare thou the bones together/ kyndle thou the fyre, ſeeth the fleſhe/ let all be well ſodden/ that the bones maye be ſuckte out. Morouer, ſet the pot emptye vpon the coales, that it may be warme and the metall hote: that the fylth and ruſtynes maye be conſumed. But it wyl not go of, there is ſo muche of it: the ruſtines muſt be brent out. Thy fylthyneſſe is abhomynable/ for I wolde haue clenſed the/ but thou woldeſt not be clenſed. Thou canſt not be pourged from thyne vncleanneſſe/ tyll I D poured my wrothefull indygnacyon vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue ſo deuyſed. Yee, it is come therto all redy/ that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe/ I wyll not ſpare/ I wyll not be entreated: but accordynge to thy wayes and ymagynacyons/ thou ſhalte be punyſſhed, ſayeth the Lorde God. And the E worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man/ beholde/ I wyll take awaye the pleaſure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet ſhalte thou nether mourne/ nor wepe/ nor water thy chekes therfore: thou mayeſt mourne by thy ſelfe alone/ but vſe no deadely lamentacyon. Holde on thy bonet/ and put on thy ſhues vpon thy fete: couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breade. So I ſpake vnto the people by tymes in the mornyng/ and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe/ I dyd

F as I was cōmaunded. And the people ſayd vnto me/ wylte thou not tell vs / what that ſygnyfyeth / whiche thou doeſt? I anſwered them / the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ ſayenge: Tell the houſe of Iſraell / thus ſayeth the Lorde God: beholde/ I wyll ſuſpende my Sanctuary: euen the glorye of youre power/ the pleaſure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your ſonnes ⁊ daughters whom ye haue lefte / ſhall fall thorowe the ſwearde.

Lyke as I haue done, ſo ſhall ye do alſo: ye ſhall not hyde your faces, ye ſhall eate no mourners bread: your bonettes ſhal ye haue vpon your heades, and ſhues vpon youre fete. Ye ſhall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your ſynnes ye ſhalbe ſorowfull/ and one repente with another. Thus Ezechiell is G your ſhewetoken. For loke as he hath done, ſo (when this commeth) ye ſhall do alſo: that ye may lerne to knowe/ that I am the Lorde God. But beholde/ O thou ſonne of man: In the daye when I take frome them theyr power / theyr ioye and honoure/ the luſte of theyr eyes / the burthen of theyr bodyes: namely/ theyr ſonnes and daughters: Then ſhal there one eſcape/ and come vnto the/ for to ſhewe the. For thus ſayeth ŷ Lorde God: In ſo much B as thou haſt clapped with thyne hādes, and ſtamped with thy fete, yee/ reioyſed in thyne herte ouer the lande of Iſrael with deſpyte/ beholde/ I wyll ſtretche out my hande ouer the alſo, and delyuer the/ to be ſpoyled of the Heathen, and rote the out from amonge the people / and cauſe the to be deſtroyed out of all landes: yee/ I wyll make the to be layed waſte/ that thou mayeſt knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: For ſo much as * Moab and Seir do ſaye: As for the houſe of Iuda / it is but lyke as all other Gentiles be. Therfore beholde/ I wyl make the cyties of Moab weapenleſſe / and take awaye theyr ſtrength: theyr cyties and chefe coaſtes of theyr lande, whiche are the pleaſures of the countre. As namely, Bethieſimoth/ Baalmeon ⁊ Cariathaim: theſe wyll C I open vnto them of the eaſt/ that they may fall vpon the Ammonytes: and wyll geue it them in poſſeſſion / ſo that the Ammonytes ſhall nomore be had in remēbraunce among the Heathen. Euen thus wyll I punyſh Moab alſo/ that they maye knowe/ howe that I am the Lorde.

From Theman vnto Dedan wyll I make it deſolate, they ſhal be ſlayne with the ſwearde. * Thorowe my people of Iſraell wyll I auenge me agayne vpon Edom: they ſhall handle hym / accordyng to my wrath and indignacyon/ ſo that they ſhal knowe my vengeaunce, ſayeth the Lorde God.

Therfore/ thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl ſtretch out myne hāde ouer the Philiſtines, ⁊ deſtroye ŷ deſtroyer, and cauſe al the remnaunt of the ſee coaſt to peryſh. B For thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl bryng hyther Nabuchodonoſor (whiche is the kynge of Babylon, ⁊ a kynge of kynges) from the North vpon Tyre, with horſes, charettes, horſmẽ, and with a greate multytude of people. Thy daughters that are in the lande / ſhall be ſlayne with the ſwearde: but agaynſt the, he ſhall make bull workes and graue vp diches about the, and lyfte vp his ſhylde agaynſt the. His ſlynges and batelrammes ſhall be prepare for thy walles, ⁊ with his weapens breake downe thy towres. The duſt of hꝭ horſes ſhal couer the / they ſhalbe ſo many: thy walles ſhall ſhake at the noyſe of the horſmen / charettes and wheles: when he commeth to thy portes, as men do into an open cytie. A THE worde of the Lorde came vnto me / ſayenge: O thou ſonne of man / make a lamẽtable complaynte vpō * Tyre, and ſaye vnto Tyre, which is a porte of the ſee, that occupyeth with muche people / and many Iles: thus ſpeaketh the Lorde God: O Tyre, thou haſte ſayde: what, I am a noble cytie: thy borders are in the myddeſt of the ſee, ⁊ thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mounte Sanyr. From Libanus haue they takẽ Cedre trees, to make the maſtes: and the Okes of Baſan to make the owers. B Thy bordes haue they made of yuery, and of coſtly wod out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy ſayle was of whyte ſmal nedle worke out of the lande of Egypt to hange vpon thy maſte: and thy hangynges of yelowe ſylke purple, out of the Iles of Eliſah. They of Sydon and Arnad were thy maryners / and the wyſeſt in Tyre were thy ſhypmaſters. C The eldeſt and wyſeſt at Gebal were they / that mended and ſtopped thy ſhyppes. All ſhyppes of the ſee with theyꝛ ſhypmen occupyed theyꝛ marchaundies in the. The Perſes, Lidians and Lybians were in thyne hoſt, and helped the to fyght: theſe hanged vp theyꝛ ſhyldes and helmettes with the, theſe ſet foꝛth thy bewty. They of Arnad were with thyne hoſt rounde aboute thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towꝛes, theſe hanged C vp theyꝛ ſhyldes rounde about thy walles, and made the meruelous goodly. Tharſis occupyed with the in all maner of wares, in ſyluer/yꝛon/tynne and leade/and made thy market greate. Jauan, Tubal/and Meſech were thy marchauntes whiche bꝛought the men, and oꝛnamentes of metall foꝛ thy occupyenge. They of the houſe of Thogarma bꝛought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte/hoꝛſe/hoꝛſmen and mules. They of Gen.xxv.a * Dedan were thy merchauntes: and many other Jles that occupyed with the/bꝛought the weathers/elephant bones ⁊ Peacockes foꝛ a pꝛeſent. The Syꝛians occupyed with the, becauſe of thy dyuerſe woꝛkes, and increaſed thy merchaundyes/with Smaragdes, with ſcarlet/with nedle woꝛcke/with D whyte lynen cloth/ with ſylcke / and with cryſtall. Juda and the lande of Jſraell occupyed with the, and bꝛought vnto thy markettes/wheat balme, hony/oyle/⁊ triacle. Damaſcus alſo vſed marchaundyes with the, in the beſt wyne and whyt woll: becauſe thy occupyenge was ſo great, and thy wares ſo many. Dan, Jauan, and Meuſall haue bꝛought vnto thy markettes, yꝛon redy made, with Caſſia and Calamus/ accoꝛdynge to thyne occupyenge. Dedan occupyed with the in fayꝛe tapeſtrye woꝛke and quoſhyns. Arabia and all the pꝛynces of Cedar haue occupyed with the/ in ſhepe/ weathers and goates.

The marchauntes of Saba and Rema haue occupyed alſo with the/ in all coſtly ſpyces/ in all pꝛecyous ſtones and golde, E whiche they bꝛought vnto thy markettes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Aſſiria, and Chelmad, were all dooers with the, and occupyed with the. In coſtly rayment, of yalowe ſylcke and nedle woꝛcke (very pꝛecyous/and therfoꝛe packte and bounde together with ropes.) Yee, and in Cedꝛe wodde, at the tyme of thy markettes. The ſhyppes of Tharſis were the chefe of thy occupyenge.

Thus thou art full/ and in greate woꝛſhyp, euen in the myddeſt of the ſee. Thy maryners were euer bꝛyngynge vnto the out of many waters. But the eaſte wynde ſhall ouerbeare the into the myddeſt of the ſee: ſo that thy wares, thy marchaundyes/ thy ryches/ thy maryners / thy ſhypmaſters / thy F helpers thy occupyers (that bꝛought the thynges neceſſary) the men of warre that are in the: yee, and all thy comens ſhall peryſh in the myddeſt of the ſee, in the daye of thy fall. The ſuburbes ſhall ſhake at the loude crye of thy ſhypmen. Al whyꝛy men/and all maryners vpon the ſee / ſhall leape out of theyꝛ boates / and ſet them ſelues vpon the lande. They ſhall lyfte vp theyꝛ voyce becauſe of the/and make a lamentable crye. They ſhall caſte duſte vpon theyꝛ heades/ and lye downe in the aſſhes. They ſhall ſhaue them ſelues/and put ſacke cloth vpõ them foꝛ thy ſake.

They ſhall mourne foꝛ the with hertfull ſoꝛowe / and heuy lamentacyon, yee, theyꝛ chyldꝛen alſo ſhall wepe foꝛ the. Alas/what cytie hathe ſo bene deſtroyed in the ſee / as Tyꝛe is? When thy wares and marchaun- G dyes came from the ſees, thou gaueſt al people ynough. The kynges of the earth haſt thou made ryche/thoꝛowe the multitude of thy wares and occupyenge. But thou arte nowe caſt downe in to the depe of the ſee, all thy reſoꝛte of people is peryſhed with the. All they that dwell in the Jles are abaſſhed at the, and al theyꝛ kynges are afrayed, yee, theyꝛ faces haue chaunged coloure. The marchauntes of the nacyons wondꝛe at the, Jn ẏ thou art ſo cleane bꝛought to naught, and commeth nomoꝛe vp.

A THE woꝛde of the Loꝛd came vnto me ſayenge: Thou ſonne of man, tell the Gen.x.a pꝛynce of * Tyꝛe: Thus ſayeth the Loꝛde Eſa.xxiii. God, becauſe thou haſt a pꝛoude hert ⁊ haſt ſayde * J am a God: J haue my ſeate in the myddeſt of the ſee lyke a God: where as thou art but a man ⁊ nat God, ⁊ yet ſtãdeſt in thyne owne conceypte, that thou art God: ☞ Beholde, thou thynkeſt thy ſelfe ☞ wyſer Dani.ii. then * Daniel / that there is no ſecretes hyd from the. With thy wyſdome and thy vnderſtandynge/that haſt gotten the great welthynes/and gathered treaſure of ſyluer and golde. With thy greate wyſdome and occupyenge/haſt thou increaſed thy power, and becauſe of thy great rycheſſe/ thy herte is pꝛoude.

B Therfoꝛe / thus ſayeth the Loꝛde God: Foꝛ ſo much as thou haſt lyft vp thyne hert/as though thou were God: Beholde, I wyl brynge enemyes vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of the Heathẽ: theſe ſhal drawe out theyr ſweardes vpon thy bewty and wyſdome, & ſhall defyle thy glory. They ſhall caſte the downe to the pytte, ſo that thou ſhalt dye in the myddeſt of the ſee, as they that be ſlayne. Let ſe, yf thou wylt ſaye then (before them that ſlaye the) I am God: where as thou art but a man and nat God, in the handes of them that ſlaye the. Dye ſhalt thou, euen as the vncircumciſed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my ſelfe haue ſpoken it, ſayeth the Lorde God.

C Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayeng: Thou ſonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell hym: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Thou art a ſeale of a lyckneſſe, full of wyſdome and excellent bewty. Thou haſt bene in the pleaſaunt garden of God: thou art decte with all maner of precyous ſtones: with Ruby, Topas, Cryſtall, Jacyncte, Onix, Jaſpis, Saphyr, Smaragde, Carbouncle, and golde. And thus ſayeth the Lorde God:* I wyl deſtroye the Idols/and brynge the ymages of ☞ Noph to an ende. There ſhal nomore ☞ be a prince of Egypte/and a fearfulnes wyl
I ſende into the Egipcians lãde. As for Pathures/
I wyl make it deſolat,and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria wil I punyſh,and poure my wrathful indygnaciõ vpon Sin, whiche

whiche is the ſtrength of Egypte. Al the ſubſtaunce of Alexandria wyll I deſtroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin ſhalbe in greate heuyneſſe, Alexandria
E ſhalbe roted out, and Noph ſhall haue dayly ſorowe. ¶The beſte men of Helyopolys and Bubaſto ſhall be ſlayne with the ſwearde/and caryed awaye captyue. At Caphnis the day ſhalbe darcke/ when I breake there the ſcepter of the lande of Egypt/ and when the pompe of her power ſhall haue an ende.
A cloude ſhall couer her, and her daughters ſhalbe led awaye into captyuyte. ¶Thus wyl I punyſhe Egypt, that they may know howe that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the eleuenth yeare, vpon the ſeuēth daye of the fyrſte moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, ſayinge: Beholde, thou ſonne of man, I wyll breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo it ſhall not be bounde vp to be healed, neyther ſhal any playſter be layed vpon it, for to eaſe it / or to make it ſo ſtronge, as to holde a ſwearde. ¶Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde/ I wyll vpon Pharao the F kyng of Egypte, and bruſe his ſtrong arme (yet is it but a broken one) and wyl ſmite the ſwearde out of his handes.

As for the Egyptyans, I wyll ſcatre them amonge the Heathen, and ſtrowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyll ſtrength the arme of the kynge of Babylon, and geue hym a ſwearde in his hande: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme ſo that he ſhal
G holde it before hym pyteouſly/ lyke a wounded man.

Yee/ I wyll ſtablyſhe the kynge of Babilons arme/ and the armes of Pharao ſhal fall downe: that it maye be knowen/ that I am the Lorde/ whiche geue the kynge of Babylon my ſwearde in his hande. that he may drawe it out vpon the lande of Egypte, and that when I ſcatre the Egyptyans among the Gentyles / and ſtrowe them in the landes aboute, they may knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ A comparyſon of the proſperite of Pharao with the proſperyte of the Aſſyryans. He prophecyeth a lyke deſtruccyon vnto them bothe.

CAPI. XXXI.

A MOREOVER it happened in the eleuenth yeare, the fyrſt daye of the thyrde moneth, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſaying: ¶Thou ſonne of man, ſpeake vnto Pharao the kynge of Egypte, and to all his people. Whom arte thou lyke in thy greatneſſe? Beholde / Aſſur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mounte of Libanus with fayre braunches: ſo thycke/ that he gaue ſhadowes and ſhot out verye hye. Hys toppe reached vnto the Cloudes. ¶The waters made hym greate, and the depe ſet hym vp an hye. Rounde aboute the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he ſent out his lytle ryuers vnto al the trees of the felde. ¶Therfore
B was he hygher then all the trees of the felde/ and thorowe the multytude of waters that he ſente from hym / he optayned many longe braunches. Al foules of the ayre made theyr neſtes in hys braunches / vnder his bowes gendred all the beaſtes of the felde / and vnder his ſhadowe dwelte all people.
Fayre and beautyfull was he in his greatneſſe and in the length of hys braunches, for hys rote ſtode beſyde greate waters/ no
Cedre tree myght hyde hym. In the pleaſaūt
C garden of God/ there was no fyrre tree lyke his braūches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his beauty, ſo fayre and goodly had
I made hym with ẏ multytude of hys braūches.
In ſo muche that all the trees in the pleaſaunt garden of God, had enuye at him.
D ¶Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: for ſo moche as he hath lyfte vp hym ſelfe ſo hye / and ſtretched his top in to the cloudes, and ſeynge his herte is proude in his hyghneſſe,
I wyll delyuer hym in to the handes of the myghtieſt amonge the Heathen/ which ſhal rote hym out. Accordynge to his wyckednes wyll I caſte hym awaye/ the enemyes ſhall deſtroye him/ and the mighty men of the Hethen ſhall ſo ſcatre hym/ that his braunches ſhall lye vpon all mountaynes: and in all valleys/ his bowes ſhalbe broken downe to the grounde thorowe out the lande. ¶Then E all the people of the lande ſhall go from his ſhadowe/ and forſake hym. When he is fallen/all the foules of the ayer ſhall ſyt vpon hym/ and all wylde beaſtes of the felde ſhall go aboute amonge his braunches, ſo that from hence forth, no tre in the water ſhal attayne to his hyghneſſe, nor reache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neyther ſhall any tree of the water ſtande ſo hye, as he hath done. For vnto death ſhall they al be delyuered vnder the earthe, and go downe to the graue/ lyke other men.

F Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lord God: In the day when he goeth downe to the graue,
I wyll cauſe a lamentacyon to be made / I wyll couer the depe vpon hym. I wyl ſtaūch hys floudes, and the great waters ſhalbe reſtraygned. I ſhall cauſe Lybanus to be ſorowefull for his ſake, and all the trees of the felde ſhalbe ſmytten. I wyl make the Heathen ſhake at the ſounde of his fall/ when I Esay.xiiii.c Ezech.xxi.c caſt him downe to * Hell with them that deſcende into the pytte. All the trees of Eden/ with all the choſen and beſte trees of Lybanus, yee, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, ſhall mourne with hym alſo in the lower habitacions: for they ſhal go downe to hell with hym, vnto them that be ſlayne G with the ſwearde, whiche dwelte afore vnder the ſhadowe of his arme among the Heathen. To whom ſhalt thou be lyckened, that arte ſo glorious and great, among the trees of Eden? yet arte thou caſt downe vnder the earth (among the trees of Eden) where thou muſt lye amonge vncircumcyſed, with them that be ſlayne with the ſwearde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, ſayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The Prophete is commaunded to bewayle Pharao the kynge of Egypt. He prophecyeth that deſtruccyon ſhal come vnto Egypte thorowe the kynge of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXII.

A IN the twelueth yeare, the fyrſte daye of the twelueth moneth/ the worde of the Lorde came vnto me/ ſayenge: Thou ſonne Ezech.xxix. xxx.xxxi. of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon * Pharao the kynge of Egypte/ and ſaye vnto hym: Thou arte reputed as a Lyon of the Heathen, and as a whalefyſhe in the ſee. Thou caſteſt thy waters aboute the/ thou troubleſt the waters with thy fete and ſtampeſt in theyr floudes. Thus ſayeth the Lorde Ezech.xii.b xvii.c God: * I wyll ſprede my net ouer the, namely / a greate multytude of people: theſe ſhall dryue the into my yarne, for I wyl caſt the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye ſyt vpon the. I wyll geue al the beaſtes of the felde ynough of the. Thy fleſhe wyll I caſte vpon the hilles/ and fyll the valleys with thy hyghneſſe. I wyll water the lande B with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes/ and the valleys ſhall be full of the. When thou arte put out, I wyll couer the Heauen/ and make hys ſtarres Esay.xiii.b dymme. * I wyll ſprede a cloude ouer the Sonne/ and the Moone ſhall not geue her lyght. All the lyghtes of heauen wyll I put out ouer the, and brynge darckeneſſe vpon thy lande, ſayeth the Lord God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, when I bryng thy deſtruccyon amonge the Heathen and countrees, whom thou knoweſt not. Yee, I wyl make many people with their kinges ſo afrayed thorowe the, that theyr heare ſhall ſtande vp, when I ſhake my ſwerde at their faces. Sodenly ſhal they be aſtonyed, euery man in hym ſelfe, at the day of thy fall.

For thus ſayeth the Lord God: the kyng C of Babilons ſwearde ſhall come vpon the/ with the ſweardes of the worthyes wyll I ſmyte downe thy people. All they that be myghtye amonge the Gentyles, ſhall waſte the proude pompe of Egypte, & bring downe all her people. All the catell alſo of Egypte wyll I deſtroy/ that they ſhal come no more vpon the waters: ſo that neyther mans fote nor beaſtes clawe, ſhal ſtere them any more. Then wyll I make theyr waters cleare, and cauſe theyr floudes to runne lyke oyle, ſayth the Lorde God. When I make the lande of Egypte deſolate, and when the countre with all that is therein, ſhall be layde waſte: and when I ſmyte all them whiche dwell in it/ that they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde. This is the mournyng, that the daughters D of the Heathen ſhal make: Yee, a ſorowe and lamentacion ſhal they take vp, vpon Egipt and all her people, ſayeth the Lorde God.

In the .xij. yeare, the .xv. day of the Moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me/ ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypte, and caſt them downe, yee, and the myghtye people of the Heathen alſo, euen with the, * that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe into the graue. Downe (howe fayre ſo euer thou be) and lay the with the vncircumciſed Amonge thoſe that be ſlayne with the ſwearde, ſhal they lye. The ſwearde is geuen already, he ſhall be drawen forth & all his people. The myghty worthyes and his helpers, that be gone downe and lye with the vncircumciſed and with them that be ſlayne with the ſwerde: ſhal ſpeake to him out of the hel.

Aſſur is there alſo with his company, & E theyr graues rounde aboute, whiche were ſlayne and fell all with the ſwearde, whoſe graues lye beſyde him in the lowe pytte. His comens are buried rounde aboute his graue: al together wounded and ſlayne with the ſwerde, which men afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge.

* There is Elam alſo with all hys people, and their graues rounde aboute: which al beyng wounded and ſlayne with the ſwerde/ are gone downe vncircumcyſed vnder the earthe, whiche neuertheleſſe ſometyme brought feare in to the lande of the lyuyng: for the whiche they beare their ſhame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr burial is geuen them and al their people, amonge them that be ſlayne. Theyr
F graues are rounde aboute all them, whiche be vncircumcyſed / and with them that be ſlayne thorowe the ſwearde: for ſeyinge that in tymes paſt they made the lande of the lyuyng afrayed, they muſte nowe beare theyr owne ſhame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye among thē, that be ſlayne.

There is Meſech alſo and Tuball, and theyr people, & theyr graues rounde aboute. Theſe all are amonge the vncircumcyſed / and them that be ſlayne with the ſwearde because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye alſo amonge the worthyes / and vncircumcyſed Gyauntes, whiche with theyr weapens are gone downe to hell whoſe ſweardes are layde vnder theyr heades, whoſe wyckeneſſe is vpon theyr bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge. Yee, among the vncircumcyſed ſhalt thou be deſtroyed, and ſlepe with them, that peryſhed thorowe the ſwearde.

G There is the lande of * Edom with her kynges and prynces alſo, whiche with theyr ſtrength are layde by them that were ſlayne with the ſwearde, yee / amonge the vncircumcyſed / and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreouer, there be all the prynces of the North, with al the Sidonyans, which are gone downe to the ſlayne.

With theyr feare and ſtrength they are come to confuſion / and lye there vncircumcyſed amonge thoſe that be ſlayne with the ſwearde: and beare theyr owne ſhame / with them that be gone downe to the pytte. Now whan Pharao ſeyth this / he ſhalbe comforted ouer all hys people / that is ſlayne with the ſwearde: bothe Pharao and al his hoſt, ſayeth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in ŷ lande of the lyuyng. But Pharao and all his people ſhall lye amonge the vncircumcyſed / and amonge them that be ſlayne with ſwearde ſayeth the Lorde God.

¶ He ſetteth out the offyce of a Curate that preacheth the Goſpel. He ſtrengtheneth them that dyſpayre, and boldeneth them with the promyſe of mercy. The worde of the Lorde agaynſt the remnaunt of the people. Agaynſt the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

CAPI. XXXIII.

A AGAYNE the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man / Speake to the Chyldren of thy people / and tell theym: Whan I ſende a ſwearde vpon a lande / yf the people of the lande take a man of theyr countre / and ſet hym to be theyre * watcheman: the ſame man (whan he ſeyth the ſwearde come vpon the lande) ſhall blowe the trompet / & warne the people. 3.Reg.9.b

If a man nowe heare the noyſe of the trompette and wyll not be warned / and the Swearde come and take hym awaye: hys bloude ſhall be vpon his owne heade: for he herde the ſounde of the trompet / and wolde not take hede / therfore his bloude be vpon hym. But yf he wyll receaue warnynge / he ſhall ſaue his lyfe.

B Agayne, yf the watcheman ſe the ſwerde come and ſhew it not with the trōpet, ſo that the people is not warned: if the ſwerde come then, and take any man from amonge them: the ſame ſhall be taken awaye in his owne ſynne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

Ezech.iii.c * And now (O thou ſonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the houſe of Iſraell: that where as thou heareſt any thyng out of my mouthe, thou mayeſt warne them on my behalfe. If I ſaye vnto the wycked thou wicked / thou ſhalt ſurely dye, and thou geueſt him not warnynge / that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: then ſhall the wycked dye in his owne ſynne / but his bloude wyl I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles, yf thou warne the wycked of his waye / to turne from it, where as he yet wyl not be turned from it, then ſhall he dye because of hys ſynne, but thou haſt delyuered thy ſoule.

C Therfore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake vnto the houſe of Iſrael. Ye ſaye thus: Our offences and ſynnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: howe ſhulde we then be reſtored vnto lyfe? Tell them: * As truely as I lyue, ſaieth the Lord God, I haue no pleaſure in the death of the wycked, but much rather that the wycked turne from his waye & lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the houſe of Iſraell. Oh, wherfore wyll ye dye. Eze.xviii.e

Thou ſonne of man / tell the chyldren of thy people: * The ryghtuouſnes of the ryghtuous ſhal not ſaue him / whan ſoeuer he turneth awaye vnfaythfully. Agayne, the wyckedneſſe of the wycked ſhall not hurte him / whan ſoeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlyneſſe. Ezech.xx.a

And the ryghtuouſnes of the ryghtuous ſhall not ſaue hys lyfe, whan ſoeuer he ſynneth. If I ſaye vnto the ryghtuous, that he ſhall ſurely lyue, and ſo he truſt to his owne ryghtuouſneſſe, and do ſynne, then ſhall hys ryghteouſneſſe be nomore thought vpon / D but in the wyckedneſſe that he hath done he ſhall dye. Ezech.iii.d. Iere.18.b * Agayne, if I ſaye vnto the wycked: thou ſhalte ſurely dye: and ſo he turne from his ſynnes, and do the thynge that is lawful and ryght: In ſo much that the ſame wycked man geueth the pledge agayne, reſtoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery walcketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and dothe no wronge. Then ſhall he ſurely lyue, and not dye. Yee / the ſines that he hath done, ſhall neuer be thought vpon. For in ſo muche as he dothe nowe the thynge that is lawful and ryght, he ſhall lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people ſay: Tuſh, the way of the Lorde is not ryght, where as their owne way is rather vnryght.

When the ryghtuous turneth from hys ryghtuouſneſſe and dothe the thynge that is wycked he ſhal dye therefore. But yf the wycked turne from his wyckedneſſe / doyng the thyng that is lawful & ryght, he ſhal liue therfore. Ezech.18.f Yet ye ſay: * the way of the Lord is not equal. Roma.ii.c. O ye houſe of Iſrael * I wyl iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

E In the .xii. yeare, the .v. daye of the tenth moneth of oure captyuite, it happened, that one whiche was fled out of Ieruſalem, came vnto me, and ſayde: the cytie is deſtroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me, the euenynge afore this man (which ☞ was eſcaped) came vnto me, and had ☞ opened my mouth, vntyll the mornynge that he came to me: ye, he opened my mouth, ſo that I was no more dome. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and ſayde. Thou ſone of man / theſe that dwell in the waſted lande of Iſrael, ſaye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in poſſeſſion: nowe are we many and the lande is geuen vs to poſſeſſe alſo. F And therfore tell them. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Leui.xvii.b * In the bloude haue ye eaten / your eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idoles, Deut.xii.c * and haue ſhed bloude: ſhall ye then haue the lande in poſſeſſion?

Ye leane vpon your ſweardes / ye worke abhomynacyons, euerye one defyleth hys neyghbours wyfe: and ſhall ye then poſſeſſe the lande? Saye thou theſe wordes vnto them. Thus ſayeth Lorde God. As truely as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wyldernesſe / ſhall be ſlayne with the ſwearde: what ſo euer is vpon the felde / wyll I geue vnto the beaſtes to be deuoured: thoſe that be in ſtronge holdes and dennes / ſhall dye of the peſtylence. For I wyl make the lande ſo deſolate and waſt / and the pompe of her ſtrẽgth ſhal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Iſraell ſhalbe ſo waſte that no man ſhal trauayle therby.

G Eze.vii. * Then ſhall they lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waſt and deſolate, becauſe of all theyr abhominacyons / that they haue wrought. And thou ſonne of man, the children of thy people that talcke of the / by the walles and in the dores of their houſes, ſaying one to another: Come let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lorde. Theſe come vnto the, after the maner of a greate people: yee / my people ſyt downe before the / and heare thy wordes / but they do not thereafter, Eſay.29.c Math.15.a * for in theyre mouthes they ſhewe them ſelues as though they were feruente / but theyr herte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre. And as a balet that hathe a ſwete tune, and is pleaſaunt to ſynge, ſo ſhalte thou be vnto them: thy wordes ſhall they heare / but they wyll not do therafter. Whan thys commeth to paſſe (for lo / it commeth in dede) then ſhall they knowe / that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

¶ Agaynſt Byſhoppes and curates that deſpyſe the flocke of Chryſt, and ſeke theyr owne. The Lorde ſayeth that he wyll vyſet his diſparſed flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the malyce of certayne of the flocke. He promyſeth the true ſhepherde Chriſt, and with him peace.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

A AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me / ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man propheſye agaynſte the ſhepherdes of Iſraell / propheſye and ſpeake vnto them. Thus ſayeth the Lord God. Ezech.13.a Iere.23.a Zach.11.a * Wo be vnto the ſhepherdes of Iſraell, that fede them ſelues. Shuld not the ſhepherdes fede the flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the beſte fedde haue ye ſlayne, but the flocke haue ye not norysſhed. The weake haue ye not holden vp Luke.15.a * the ſyck haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye nat bounde together, the out caſtes haue ye not brought agayne: the loſte haue ye not ſoughte: but churlyſſly and cruelly haue ye 1.Petri.5 ruled them. Thus are they ſcatred here and there without a Shepherde: yee / all the beaſtes of the felde deuoure them, and they go aſtraye.

B My ſhepe go wandringe vpon all mountaynes and vpon euery hye hyl. Yee / they be ſcatred abrode in all feldes / and there is no man that careth for thẽ, or ſeketh after thẽ / Therfore, O ye ſhepherdes, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus ſayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, for ſo much as my ſhepe are robbed/ and deuoured of all the wylde beaſtes of the felde, hauynge no ſhepherde: and ſeinge that my ſhepherdes take no regarde of my ſhepe, but fede them ſelues onely, and the Lord (O ye ſhepherdes) Thus ſaieth the Lorde God: Beholde, I my ſelfe wyl vpon the ſhepherdes/ and requyre my ſhepe from their handes, and make them ceaſſe from fedynge of my ſhepe: yee, the ſhepherdes ſhall fede them ſelues nomore. For I wyl deliuer my ſhepe out of theyr mouthes, ſo that they D ſhall not deuoure them after this: For thus John. x. a. Hebr. xiij. d. i. Pet. ii. ſ a ſayeth the Lorde God: * Beholde/ I wyll loke to my ſhepe my ſelfe, and ſeke them.

Lyke as a ſhepherde amonge the flocke ſeketh after the ſhepe that are ſcatred abrode euen ſo wyll I ſeke after my ſhepe/ and gather them together out of all places/ where they haue bene ſcatred in the cloudy and darcke daye. I wyll brynge them out from all people, and gather them together out of all landes. I wyll brynge them into theyr owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaines of Iſrael, by the ryuers, and in al the places of the countre. I wyll fede them in right good paſtures and vpō the hye moūtaynes of Iſrael ſhal there foldes be. There trouble the reſydue alſo with your fete?

Thus my ſhepe muſt be fayne to eate the haue defiled. Therfore, thus ſaieth the lord God vnto them: Beholde, I wyl ſeuer the i.Mat.b.6 the: * ſeinge thou lyeſte wayte for bloude/ therfore ſhall bloude perſecute the. Thus wyll I make the mount Seyr deſolate and waſte and brynge to paſſe / that there ſhall no man go thyther/nor come from thence.

Hys mountaynes wyll I fyll wyth hys ſlayne men: thy hylles / dales and valleys ſhall lye full of them / that are ſlayne with the ſwearde. I wyll make the a perpetuall wyldernesse / ſo that no man ſhall dwell in thy cytyes: that ye maye knowe/howe that I am the Lorde.

☞ C And becauſe thou haſte ſayde: what ☞ bothe theſe nacions and bothe theſe landes muſte be myne / and I wyll haue them in Eze.xxv.i. poſſeſſyon * where as the Lorde was there.

Therfore, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue / I wyll handle the accordynge to thy wrathe and gelouſe, lyke as thou haſt dealte cruelly with them / that I maye be knowen amonge the howe, I haue punyſhed the. Yee/& that thou alſo mayeſt be ſure/that I the Lorde haue herde all thy deſpytefull wordes, which thou haſt ſpoken D agaynſte the moũtaynes of Iſrael ſayinge: Lo/they are made waſte/& geuen vs to deuoure. Thus with youre mouthes ye haue made youre boaſt againſt me, yee, and multyplyed youre proude wordes agaynſte me, whiche I haue herde altogether.

Where vnto/thus ſayeth the Lorde God Eze.xxv.a. and.i,vi.a. when the whole worlde is in wealthe / then wyll I make the waſte. * And lyke as thou (O mount Seyr) waſt glad, becauſe the herytage of the houſe of Iſrael was deſtroied euen ſo wyll I do vnto the alſo / that thou and whole Edom ſhall be deſtroyed / and knowe/that I am the Lorde.

¶ He promyſeth delyueraunce from the Gentyles vnto Iſraell. The benefytes done vnto the Iewes are to be aſcrybed to the mercy of God: not vnto theyr deſeruynges. God renueth oure hertes that we maye walke in his commaundementes.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A THOV ſonne of man, prophecy vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael/ and ſpeke: Ezec.vi.a. * Heare the worde of the Lord/O ye mountaynes of Iſraell. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Becauſe your enemy hath ſayde vpon ☞ you: ☞ A,ha, the hye euerlaſtynge places are nowe become ours: prophecye therfore/ and ſpeake: thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Seynge ye be waſted and troden downe on euery ſyde / and become a poſſeſſyon vnto the reſydue of the Gentyles / whiche haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euyll name amonge the people. Therfore/ heare the worde of the Lorde God/ O ye mountaynes of Iſraell. Thus ſayeth/ the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wyldernes and deſolate cytties/which are ſpoyled / and had in deryſyon on euery ſyde/among the reſydue of the Heathen. Yee, euen thus ſayeth the Lorde God. In the fyre of B my gelouſy haue I taken a deuyce/againſt the reſydue of the Gentyles, and againſt all * Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande Obdi.a. vnto the ſelues for a poſſeſſyon: whiche alſo reioyſed from their whole hert with a diſpitefull ſtomacke, to waſte it, and to ſpoyle it:

Prophecye therfore vpon the lande of Iſrael, ſpeake vnto the moũtaynes and hilles to valleys and dales, thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, thys haue I deuyſed in my gelouſy and terryble wrathe. For ſo muche as ye haue ſuffred reproſe of the Heathen/ therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God ☞ I ☞ haue ſworne/ that the Gentyles whiche lye aboute you / ſhall beare youre confuſyon them ſelues. C And as for you (O mountaynes of Iſrael) ye ſhal ſhute out your braunches / and brynge forthe youre frute to my people of Iſraell/for it is harde by / that it wyll come. Beholde/I come vnto you/and vnto you wyll I turne me/ that ye maye be tylled and ſowen.

☞ I wyll ſende you much people, whiche ſhal be all of the houſe of Iſraell, the cytyes ☞ ſhall be inhabyted, and the decayed places ſhalbe repayred agayne. I wyll prouyde you with muche people and catell / whiche ſhall increaſe and brynge frute. I wyll reſtore you alſo to your olde eſtate and ſhewe you more kyndnes then euer ye had before: wherby ye ſhal knowe, that I am the Lord.

Yee, people wyll I ſende vnto you (O my folke of Iſraell) which ſhall haue the in poſſeſſyon, and thou ſhalte be theyr enherytaunce/ſo that thou ſhalte nomore be without them. Agayne/thus ſayeth the Lorde God. For ſo muche as they ſaye vnto you/ thou arte an eater vp of men, and a waſter of thy people: therfore thou ſhalte eate no mo men / neyther deſtroye thy people any more, ſayeth the Lorde God. D And I wyl not ſuffre the, for to heare thine owne confuſion amonge the Gentyles from hẽſforth. Thou ſhalt not beare the reproſe of the naciõs nor caſt out thyne owne people eny more, ſaith the Lorde God.

Moreouer/the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſaying. O thou ſonne of man, whẽ the houſe of Iſraell dwelt vpon their owne grounde / they defyled them ſelues wyth theyr owne wayes & ymagynacions: ſo that in my ſyght their way was lyke the vnclennes of a menſtruous woman. Wherfore/ I poured my wrothful diſpleaſure vpon the/ D & becauſe of the bloude that they had ſhed in the lande, becauſe of theyr Idols / wherwith they had defiled them ſelues. I ſcatred them alſo among the Heathen/ ſo that they were ſtrowed aboute in the landes. Accordynge to theyr wayes and after theyr owne inuencyons, ſo dyd I punyſhe them.

E * Nowe/ when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and come in amonge thē, they diſhonoured my holy name ſo that it was ſaid of them. Are theſe the people of God, & muſt go out of theyr owne lande? Then ſpared I my holy name / whiche the houſe of Iſrael had diſhonoured amonge the Gentyles/ to whom they came. Therfore tell the houſe of Iſrael: Thus ſaieth the Lord God I do not this for your ſakes (O houſe of Iſraell) but for my holy names ſake, which ye diſhonoured amonge the Heathen / when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyll halowe my greate name agayne/ which amonge the Gentyles is euyll ſpoken of: for ye youre ſelues haue dyſhonoured it amonge them. And the Gentyles ſhal know that I am the Lorde whan I am honoured in you before theyre eyes / ſayeth the Lorde God.

As for you / I wyll take you from amonge the Heathē, and gather you together out of all countrees, and brynge you agayne into your owne lande. * Then wyl I poure cleare water vpon you/ and ye ſhalbe clene: yee, from al your vnclenneſſe and from al your Idols ſhall I clenſe you. A newe herte alſo wyl I geue you, and a new ſpirite wyl I put into you. As for that ſtony hert, I wyll take it out of youre body/ and gyue you a fleſhly F herte. I wyl gyue my ſpyrite among you * & cauſe you to walcke in my commaūdementes to kepe my lawes. and fulfyll them.

And ſo ye ſhall dwell in the lande/ that I gaue to youre forefathers and ye ſhalbe my people, and I wyl be your God. I wyl helpe you out of al your vnclennes. I wyl cal for the corne/ and wyll increaſe it/ and let you haue no honger. I wyl multyply the frutes of the trees & the increaſe of the feld for you ſo that ye ſhall beare no more reprofe of hōger amonge the Heathen. Then ſhall ye remembre your owne wicked wayes, & youre ymaginaciōs, which were not good. ſo that ye ſhal take diſpleſure at your owne ſelues by reaſon of your ſinnes & abhominacions.

G But I wyll not do thys for youre ſakes (ſayth the Lord God) be ye ſure of it. Therfore / O ye houſe of Iſraell, be aſhamed of youre ſynnes. Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: what tyme as I ſhal clenſe you from all youre offences, then wyll I make the cytyes to be occupyed agayne/ and wyll repayre the places that be decayed. The deſolate lande ſhalbe builded agayne/ whiche afore tyme laye waſt in the ſyght of al them that wente by. Then ſhall it be ſayde: thys waſte lande is become lyke a garden of pleſure / and the voyde / deſolate and broken downe cytyes are nowe ſtronge/ and fenſed agayne. Then the reſydue of of the Heathen that lye rounde about you/ ſhall know that I am the Lorde / whiche repayre that was broken downe, and plant agayne/ that was made waſte. Euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it/ and wyll do it in dede.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayn of the houſe of Iſrael and do this for them: * I ſhal increaſe them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke & the flocke of Ieruſalē are in the hye ſolēpne feaſtes: ſo ſhal alſo the wyde waſted cytyes be fylled with flockes of men: and they ſhall knowe that I am the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVII.

A THe hande of the Lorde came vpō me & caried me out in the ſpryte of the Lord & let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones / and he led me rounde aboute by them and beholde, the bones that lay vppon the felde, were very many, and maruelous drye alſo. Then ſayde he vnto me. Thou ſonne of man: thinkeſt thou theſe bones may lyue agayne? I anſwered: O Lord God/ thou knoweſt. And he ſayde vnto me. Prophecy thou vpō theſe bones/ and ſpeke vnto them. Ye drye bones / heare the worde of the Lorde. B Thus ſayeth the Lorde God vnto theſe bones: Beholde, I wyll put brethe into you, that ye maye lyue: I wyll geue you ſynowes, and make fleſhe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with ſkynne: and ſo gyue you * brethe, that ye maye lyue and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Bones

Gene.ii.b.

So I prophecyed, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophecyinge there came a noyſe and a greate motiō, ſo that the bones ran euery one to another. Now when I had loked, beholde, they had ſinowes, and fleſhe grewe vpon them: and aboue they were couered with ſkynne, but there was no breth in them in them. Then ſayde he vnto me. Thou ſōne of man, prophecye thou towarde the wynde: prophecye/ and ſpeake to the wynde. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Come (O thou ayre) ☞ from the foure wyndes, and ☞ blowe vpon C theſe ſlayne that they maye be reſtored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had cōmaūded me: then came the breth into them, and they receaued lyfe, and ſtode vp vpon theyr fete/

a maruelous greate ſorte.
Moreouer, he ſayde vnto me: Thou ſonne of man / theſe bones are the whole houſe of Iſraell. Beholde, they ſaye: Oure bones dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are clene cut D of. Therfore prophecy thou, & ſpeake vnto them: thus ſayeth the Lorde God. Beholde/
I wyll open youre graues (O my people) and take you out of youre ſepulcres / and bryng you into the lande of Iſrael agayne.
So ſhall ye knowe that I am the Lorde when I open youre graues, and brynge you out of them. My ſpryte alſo wyll I put in you/ and ye ſhall lyue: I wyl ſet you agayne in youre owne lande, and ye ſhall knowe/that I am the Lorde, whiche haue ſayde it,
and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, ſayinge: thou ſonne of man, take a ſtycke & wryte vpon it. Unto Iuda and to the chyldren of Iſrael his companyons. Then take another ſticke, and wryte vpon it: Unto Io-ſeph ȳ ſtoke of Ephraim, and to al the houſ-holde of Iſraell his companions. And than take bothe theſe together in thyne hande, ſo E ſhall there be one ſticke therof. Nowe yf the chyldren of thy people ſaye vnto the: wylte thou not ſhewe vs, what thou meaneſt by theſe? Then geue them thys anſwere: thus Oſee.i.b. ſayeth the Lord God: beholde, * I wyl take the ſtock of Ioſeph, which is in the hand of Ephraim and of the tribes of Iſrael his felowes, and wyll put thē to the ſtocke of Iu-da and make them one ſtocke, and they ſhal be one in my hande. And the two ſtyckes where vpon thou wryteſt / ſhalte thou haue in thyne hande, that they may ſe/ and ſhalte ſaye vnto them.*.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: beholde/ I F wyl take awaye the chyldren of Iſrael from amonge the Heathen: vnto whome they be gone, and wyl gather thē together on euery ſyde, and brynge them agayne into theyre owne lande: yee, I wyll make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael, and they al ſhal haue but one kyng.
They ſhall nomore be two peoples frō hence forth, nether be deuided into two kyngdomes they ſhal alſo defile thē ſelues nomore with theyr abhominaciōs, Idoles, & all their wic ked doinges. I wyl helpe thē out of al theyr dwelling places, wherin they haue ſynned:
and wyll ſo clenſe them, that they ſhalbe my people, and I theyr God.
Dauid my ſeruaunt ſhalbe their kinge and G they al ſhal haue one ſhepherd onely. They ſhall walcke in my lawes, and my comman dementes ſhall they bothe kepe and fulfyll.
They ſhall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my ſeruaunt, where as your fa thers alſo haue dwelt. Yee, euen in the ſame lande ſhal they, their chyldren, and their chil ders childrē dwell for euermore, and my ſer uaunt Dauid ſhalbe their euerlaſting prīce.

Moreouer / I wyll make ☞ a bonde of ☞ peace with thē, which ſhall be vnto them an euerlaſting couenaūt, I wyl ſette them alſo and multyplye them / my Sanctuary wyll
I ſet among thē for euermore. * My dwel- Leui.xx lynge ſhalbe with them: yee, I wyl be theyr God, and they ſhal be my people. Thus the Heathen alſo ſhall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Iſrael: whē my Sāc-tuary ſhalbe amonge them for euermore.

¶ He prophecyed that Gog and Magog ſhall come with an appoynted hoſte into the lande of promes. Theyr entent.
He rehearſeth that the cōmynge of Gog was before prophe-cyed of the prophetes. The deſtruccyon of hym.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

AND THE worde of the Lorde came I vnto me ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man / turne thy face ☞ towarde Gog the ☞ lande of Magog, whiche is the chefe prince at Meſeche and Tubal: prophecye agaynſt hym/ and ſaye. Thus ſayeth the Lorde
God. * O Gog thou chefe prynce Meſeche Eze.
and Tubal: beholde/ I wyll vpon the/ and Apoca wyll turne the aboute and put a bytte in thy chawes: I wyll brynge the forth & all thyne des and helmettes: Gomar and al his hoo-ſtes: the houſe of Thogorma oute of the Northe quarters / and all hys hooſtes/ yee/and muche people with the.

Therfore prepare the, ſet thy ſelfe in araye with all thy people / that are come vnto the by heapes / and be thou theyr defence. After many dayes thou ſhalt be viſited, and in the latter yeares thou ſhalt come into the lande that hath bene deſtroyed with the ſwearde/& nowe is repleniſhed agayne with dyuerſe

people vpõ the mountaynes of Iſrael, which haue longe lyen waſte. Yee, they be brought out of the nacions, and dwell all ſafe. Thou ſhalt come vp like a ſtormy wether, to couer the lãde, and as it were a darcke cloude, thou with al thyne hoſtes, and a great multitude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lord God. At the ſame tyme ſhal many thynges come into thy mynde, ſo that thou ſhalte ymagyn myſchefe/ and ſaye: I wyll vp to yonder playne lande, ſeinge they ſyt at eaſe, and dwell ſo ſafely (for they dwell all without any walles / D they haue neither barres nor dores) to ſpoyle them/ to robbe them, to lay hande vpon their ſo wel inhabyted wilderneſſes: agaynſt that people/ that is gathered together, frõ amõg the Heathen, whiche haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddeſt of the lande. Then ſhall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchauntes of Tharſis with al their worthies ſaye vnto the. Art thou come to robbe? Haſt thou gathered thy people together/ becauſe thou wylt ſpoyle, to take ſyluer and golde; to cary awaye catell and good, and to haue a great praye.

E Therfore / O thou ſonne of man / thou ſhalt prophecy / and ſaye vnto Gog. Thus ſayeth the Lord God. In that day thou ſhalt knowe / that my people of Iſraell dwelleth ſafe: and ſhalt come from thy place out of yͤ North partes: thou and much people wᵗ the which ryde vpon horſes, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable ſorte. Yee, thou ſhalt come vpon my people of Iſrael, as a cloude to couer the lãde. This ſhal come to paſſe in yͤ latter dayes: I wyl brynge the vp into my lande, yͭ the Heathen maye knowe me, when I get me honour vpon the (O Gog) before theyr eyes.

Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Thou arte F he/ of whom I haue ſpoken afore tyme / by my ſeruauntes the Prophetes of Iſrael, which prophecyed in thoſe dayes and yeares (that I ſhulde brynge the vpon them. At the ſame tyme, when Gog commeth vp into the lande of Iſrael (ſayeth the Lorde God) ſhal my indignacyon go forth in my wrathe. For in my gelouſy and hote diſpleaſure I haue deuyſed* that there ſhal be a great trouble in the lãde of Iſrael at that tyme. The very fyſſhes in the ſee, the foules of the ayre / the beaſtes of the felde / and all the men that are vpon the earth, ſhall tremble for feare of me.

G The hylles alſo ſhall be turned vp ſyde downe, the ſtayres of ſtone ſhal fal, ⁊ al walles ſhal ſynche to the grounde. I wyl cal for a ſwearde vpon them in al my mountaynes ſayeth the Lorde God: ſo that euery mans ſwearde ſhall be vpon another. With peſtylence and bloude wyl I puniſhe him: ſtormy rayne and hayle ſtones / fyre and brymſtone, wyll I cauſe to rayne vpon him and all his heape, yee / and vpon all that greate people that is with hym. Thus wyll I be magnyfyed / honoured, and knowen amonge the Heathen: that they may be ſure / howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ He ſheweth the deſtruccyon of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hooſt. He prophecyeth that Gog and his company ſhalbe deuoured of byrdes and beaſtes. Wherfore the houſe of Iſraell is waſted. Their bryngynge agayne from captiuite is promyſed.

CAPI. XXXIX.

A Therfore O thou ſonne of man, prophecye agaynſt Gog, and ſpeake. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Beholde * O Gog: thou chefe prynce at Meſech and Tuball, I wyl vpon the / and ☞ punyſſhe the with ſixe plages, and leade the from the North partes and brynge the vp to the mountaynes of Iſrael. As for thy bowe, I wyll ſmyte it out of thy left hande, and caſt thyne arowes out of thy ryght hande. Thou with al thyne heape ⁊ all the people that is with yͤ / muſt fall vpon the mountaynes of Iſraell. Then wyll I geue the vnto foules and wylde beaſtes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muſt thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lord haue ſpoken it, ſayeth the Lorde God.

Ezech 38. a

B Into Magog, and amonge thoſe that ſyt ſo careleſſe in the Iles: wyll I ſende a fyre ⁊ they ſhal knowe, that I am the Lord, I wyl make alſo the name of my holyneſſe to be knowẽ among my people of Iſrael: ⁊ I wyl not let my holy name be euyll ſpoken of any more: but the very Hethen alſo ſhal knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Iſrael. Beholde, it commeth, and ſhall be fulfylled in dede, ſayeth the Lorde God. This is the daye wherof I haue ſpokẽ. They that dwell in the cyties of Iſrael, ſhall go forth and ſet fyre vpon the weapẽs, and burne them: ſhyldes and ſperes, bowes and arowes, bylles ⁊ clubbes: ſeuen yeares ſhall they be burnyng therof, ſo that they ſhal els bryng no ſtickes frome the felde, neyther haue nede to hewe downe any out of yͤ wod. For they ſhal haue weapens ynow to burne. C They ſhall robbe thoſe that robbed thẽ, and ſpoyle thoſe that ſpoyled them ſayeth the Lorde God.

At the ſame tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog, a place to be buried in, in Iſrael: euẽ the valley / where thorowe men go from the Eaſt to the ſee

ſhall abhorre it. There ſhall Gog and al his people be buried: and it ſhalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe ſhall the houſe of Iſraell be buryenge of them that they maye clenſe the lande. Yee, all the people of the lande ſhall burye them. O/ it ſhalbe a glorious daye, when I get me that honoure/ſayeth the Lorde God. They ſhal ordayne men alſo to be deed buriers, euer goynge thorow the lande, and appoynt them certayne places to bury thoſe in, whiche remayne vpon the felde/ that the lande maye be clenſed. From ende to ende ſhal they ſeke, D and that ſeuen monethes long. Nowe thoſe that go thorowe the lande/ where they ſe a mans bone/they ſhall ſet vp a token by it/ tyll the deed buriers haue buryed it alſo/ in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cite ſhalbe called/Hamonah: Thꝰ ſhal they make the lande clene.

And thou ſonne of man: thus ſayeth the Lorde God, Speake vnto al the foules and euery byrde, yee, and to all the wylde beaſtes of the felde: heape you together and come/ gather you rounde aboute vpon my ſlaughter/that I haue ſlayne for you: euen a great
E ſlaughter vpon the mountaynes of Iſraell:
Apoc.xix.d eate fleſhe, and drynke bloude. Ye ſhal eate the fleſhe of the worthies/ & drynck the blode of the prynces of the lande: of the wethers of the lambes/of the goates, and of the Oxen that be al ſlayne at Baſan. Eate the fat your bely full, and drynke bloude/tyll ye be dronken of the ſlaughter/ whiche I haue ſlayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table/with horſes and ſtronge horſemen: with captaynes and all men of warre/ſayeth the Lorde God.

I wyll brynge my glory alſo amonge the F Gentyles/ that all the Heathen maye ſe my iudgement/that I haue kept/and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the houſe of Iſrael may knowe/how that I am the Lorde theyr God from that daye forthe. And the Heathen ſhal knowe/ that where as the houſe of Iſrael were led into captiuite: it was for their wyckednes ſake, becauſe they offended me.

For the whiche cauſe I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them into the handes of their enemyes/that they myght al be ſlayne with the ſwearde. Accordyng to theyr vnclenneſſe and vnfaythfull dealynges, ſo haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.
G Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Now wyll I brynge agayne the captiues of Iacob & haue mercy vpon the whole houſe of Iſrael/and be gelous for my holy names ſake. All theyr confuſion & offence that they haue done agaynſt me ſhall be taken awaye: and ſo ſafely ſhall they dwell in theyr lande/that no man ſhal make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them agayne from among the people/when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies landes/ and am prayſed in them before many Heathen: then ſhall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God whiche ſuffred them to be led into captiuite amonge the Heathen, but nowe haue brought them agayne into theyr owne lãde, and not lefte one of them yonder.

After that, wyll I hyde my face nomore
Ezec.xi from the * but wyl poure out my ſprete vpõ the houſe of Iſrael, ſayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The reſtorynge of the cytyes and of the temple that was to come is ſhewed vnto the Prophete.

CAPI. XL.

A IN the.xxv. yeare of our captyuite/ in the begynnynge of the yeare/the.x. day of the moneth: that is the.xiiij. yeare, after that the cyte was ſmytten downe: the ſame daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me/and caryed me forth: euen into ỹ lande of Iſrael brought he me in the vyſyons of God: & ſet me downe vpon a maruelous hye mountayne, where vpon there was a buyldynge (as it had bene of a cyte) towarde the North.

Thyther he caried me/and beholde, there was a mã, whoſe ſimilitude was lyke braſſe whiche had a threde of flax in his hande, and a meterodde alſo. He ſtode in the dore, and ſayd vnto me: Thou ſonne of man, marcke well with thine eyes, herken to with thyne eares, & faſten it in thyne herte, whatſoeuer I ſhal ſhewe the, for to the entent that they myght be ſhewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And what ſoeuer thou ſeyſt, thou ſhalt certyfye the houſe of Iſrael therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the oute ſyde rounde aboute the houſe: the meterode that he had in his hande, was ſyxe cubytes long
B and a ſpanne. So he meaſured the bredthe of the buyldynge, whiche was a meterode/ and the height alſo a meterode. Then came he vnto the Eaſte dore/ and wente vp the ſtayres/and meaſured the poſtes of the dore wherof euery one was a meaterodde thicke.

Euery chaumbre was a meterodde longe and brode: betwene the chambers were fyue cubytes. The poſte of the dore within the porche, was one meterodde. He meaſured alſo the porche of the innermer dore, whiche conteyned a meterodde: Then meaſured he the entrye of the dore/ that conteyned eyght cubytes/and hys pyllers two cubytes:and this entrye ſtode inwarde.

The chamber dores Eaſtward/were thre on euery ſyde: alyke broade and longe. The pyllers alſo that ſtode of both the ſydes were of one meaſure. After this,he meaſu- C red the wydeneſſe of the dore, whiche was .x.cubytes,and the heygth of the dore .xiij. cubytes. The edge before the Chambers was one cubyte brode vpon bothe the ſydes and the Chambers ſyxe cubytes wyde of eyther ſyde. He meaſured the dore frome the rydge of one Chamber to another, whoſe wydeneſſe was fyue and tweyntye cubytes, and one dore ſtode againſt another. He made pyllers alſo.lx.cubytes hygh/rounde about the court dore. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entrye of the ynnermer dore,were fyftye cubytes. The chambers and their pylers within, rounde aboute vnto the dore/ had ſyde windowes. So had the fore entries alſo/whoſe wyndowes wente rounde about within. And vpon the pyllers there ſtode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore courte, where as were Chambers and paued workes/made in the fore courte rounde aboute. xxx. Chambers vpon one paued worcke. Nowe the paued worke was a longe beſyde the dores & that was the lower paued worke After this he meaſured the bredth from the lower dore/vnto the ynnermer courte of the D outſyde/whiche had an.C.cubytes vpon the eaſt and the north parte. And the dore in the vttermoſte courte towarde the Northe/ meaſured he after the length and bredth:his thre Chambers alſo on eyther ſyde/ wyth his pylers and fore entryes:which had euen the meaſure of the fyrſte dore. His heygth was fyftye cubites,the bredth.xxv.cubytes: his wyndowes and porches with his Date trees/had euen lyke meaſure as the dore towarde the eaſt:there were.vij.ſteppes to go vp vpon,& their porche before them. Nowe the dore of the ynnermer court ſtode ſtreyght ouer agaynſt the dore/that was toward the north eaſt. From one dore to another/he meaſured.C.cubytes.

After that,he brought me to yͤ ſouthſyde/ where there ſtode a dore towarde the ſouth: whoſe pilers and porches he meaſured,theſe had the fyrſte meaſure, and wyth theyr porches they had wyndowes roũde about/ lyke the fyrſt wyndowes. The heygth was.l.cubytes/the bredth.xxv.wyth ſteppes to go vp vpon:his porche ſtode before wyth his pylers a date trees on eyther ſide. And the dore of the ynnermer courte ſtode towarde the ſouth,& he meaſured from one dore to another an.C.cubytes. So he brought me into the innermer courte/thorowe the dore of the ſouth ſyde:whiche he meaſured, & it had the meaſure afore ſayde. In lyke maner,his chãbers,pylers/and fore entryes, had euen the fore ſayd meaſure alſo. And he had with his porches rounde aboute,wyndowes of.L.cubytes heygth/and,xxv.cubytes brode. The porches rounde aboute were.xxv. cubytes longe/and.v.cubites brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermoſt court:vpon his pylers there were date trees,and.viij.ſteppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me alſo into the ynmoſt court E vpon the eaſt ſyde/ and meaſured the dore/ accordynge to the meaſure afore ſayde. Hys chambers/pilers/and porches had euen the ſame meaſure/as the fyrſt had:and with his porches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was.l.cubytes. the bredth.xxv. cubytes:his porches reached vnto the vttermoſt court:his pilers alſo had date trees on eyther ſyde,and.viij.ſteppes to go vp vpon And he brought me to the north dore/& meaſured it,whiche alſo had the fore ſayde meaſure. His chambres,pylers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whoſe heygth was.l.cubytes,and the bredth.xxv. Hys pylers ſtode towarde the vttemoſt courte/and vpon them both were date trees/and.viij. ſteppes to go vp vpon. There ſtode a chambre alſo,whoſe intraũce was at the dore pylers/ and there the burnte offerynges were waſſhed.

In the dore porche, there ſtode on eyther F ſyde two tables for the ſlaughtynge:to ſleye the brentofferynges,ſynne offerynges & treſpace offriges thervpon. And on the out ſyde as men go forth to the north dore there ſtode two tables. Foure tables ſtode on ether ſyde of the dore / that is.viij.tables,wherevpon they ſlaughted. Foure tables were of hewen ſtone for the burnt offerynges/ of a cubyte and a halfe longe and brode/and one cubite hygh:wherupon were layed the veſſels and ornamentes/ whiche were vſed to the burnt and ſlaine offringes,when they were ſlaughted. And within there were hokes foure fyngers brode/faſtened rounde aboute,to hãge fleſſhe vpon/ and vpon the tables was layd the offerynge fleſſhe. On the out ſyde of the innermer dore were the ſyngers chambers in the inwarde courte beſyde the North dore ouer agaynſt the South. There ſtode one alſo,beſyde the Eaſt dore northwarde.

And he ſayde vnto me:This chambre on

G the South ſyde belongeth to the Prieſtes, that kepe the habitacyon: and thys towarde 1.Par.25.a the North, * is the Prieſtes that wayte vpon the aulter: whiche be the ſonnes of * Sa- 3.Reg.ii.f. doche / that do ſeruyce before the Lorde in ſteade of the chyldren of Leui. So he meaſured the fore courte/ whiche had in length an C. cubytes / and as muche in bredth by the foure corners. Nowe the aulter ſtode before the houſe: And he brought me to the fore entre of the houſe, and meaſured the walles by the entrye dore: whiche were fyue cubytes longe on eyther ſyde. The thyckeneſſe alſo of the dore on eyther ſyde/ was thre cubites. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes / the bredth .xi. cubytes/ & vpon ſteppes went men vp to it: by the walles alſo were pilers/ on eyther ſyde one.

¶ The diſpoſicyon and beautye of buyldynge agaynſt the temple, & of the other thynges therto belongynge.

CAPI. XLI.

A AFTER thys he brought me to the temple/ and meaſured the poſtes: whiche were of bothe the ſydes .vi. cubytes thycke / accordynge to the wydeneſſe of the tabernacle. The bredth of the dore was .x. cubytes and the walles of the dore on eyther ſyde fyue cubytes. He meaſured the length therof/ whyche contayned .xl. Cubytes / and the bredth .xx. Then wente he in/ and meaſured the dore poſtes, whiche were two cubytes thycke: but the dore it ſelfe was ſyxe cubite and the bredth of the dore was .vii. cubytes. He meaſured the length and bredth therof/ whiche were euery one .xx. cubytes / before the temple.

And he ſayde vnto me: this is the holyeſt of al. He meaſured alſo the wal of the houſe whiche was ſyxe cubytes. The chambres that ſtode rounde aboute the houſe/ were euery one foure cubytes wyde, and one ſtode harde vpon another / whereof there were .xxxiii. there ſtode poſtes beneth by the walles rounde aboute the houſe/ to beare them vp: but in the wal of the houſe they were not faſtened: The ſyde chambers were/ the hyer B the wyder/ and had ſteppes thorowe them rounde about the houſe. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the loweſt, men myght go to the hyeſt and myd chambers. I ſawe alſo that the houſe was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacion of the ſyde chambers was a meterodde (that is ſyxe cubytes brode.) The thyckenes of the ſyde wal without/ contayned fyue cubites, and ſo dyd the out wall of the chambers in the houſe.

Betwene the chambers was the wydenes .xx. cubytes rounde aboute the houſe. The chambre dores ſtode ouer agaynſte the outwal/ the one dore was towards the Northe/ the other towarde the South: and the thyckeneſſe of the outwall was .v. cubytes rounde aboute. Nowe the buyldynge that was ſeperated towarde the Weſt/ was .lxx. cubytes wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was .v. cubytes thycke rounde aboute / and the length foure ſcore cubytes and ten. So he meaſured the houſe whyche was an .C. cubytes longe, and the ſeperated buyldynge with the wall were an .C. cubytes long alſo The wydenes before the houſe and of it that was ſeperated towarde the Eaſt / was an .C. cubytes.

And he meaſured the length of the buyldynge before and behynde wyth the chãbers C vpon both the ſydes: and it contayned an .C. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the fore court/ the ſyde poſtes, theſe thre had ſyde wyndowes/ and pyllers rounde aboute ouer agaynſte the poſtes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them ſelues were ſyled ouer with bordes: & thus was it aboue the dore vnto the inmoſt houſe and without alſo: Yee the whole wall on euery ſyde both within and without was ſyled ouer with greate bordes. There were Cherubins D and date trees made alſo, ſo that one date tre ſtode euer betwyxte two Cherubins One Cherub had .ii. faces, the face of a man lokynge a ſyde towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other ſyde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in al the houſe: Yee, the Cherubyns & date trees were made from the groũde vp aboue the dore, and ſo ſtode they alſo vpon the wall of the temple.

The by poſtes of the temple were foure ſquared, and the faſhyon of the Sanctuary was * euen as it appered vnto me afore in yͤ Exod.[illegible] viſyon. * The table was of wodde, thre cubites hye and two cubites long: his corners, Exod.[illegible] the length and the walles were of wodde. And he ſayd vnto me: This is the table, that ſhall ſtande before the Lorde. The temple & the holyeſt of all had either of the two dores & euery dore had two lytle wyckettes which were folden in one vpon another/ on euerye ſyde two. And vpon the dores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the walles: and a great thycke balke of wod was before on the out ſyde of yͤ porche. Upon both the ſides of the walles of the porche, there were made depe windowes and date trees, hauynge beames & balkes/ lyke as the houſe had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for Preaſtes, and the holy thynges.

CAPI, XLII,

A THEN caried he me out in to the fore court towarde the north, and brought me in to the chambre that ſtode ouer agaynſt the backebuyldynge north warde, whiche had the length of an .C. cubytes, whoſe dore turned towarde the north. The wydeneſſe conteyned .L. cubytes: ouer agaynſt the .xx. cubytes of the ynnermer court, and agaynſt the paued worke that was in the courte, beſyde all theſe thre/there ſtode pylers / one ouer agaynſte another: And before thys chambre there was a walkynge place of .x. cubytes wyde/ and within was awaye of one cubyte wyde, and theyr dores towarde the north. Thus the hyeſt chambres were allwaye narower then the loweſt and myddelmoſt of the buyldyng: for they bare chambre vponchambre, and ſtode thre together one vpon another not hauynge pylers lyke the fore court: therfore were they ſmaller thẽ thoſe beneth and in the myddeſt, to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

B The wall without that ſtode by the chãbres towarde the vttemoſt courte vpon the fore ſyde of the chambres, was .L. cubytes longe: for the length of the vttemoſt chambres in the fore courte was .L. cubytes alſo: but the length therof before the temple was an .C. cubytes. Theſe chambres had vnder them an intraunce of the eaſt ſyde wherby a mã myght go in to them out of the fore courte, thorowe the thycke wall of the fore courte towarde the eaſt, ryght ouer agaynſt the ſeparated buyldynge. Before the ſame buyldynge vpon thys ſyde there were chãbers alſo whiche had away vnto them, lyke as the chambers on ẏ north ſyde of the ſame length and wydneſſe.

C Theyr intraunce/faſhyon and dores were alſo of the ſame maner. Yee, euen like as the other chamber dores were; ſo were thoſe alſo of the ſouth ſyde. And before the waye towarde ẏ ſyngers ſteppes on ẏ eaſt ſyde, there ſtode a dore to go in at. Then ſayd he vnto me: The chambers toward the north and the ſouth whiche ſtande before ẏ backe buyldynge: thoſe be holy habytacyons / wherin the preſtes that do ſeruyce before the Lorde, muſt eate the moſt holy offrynges: and there muſt they laye ẏ moſt holy offrynges: meatoffrynges, ſynneoffrynges and treſpace offrynges/ for it is an holy place. When the preſtes come therin/ they ſhall nat go out in to the fore courte: but (ſeynge they be holy) they ſhal leaue the clothes of theyr miniſtracyon, and put on other garmẽtes, when they haue any thynge to do with the people.

D Nowe whẽ he had measured all the ynnermer houſe, he brought me forth thorowe the eaſt porte, and measured the ſame rounde aboute. He measured the eaſt ſyde wyth the meterode, whiche rounde aboute conteyned .v.C. meterodes. And the north ſyde meaſured he, which conteyned rounde aboute, euẽ ſo much. The other two ſydes alſo towarde the ſouth and the weſt (whiche he meaſured) conteyned eyther of them .v.C. meterodes. So he meſured all the foure ſydes where there wente a wall rounde aboute .v.C. meterodes longe, and as brode alſo whiche ſeparated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ He ſeyth the glory of God goyng into the Temple, from whence it had before departed for the mentyoned Idolatry of the chyldren of Iſraell, for whiche they were conſumed and brought to nawght. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

CAPI, XLIII.

A SO he broughte me to the dore / that turneth towarde the eaſt. Beholde / then came the glory of the God of Iſraell from out of ẏ eaſt, whoſe voyce was lyke a great noyſe of waters/ and the earth was lyghtened with his glorye. Hys ſyght to loke vpon was * lyke the fyrſt, that I ſawe, whẽ I wente in, what tyme as the cytie ſhulde haue bene deſtroyed: * and lyke the vyſyon that I ſawe by the water of Cobar.

Eze. x. a. xii.

Ezechiel. i. a. i. c. and. xi. d.

Then fell I vpon my face/ but the glory of the Lorde came into the houſe thorowe the Eaſte dore. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me into the ynnermer courte: and beholde, the houſe was full of the glory of the Lorde. B I hearde one ſpeakynge vnto me out of the houſe / and there ſtode one by me/ that ſayde vnto me: O thou ſone of man, * thys rowme is my ſeate, and the place of my foteſteppes: where as I wyll dwell amonge the chyldren of Iſraell for euermore: ſo that the houſe of Iſraell ſhall nomore defyle my holy name: neyther they/ nor theyr kynges, thorowe theyr whordome, thorowe theyr hye places / and thorowe the deed bodyes of theyr kynges: whiche haue buylded theyr threſholdes in maner harde vpon my threſholdes / and theyr poſtes almoſt at my poſtes; ſo ẏ there is but a bare wall betwyxte me and them.

Esay. lx. a. and lxvi. a. Apo. xxi. a.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name with theyr abhomynacyons, that they haue commytted. Wherefore, I haue deſtroyed them in my wrath: But nowe they ſhall put awaye theyr whoredome and the deed bodies C of theyr kynges out of my ſight, that I may dwell amonge them for euermore. Zach. ii. a. * Therfore (O thou ſonne of man) ſhewe thou the houſholde of Iſraell a tẽple, that they maye be aſhamed of theyr wyckedneſſe, & meaſure them ſelues an example therat.

And when they be aſhamed of all theyr workes, then ſhewe them the fourme and faſhyon of the temple: the commynge in, the goynge out/ all the maner and deſcrypcion therof, yee, all the vſes and ordynaunces of it/ that they maye kepe and fulfyl all the faſhyons and cuſtomes therof.

D Thys is the deſcrypcyon of the houſe: Aboue, vpon the mounte rounde aboute all the corners/ it ſhalbe the holyeſt of all. Beholde that is the deſcrypcyon and faſhyon of the houſe. Thys is the meaſure of the aulter (after the true cubyte: which is a ſpãne longer then another cubyte) hys botome in the myddeſt was a cubyte longe & wyde, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute it/ was a ſpanne brode. Thys is the heyght of the aulter: From the groũde to the lower ſteppes the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubyte: and from the lower ſteppes to the hygher are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

Exo. xxvii. a * The aulter was foure cubytes hye, and from the aulter vpwarde ſtode foure hornes, and it was .xij. cubytes longe and .xij. cubytes brode/ vpon the foure corners: the coueryng of the aulter was .xiiij. cubytes E longe and brode vpon the foure corners/ & the ledge that wente rounde aboute/ had halfe a cubyte: and the botome therof roũde aboute one cubyte: his ſteppes ſtode towarde the Eaſt. And he ſayde vnto me: Thou ſonne of man thus ſayeth the Lorde God: theſe are the ordynaunces and lawes of the aulter, in the daye when it is made to offre burntofferynges, & to ſprynckle bloude ther vpon. To the preſtes, to the Leuites that Ezec. 44. c. and 45. d. be of ỹ ſede of * Sadoch, and treade before me to do me ſeruyce, ſayeth, the Lorde God: Unto theſe geue thou a yonge bullocke, for a ſynofferynge: and take the bloude of hym and ſprenckle his foure hornes withall and the foure corners of the aulter coueryng/ with the ledge that goeth rouñde about: herewith ſhalt thou clenſe it, and reconcyle it. Leui. xvi. c. * Thou ſhalt take the bullocke alſo of the F ſynofferynge, and burne hym in a ſeuerall place without the Sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a goatbucke without blemyſh for a ſynofferynge, to reconcyle that aulter withall: lyke as it was reconcyled with the bullocke. Nowe when thou haſt made it cleane, then offre a yonge bullocke * without blemyſh, Leui. xxii. and a ramme out of the flocke without blemyſh alſo: Offre them before the Lorde, and let the preſt caſte * ſalt ther vpon/ Leui. ii. and geue them ſo vnto the Lorde for a burntofferynge. G Seuen dayes ſhalt thou brynge, euery daye a goatbucke for ſynne. A yonge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke (bothe without blemyſh) ſhal they offre. Seuen dayes ſhall they reconcyle and clenſe the aulter, and offre vpon it. When theſe dayes are expired, then vpon the .viij. daye and ſo forth/ the preſtes ſhal offre their burntofferynges and healthofferynges vpon the aulter: ſo wyll I be mercyfull vnto you, ſayeth the Lorde God.

He ſheweth what dore of the temple is ſhutte. He is commaunded to vpbrayde the people with theyr offence. The vncyrcumcyſed in herte and in the fleſh, who are to be admytted to the ſeruyce of the temple, and who to be refuſed. He ſheweth what preſtes he wolde haue admytted into the holy place, and alſo theyr offyce.

CAPI. XLIIII.

A AFTER thys/ he brought me agayne to the outwarde dore of the Sanctuary on the Eaſt ſyde/ and that was ſhut. Thẽ ſayde the Lorde vnto me: Thys dore ſhall be ſtyll ſhut/ and nat opened for any man to go thorowe it/ but onely for the Lorde God of Iſrael: yee, he ſhal go thorowe it/ els ſhal it be ſhut ſtyll. The prynce hym ſelfe ſhall come thorowe it/ that he maye eate breade before the Lorde. At the porche ſhal he come in/ and there ſhall he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the dore/ vpon the North ſyde of the houſe. And as I loked aboute me/ beholde, * the glory of the Lorde fylled the houſe: and I fell downe vpon my face. Exod. 4 and. 4 Num. 4. Reg. 8. 2. Par. 7 So the Lorde ſpake vnto me: O thou ſõne of man/ faſten thys to thyne herte/ beholde/ B and take diligent hede to al that I wyl ſaye vnto the/ concernynge all the ordynaunces of the Lorde and all hys lawes: ponder wel with thyne herte the cõmynge in of ỹ houſe and the goynge forth of the Sanctuary, and tel that obſtynate houſholde of Iſrael: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: O houſe of Iſrael/ ye haue nowe done ynough withall youre abhomynacions/ ſeynge that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary ſtraungers/ hauynge vncircumcyſed hertes and fleſh/ where thorowe my Sanctuary is defyled/ when ye offre me bred, fat, and bloude.

Thus with all youre abhomynacyons ye haue broken my couenaunt / and nat kept the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuary: but ſet kepers of my Sanctuary / euen after youre owne mynde. Therfore thus ſayeth

C the Lorde God: Of all the ſtraungers that dwell amonge the chyldren of Iſraell / no ſtraunger (whoſe herte and fleſh is nat circumcyſed) ſhal come within my Sãctuary: No, nor the Leuites ỹ be gone backe fro me, and haue dyſceaued the people of Iſraell with all erroures / goynge after theyr ydoles: therfore ſhal they beare theyr owne wyckednes. Shulde they be ſet and ordened to mynyſtre vnder the dores of the houſe of my Sanctuarye? And to do ſeruyce in the houſe: to ſlaye burntofferynges and ſacryfyces for the people: to ſtande before thē / and to ſerue them / ſeynge the ſeruyce that they do them / is before theyr Idoles / and cauſe the houſe of Iſrael to ſtomble thorow their

D wyckednes? * For the whiche cauſe I haue pluckte out myne hande ouer them (ſayeth the Lorde God) ſo that nowe they muſt beare theyr owne iniquyte / and nat to come nye me / to ſerue me with theyr preſthode / in my Sanctuary, & mooſt holyeſt of all: that they maye beare theyr owne ſhame & abhominacyons, which they haue done. Shulde I vſe them to be porters of the houſe, and to all ỹ ſeruyce that is done therin? But the Preſtes the Leuytes, the ſōne of Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordynaunces of my Sanctuary / when the chyldren of Iſraell were gone fro me: ſhall come to me, to do me ſeruyce, to ſtāde before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude / ſayeth the Lorde God.

And one lambe from two hundreth ſhepe out of the paſture of Iſrael.for a meatoffryng, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge/ to reconcyle the ſayeth the Lorde God. All the people of the lande ſhal geue thys heaueoffringe with a fre wyl for the prynce of Iſrael Agayne, it ſhall be the prynces parte to offre burntoffrynges/ meatofferynges and drynckoffringes vnto the Lorde,in the holy dayes, newe Moones, Sabbathes,and in all the hye feaſtes of the F houſe of Iſrael. The ſynoffrynge/meatoffrynge / burntofferynge & healthoffrynge ſhal he geue,to recōcyle the houſe of Iſrael. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: The fyrſt day of the fyrſt moneth thou ſholt take a yonge bullocke without blemyſh / and clenſe the Sanctuary. So the preſte ſhall take of the bloude of the ſynoffrynge, and ſprynckle it vnto the poſtes of the houſe / and vpon the foure corners of the aulter/with the dore poſtes of the ynnermar courte. And thus ſhalt thou do alſo the ſeuenth day of the moneth * (for ſuche as haue ſynned of ignorauce/or beynge diſceaued) to reconcyle the Num.15. houſe withall. * Upon the.xiiii.daye of the Exod.12.c Leui.23.a Deu.16.a fyrſt moneth ye ſhall kepe Eaſter. Seuen dayes ſhall the feaſt contynue, wherin there ſhall no ſowre nor leuened breade be eaten.

Upon the ſame daye ſhall the prynce geue for hym ſelfe and all the people of the lande, a bullocke for a ſynoffrynge And in the G feaſt of the ſeuen dayes he ſhall offre euery day a bullocke and a ram/that are without blemyſh/for a burntofferyng vnto yͤ Lorde: and an he goate daylye for a ſynoffrynge. For the meatoffrynges / he ſhall geue euer an Ephah to a bullocke/an Ephah to a ram and an Hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the.xv.daye of the ſeuenth moneth/ he ſhall kepe yͤ ſeuen dayes holy/ one after another/ euen as the other ſeuen dayes:with the ſynoffrynge/burntoffrynge/meatoffryng/and with the oyle.

❡ The ſacryfyces of the Sabboth and of the newe monets. Thorowe whiche dores they muſte go in,or come out of the temple.&c.

CAPI, XLVI.

A THUS ſayeth the Lord God: the dore of the ynnermer courte towarde the Eaſte/ſhal be ſhut the.vi.workynge dayes: but in the Sabboth and in the daye of the newe Moone, it ſhalbe opened. Then ſhal the prynce come vnder the dore porche/and ſtande ſtyll without by the dore cheke. So the preſtes ſhal offre vp his burnt & healthofferynges. And he ſhall worſhyppe at the dore poſte, and go hys waye forth agayne: but the dore ſhall nomore be ſhut tyll the euenynge. On the ſame maner ſhall the people of the lande alſo do theyr worſhyppe before the Lorde / with out thys dore vpon the Sabbathes and newe/Moones. Thys B is nowe the burntofferynge/that the prynce ſhall brynge vnto the LORDE vpon the Sabboth: ſyxe lambes without blemyſh/ and a ram without blemyſh/and an Ephah for a meatoffrynge/with the ram. As for lambes/he may geue as many meatoffrynges to them/as he wyll/and an Hyn of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth/ it ſhal be a yong bullocke without blemyſh/ſyxe lambes and a ram alſo without blemyſh. With the bullocke he ſhall geue an Ephah / and with the ram an Ephah alſo for a meate offering: but to the lambes, C what he maye come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. When the Prynce commeth/he ſhall go vnder the dore porche/and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lord in the hyghe ſolempne feaſte, as many as come in by the North dore to do worſhyppe/ ſhall go out agayne at the Southe dore. And they that come in at ẏ South dore, ſhal go forthe agayne at the Northe dore. There ſhall none go out at the dore where he came in, but ſhal go ryght forthe ouer on the other ſyde/ and the Prynce ſhall go in and out amonge them.

D Upon the ſolempne and hye feaſt dayes, this ſhalbe the meat offerynge: An Epha to a bullocke and an Epha to a ram, and to the lambes: as many as he wyl, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Nowe when the Prynce bryngeth a burnt offerynge or an healthofferyng with a fre wyl vnto the Lorde, the eaſt dore ſhalbe opened vnto him, that he may do with his burnt and healthofferynges, as he doth vpon the Sabboth, and when he goeth forth, the dore ſhal be ſhut after him agayne. He ſhall daylye brynge vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yeare olde without blemyſhe for a burnte offeryng: this ſhall he do euery mornynge. And for a meatofferynge he ſhall geue E the ſyxt parte of an Epha, and the thyrde parte of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery mornynge. Yee, thys ſhalbe a daylye meatofferynge vnto the Lorde, for an euerlaſtynge ordinaunce: ⁊ thus ſhal the lambe, the meatofferynge ⁊ oyle be geuē euery mornynge, for a daylye burntofferynge.

Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde God: If the Prynce geue a gyfte vnto any of hys ſonnes, then ſhall it be hys ſonnes herytage perpetuall, that he maye poſſeſſe it. But If he wyll geue one of hys ſeruauntes ſome of ¶ hys herytage, it ſhall be hys ¶ to the * fre yeare, and then to returne agayne vnto the Leui.xxv.b Num.36.c F prince: for his herytage ſhalbe his ſõnes onely. * The Prynce alſo ſhall take none of the 3.Reg.21.a 2.Reg.12.b peoples enherytaunce, nor put them frome their poſſeſſion: but to his owne ſonnes ſhal he geue his poſſeſſion, that my people be not ſcatred abrode, but that euery man may haue his owne.

And he brought me thorow the entraunce at the ſyde of the dore to the habytacyon of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the preaſtes and ſtode towarde the Northe, and beholde, there was a place vpon the weſt ſyde, then ſayde he vnto me. This is the place/ where the preeſtes ſhall dyght the treſpace and ſyn offerynges/and bake the meate offerynges: that they nede not beare them into the outwarde courte/and ſo to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vttermoſte courte, rounde aboute al the foure corners. Beholde/ in euery corner of the ſore courte, there was yet a lytle courte. Yee/ in all the foure corners of the courte, there was made a lytle courte of .xl. cubites longe, and .xxx. cubytes broade: theſe foure lytle courtes were of one like meaſure, and there went a rydge wall rounde aboute them all foure, vnder the whiche there were harthes made rounde about. Then ſayde he vnto me: This is the kechyn/ where the mynyſters of the houſe ſhall dyght the ſlayne offerynges of the people.

¶ The vyſyon of the waters that come out of the Temple. The coaſtes of the lande of promeſſe, and the dyuiſyon therof by trybes.

CAPI, XLVII.

AFTER thys he brought me agayne A before the dore of the houſe: and beholde/there guſhed out waters from vnder the poſtes of the houſe eaſtwarde (for ẏ houſe ſtode towarde the eaſt) that ranne downe vpon the ryght ſyde of the houſe, whyche lyeth to the aulter ſouthward. Then caried he me out to the north dore, ⁊ brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vttermoſt dore ẏ turneth eaſtewarde. * Beholde, there came zacha.13. a and.xiiii. b forth the water vpon the ryght ſyde. Nowe whan the man that had the meterode in his hande wente vnto the eaſt dore, he meaſured a. M. cubytes, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euẽ to the ancles: ſo he meaſured yet a thouſande, and brought me thorowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet meaſured he a thouſande, ⁊ brought me thorow the water vnto the loynes. After thys B he meaſured a thouſande agayne, then was it ſuch a ryuer, that I myght not wade thorowe it: The water was ſo depe, that it was nedefull to haue ſwymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he ſayde vnto me: haſte thou ſene this/ O thou ſonne of man? and wyth that/he brought me to the ryuer bancke agayne.

Nowe when I came there, there ſtode many trees vpon either ſyde of the ryuer bancke. Then ſaid he vnto me: This water that floweth out towarde the Eaſte/ and runneth downe into the playne felde, commeth into the ſee: and from the ſee it runneth out, ⁊ maketh the waters whole. Yee, al that lyue and moue, where vnto this ryuer commeth, ſhal

By thys ryuer ſhall the fyſhers ſtande from Engaddy vnto En Eglaim, and there ſpred out their nettes: for there ſhalbe greate heapes of fyſhe, lyke as in the mayne ſee. As for his claye and pyttes, they ſhal not be whole/ for why/ it ſhalbe occupyed for ſalte.

By this ryuer vpon both the ſydes of the C ſhore/ there ſhall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whoſe leaues ſhall not fall of/ nether ſhall their frute peryſh: but euer be rype at theyr mouthes, for theyr water runneth out of theyr Sanctuary. His frute is good to eate/ and his leafe profytable for medycynes. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: Let this be the border, wherin ye ſhal deuyde the lãde vnto the .xii. trybes of Iſrael/ with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: * of the whiche lande I ſwore vnto your fathers/ that it ſhulde fall to your enherytaunce.

: Here endeth the Booke of the Prophete Ezechiell.

The Booke of the Prophete Daniell.

¶ The Prophete ſheweth the captiuite of Iehoakim kyng of Iuda. Of the chyldren that were in captiuitie. The kynge commaundeth to chose whiche of them ſhulde be taught the lernynge and language of Caldees. They are alowed the kynges lyuynge. Daniel abſteyneth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon.

CAPI. I.

A IN the thyrde yeare of the raigne of Iehoakin kynge of Iuda, came Nabuchodonoſor kynge of Babylon vnto Ieruſalem, and beſeged it * and the Lorde delyuered Iehoakim the kynge of Iuda in to hys hande/with certayne ornamentes of the houſe of God, whiche he caryed awaye vnto the lande of Sennar, to the houſe of his God and there he brought them into hys goddes treaſury. And the kynge ſpake vnto Aſphanas the chefe chamberlayne, that he ſhulde brynge hym certayne of the chyldren of Iſrael, that were come of the kynges ſede and of prynces, yonge ſpryngaldes without any blemyſh, but fayre & welfauoured, inſtructe in all wyſdome, connynge and vnderſtandynge: whiche were able to ſtande in the kynges palace, to rede and to lerne for to ſpeake Caldeyſh.

2.Par.36.a

B Unto theſe the kynge apoynted a certayne porcyon of his owne meate, and of the wyne whiche he dranke hym ſelfe, ſo to noryſh the thre yere: that afterward they myght ſtande before the kynge. Amonge theſe nowe were certayne of the chyldre of Iuda: namely Daniel/Ananias/Miſael and Azarias. Unto theſe the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel/Balthaſar: Ananias/Sidrach: Miſael/Miſach: & Azarias/Abednago. But Daniell was at a poynte wyth hym ſelfe/* that he wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meate/nor the wyne whyche he dronke. C And thus he deſyred of the chefe Chamberlayne, leſt he ſhuld defyle hym ſelf. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chefe chamberlayne, that he ſayde vnto hym: I am afrayed of my Lorde the kyng/whiche hath appoynted you your meate & drynke: leſt he ſpye your faces to be worſe lykyng then the other ſpryngaldes of your age, & ſo ye ſhal make me loſe my heade vnto the kynge.

Gene.43.c
Tobia.1.b
Iudit.12.a

Then Daniel anſwered Melaſar, whom the chefe chāberlayne had ſet ouer Daniell, Ananias/Miſael and Azarias, and ſayd: O proue but ten dayes with thy ſeruauntes/& let vs haue Potage to eate, and Water to drynck: then loke vpon our faces, and theirs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou ſeyſt/ſo deale wyth thy ſeruauntes. So he conſented to them in thys matter/and proued them tenne dayes. And after the tenne dayes, theyr faces were better lykynge and fatter/then all the yonge ſpryngaldes/whyche dyd eate of the KYNGES meate.

D Thus Melaſar toke awaye their meate and wyne/and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue nowe theſe foure ſpryngaldes connynge and lernyng in al ſcrypture and wyſdome: but vnto Danyell ſpecyally/he gaue vnderſtandyng of al viſyons and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred/that the kyng had appoynted to bryng in theſe yong ſpryngaldes vnto hym: the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonoſor/and the kynge commaned with them. But amonge them all were founde none ſuche as Daniel/Ananias/Miſael/and Azarias. Therfore ſtode they before the kynge/whiche in all wyſdome and matters of vnderſtandynge/that he enquered of them, founde the ten times better/then al the ſothſayers and charmers/that were in all hys realme. And Daniel abode ſtyll/vnto the fyrſt yeare of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonoſor. He calleth vnto hym ſothſayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame & the interpretacyon therof. They anſwere that they cannot ſhewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyſe men of Babylon to be ſlayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to ſolue the queſtyon. The Lorde openeth the myſtery vnto Danyel. Danyel is brought vnto the kynge/and ſheweth hym hys dreame and the interpretacyon therof. Of the euerlaſtynge kyngdome of Chryſte.

CAPI. II.

A IN THE ſeconde yeare of the raygne of Nabuchodonoſor/had Nabuchodonoſor a dreame/* where thorowe hys ſpreete was vexed/and hys ſlepe brake from hym. Then the kyng commaunded to call together all the ſothſayers/charmers/wytches and Caldees/for to ſhewe the king his dreame. So they came/and ſtode before the kynge. And the kynge ſayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, & my ſpreete was ſo troubled therwith/ꝧ I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Upō this the Caldees anſwered.

Upon this yͤ Caldees gaue anſwere befoꝛe

it is neyther the wyſe, the ſoꝛcerer, the charmer noꝛ the deuyl coniurer, that can certyfy the kynge of it. * Only God in heauen can Mat.xi.d.
open ſecretes, and he it is, that ſheweth the kyng Nabuchodonoſoꝛ what is foꝛ to come in the latter dayes.
Thy dꝛeame, and that which thou haſt ſene E in thyne head vpon thy bed, is this: O king thou dydeſt caſte in thy mynde, what ſhulde come herafter: So he that is yͤ opener of myſteryes, telleth the, what is foꝛ to come. As foꝛ me, this ſecrete is not ſhewed me, foꝛ eny wyſdome that I haue, moꝛe then any other lyuing: but only yͭ I myght ſhewe the king the interpꝛetacyon, ⁊ that he myght knowe yͤ thoughtes of his owne herte. Thou kyng ſaweſt, and beholde: there ſtode befoꝛe the a greate Image whoſe fygure was maruelous greate, and his vyſage grymme. The Image head was of fyne golde, his bꝛeſte ⁊ armes of ſyluer, hys body and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yꝛon/hys fete were parte of yꝛon/and parte of earth.

Thys

Mat. xxi. c. Luke. xx. b. * This thou ſaweſt, tyll the tyme that (without any handes) there was hewen of a ſtone which ſmote the Image vpon the fete that were bothe of yron & earth, and brake them to pouder: then was the yron/the erth the copper/the ſyluer/and golde/broken al together in peces/and became lyke the chaf of corne/that the wynde bloweth awaye frō the ſomer floores/that they can no more be founde. But the ſtone that ſmote the ymage became a greate mountayne/whiche fulfylleth the whole earthe. This is the dreame And nowe wyll we ſhewe before the kynge: what it meaneth.

F D. vi. b. * O kynge/thou arte a kynge of kynges: For the God of heuen hath geuen the a kyngdome/ryches, ſtrength: and maieſtye/ and hath delyuered the al thynges/that are amonge the chyldren of men: the beaſtes of the felde/and the foules vnder the Heuen/ and geuen the domynyon ouer them all. Thou arte that golden heade. After the there ſhall ryſe an other kyngdome, which ſhall be leſſe then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome ſhall be lyke copper/and haue domynacyon in all landes. The fourth kyngdome ſhall be as ſtronge as yron. For lyke as yron broſeth and breaketh all thynges. Ye, euen as yron beateth euery thyng downe ſo ſhall it beate downe and deſtroye.

Where as thou ſaweſt the fete and toes parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whiche neuertheles ſhall haue ſome of the yron grounde myxte with it, for ſo moche as thou haſte ſene the yron myxte with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron: and parte of claye/ſygnifyeth that it ſhall be a kyngdome partely ſtronge/and partely weake. And where as thou ſaweſt yron myxte with claye: they ſhall myngle them ſelues with the ſede of ſymple people/ and yet not continue one with an other lyke as yron wyll not be ſouldered with a potte ſharde.

G Esaye. ix. b In the dayes of theſe kynges, ſhall the God of heuen ſet vp an * euerlaſting kyngdome which ſhall not peryſhe, and his kyngdome ſhal not be geuen ouer to an other people: yee, the ſame ſhall breake and deſtroye all theſe kyngdomes/but it ſhall endure for euer.

And where as thou ſaweſt, that without eny handes there was cut out of ÿ * mount Hebr. xii. e Mat. xxi. e * a ſtone/whiche brake the yron, the copper the earth/the ſyluer, and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God ſhewed the kynge what wyll come after this. This is a true dreame, & the interpretacyon of it is ſure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonoſor * fell Act. xiiii. downe vpon his face, and bowed hym ſelfe vnto Danyell/and commaunded that they ſhulde offre meatoffrynges and ſwete odoures vnto him. The kyng anſwered Daniel, and ſayde: yee/of a trueth youre God is a God aboue all goddes/a Lorde aboue all kynges/and an opener of ſecretes: ſeynge thou canſt dyſcouer this myſterye. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many and greate gyftes.

Gen. xli. * He made him ruler of al the countrees of Babilon, and lorde of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Danyel intreated the kynge for Sidrach, Myſach and Abednago/ſo that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Danyel him ſelfe remained ſtyl in the court by the kynge.

¶ The kynge ſetteth vp a golden Image, whiche he commaundeth to be worſhypped. Sydrach, Myſach, and Abednago are accuſed, becauſe they deſpyſed the kynges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worſhyp the ymage. They refuſe to do it and are put into a burnynge ouen. By helpe in God they are delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonoſor confeſſeth the power of God after the ſyght of the myracle.

CAPI. III.

A NAbuchodonoſor the kynge cauſed a golden Image to be made: which was lx. cubytes hye/and ſyxe cubytes thycke. This he made to be ſet vp in ÿ felde of Dura in the lande of Babylon and ſent oute to gather together the Dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and offycers/the debytes and ſhreues, with all the rulers of the lande that they myght come to the dedycacyon of the Image whiche Nabuchodonoſor the kynge had ſet vp. So the Dukes/Lordes and nobles/the iudges and offycers/debytes and ſhreues with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycacynge of the Image, that Nabuchodonoſor the kynge had ſet vp.

Nowe when they ſtode before the Image, which Nabuchodonoſor ſet vp, ÿ bedil cried out with al his might: O ye people, kynreddes and tunges, to you be it ſayde: that whē ye heare the noyſe of the trompettes/which ſhalbe blowen/with the harpes/ſhawmes/ Pſalteries, Symphonyes and all maner of Muſike: ye fall downe and worſhipe ÿ golden Image, that Nabuchodonoſor the king hath ſet vp. Whoſo then falleth not downe and boweth hym ſelfe/ſhall euen the ſame houre be caſte into an hote burnynge ouen.

Therfore, when al the folcke herde the noiſe of the trõpettes that were blowen, with the harpes/ ſhawmes/ Pſalteryes/ Symphonies ⁊ al kinde of Melody/ thẽ al the people kynreddes ⁊ nacions fell downe, ⁊ bowed them ſelues vnto the golden Image/ that Nabuchodonoſor the kynge had ſet vp.

B Nowe were there certayne men of the Caldees/ that went euen then and accuſed the Iewes/ ⁊ ſayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonoſor: O king, god ſaue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beynge kynge haſt geuen a cõmaundemente/ that all men when they heare the noyſe of the trompettes, harpes/ ſhawmes/ pſalteryes/ ſymphonyes and all the other melodyes: ſhall fall downe and bowe them ſelues towarde the golden Image: whoſo then fell not downe and worſhypped not/ that he ſhulde be caſt into an hote burnyng ouen. Nowe are there certayne Iewes/ Dani.ii.g. * whom thou haſte ſet ouer the offyces of the lande of Babylon: namely/ Sydrache/ Myſache and Abednago. Theſe men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundement/ yee/ they wyll not ſerue thy goddes/ nor bow them ſelues to the golden Image that thou haſte ſet vp.

Then Nabuchodonoſor in a cruell wrathe and diſpleaſure, cõmaunded, that Sidrach Miſach and Abednago ſhulde be broughte vnto hym. So theſe men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonoſor ſpake vnto them/ and ſayde: what? O Sydrach Myſache and Abednago/ wyl not ye ſerue my goddes? nor bowe youre ſelues to the golden Image, that I haue ſet vp: wel, be redy hereafter when ye heare the noiſe of the trompettes blowe wyth the Harpes/ ſhawmes/ pſalteries, ſymphonyes ⁊ all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe, ⁊ worſhippe the Image which I haue made. But yf ye worſhyppe it not, ye ſhal be caſt immediatly into an hote burnyng ouen. Let ſe/ what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes? Sidrach, Miſach and Abednago anſwered the kynge, and ſayde: O Nabuchodonoſor we ought not to cõſent vnto the in this matter/ for why? oure God Rom,16.g whom we ſerue/ * is able to kepe vs from the hote burninge ouen (O kynge) and can ryght well delyuer vs out of thy handes.

And though he wyll not/ yet ſhalte thou C knowe (O kynge) that we wyll not ſerue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to the Image/ which thou haſte ſet vp. Then was Nabuchodonoſor full of indignacyon, ſo that the countenaũce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Miſach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaũded, yͭ the ouen ſhuld be made ſeuẽ tymes hoter, then it was wõte to be: ⁊ ſpake vnto the ſtrongeſt worthyes that were in his hoſt, for to bynde Sidrach, Miſach and Abednago, ⁊ to caſt them into the hote burnynge ouen.

So theſe men were bounde in theyr cotes hoſen/ ſhues wyth theyr other garmentes/ and caſte into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundemẽt was ſo ſtrayte, and the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach/ Miſach and Abednago/ the flamme of the fyre deſtroyed them. And theſe thre men Sidrach Miſach and Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beinge faſt bounde. Then Nabuchodonoſor the king marueled and ſtode vp in all haſt: he ſpake vnto hys councell and ſayde: dyd not ye caſte theſe thre men bounde into the fyre? They anſwered/ and ſayde vnto the kynge: Yee/ O kynge. He anſwered and ſayde: lo for all that/ yet do I ſe foure men goinge lowſe in the myddeſt of the fyre/ and nothynge corrupte: and the fourth is ☞ lyke an aungel to loke vpon. D Upon this went Nabuchodonoſor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he ſpake alſo and ſayde: O Sidrache/ Miſache and Abednago/ ye ſeruauntes of the hye God: go forth, and come hither. And ſo Sidrach, Miſache and Abednago wente oute of the fyre. Then the dukes Lordes, and nobles/ and the kynges councel came together to ſe theſe men, ⁊ vpon whom the fyre had no maner Esa.xliii.a of power in theyr bodyes: In ſo muche that the very heare of theyre head was not burnt, and theyr clothes vnchaunged: Yee/ there was no ſmell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then ſpake Nabuchodonoſor, and ſayd: Bleſſed be the God of Sidrach, Miſach ⁊ Psal.34.a. Dani.vi.b. Actes.xii.b. Abednago: * which hath ſent hys Angell/ and defended his ſeruauntes, that put their truſt in him: that altered the kynges commaundemente, and ieoperde theyr bodyes ther vpon: rather then they wolde ſerue or worſhyppe any other God, except theyr owne God only. Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tunges/ whiche ſpeake any blaſphemy agaynſt the God of Sidrach, Miſach ⁊ Abednago ſhall dye, and theyr houſes ſhall be prayſed: Becauſe, * there is no God that maye ſaue, Esai.44.b Osee.xiii.b. as this. So the kynge promoted Sydrach, Myſache/ and Abdenago/ in the lande of Babylon.

CAPI. IIII.

¶ Nabu

¶ Nabuchodonoſor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth it. Nabuchodonoſor is put out of his realme, and eateth with beaſtes. He confeſſeth the power of God, and is reſtored into hys kyngdome.

Dani. vi. c

N✝ Nabuchodonoſor kynge vnto al people, kynreddes and tunges that dwell vpon the whole earthe: peace be multyplyed among you. I thought it good to ſhewe the tokens and maruelous worckes / that the hye God hath wrought vpon me.

Pſal. cxv. b
Dani. vii. b
Luke. i. c.

O / howe greate are hys tokens / and howe mightie are his wonders? ✝ Hys kingdome is an euerlaſtyng kingdome, and his power laſteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodonoſor beynge at reſt in myne houſe, and floriſhynge in my palace / ſawe a dreame / whiche made me afrayed: and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bedde, with the vyſyons of myne heade / troubled me.

Dani. ii. a.

✝ Then ſent I out a cõmiſſion / that all they which were of wyſdome at Babylon ſhulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame. So there came the ſothſayers / charmers / Caldees and coniurers of deuels: to whom I tolde the dreame but what it betokened / they coulde not ſhew me: tyll at the laſte / there came one Daniel) otherwyſe called Balthazar / accordyng to the name of my God) whiche hath the ſpryte of the holy goddes / in him: to whom I told the dreame, ſayinge:

O Balthazar / thou prince of Sothſayers: For ſo muche as I knowe, that thou haſt the ſpryte of the holy Goddes and no ſecrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the vyſion of my dreame) that I haue ſene) maye ſygnyfye. I ſawe a vyſyon in my head vpon my bed: and beholde / there ſtode a tre vpon the grounde whiche was very hye / greate and myghtye / the heyghte reached vnto the heauen / and the bredthe extended to all the endes of the earthe: hys leaues were fayre / he had very much frute, ſo that euery man had ynough to eate therin.

The beaſtes of the felde had ſhadowes vnder it, and the foules of the aire dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly / all creatures fed of it. I ſawe in my head a viſion vpon my bed & beholde / a watcher came downe from heauen, & cryed myghtely, ſaying. Hewe downe the tre, breake of his braũches / ſhake of his leaues / and ſcatre his frute abrode: that all the beaſtes may get them away from vnder him, and the foules frõ his braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of his rote ſtyl in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playn felde, with cheynes of yron and ſtele. Wyth the dewe of heauen ſhall he be wet, & he ſhal haue hys part in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beaſtes.

That mans herte of hys ſhal be taken from him, and a beaſtes herte ſhall be geuen him tyll ſeuen yeare be come & gone vpon him. This erande of the watcher, is a comaũdement grounded and ſought out in the councell of him / that is moſt holy: to learne men for to vnderſtande, that the hieſt hath power ouer the kyndomes of men / and geueth them, to whom it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the very oute caſtes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kyng Nabuchodonoſor haue ſene. Therfore O Balthazar / tell thou me what it ſignifieth: for ſo much as al the wyſe men of my kyngdome are not able to ſhewe me / what it meaneth. But thou canſte do it / for the ſpryte of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whoſe name was Balthaſar) helde his peace by the ſpace of an houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kinge ſpake, & ſayde: O Balthazar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretaciõ therof feare yͤ. Balthazar, anſwered ſaying: O my Lorde, this dreame happẽ to thine enemies, & the interpretacyon to thyne aduerſaryes.

As for the tre that thou ſaweſt whiche was ſo great & myghtye / whoſe heyght reached vnto the heauen, and his bredth into all the worlde: whoſe leaues were fayre & the frute muche: vnder the whiche the beaſtes of the felde had their habitacyon, and vpon whoſe braunches the foules of the ayre dyd ſyt.

Euen thou (O kyng) art the tre / greate & ſtrong. Thy greatnes increaceth, and reacheth vnto the heauen ſo doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kyng ſawe a watcher euen an holy angell, that came downe from heauen: and ſayde: hewe downe the tre / and deſtroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earthe: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron and ſtele:

He ſhall be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parte ſhal be with the beaſtes of the felde / tyll ſeuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym: This (O kyng) is the interpretacyon, yee, it is the very deuyce of hym, that is hyeſt of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kynge.

Thou ſhalt be caſt out from men / and thy dwellyng ſhalbe with the beaſtes of yͤ felde: wyth graſſe ſhalte thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou muſt be wet wyth yͤ dewe of the heauen: yee, ſeuen yeares ſhall come, & go vpon the, tyll thou knowe, ✝ that the hyeſt hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & geueth the to whom he lyſt. Moreouer, where as it was ſayd, that the rote of the tree ſhuld be left ſtyl in the groũde: it betokeneth, yt thy kyngdome ſhal remayne whole vnto the, after thou haſt lerned to knowe, that ye power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kyng, be cõtent with my cõucell, that thou mayeſt lowſe thy ſinnes with ryghtuouſneſſe, * and thyne offences with mercy to poore people: for ſuche thynges ſhall prolonge thy peace. All theſe thynges touche the kynge Nabuchodonoſor. Eccle.19.b

F So after .xij. monethes, the kyng walked vp & downe in the palace of ye kyngdome of Babylon, and ſayde: This is the great cyte of Babylon, whiche I my ſelf (wt my power & ſtrẽgth) haue made a kinges courte, for the honour of my mageſty. Whyle theſe wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, ſayeng: O kyng Nabuchodonoſor, to ye be it ſpokẽ: Thy kingdome ſhall departe from the, thou ſhalt be caſt out of mens cõpany: thy dwellynge ſhalbe with the beſtes of the felde, ſo that thou ſhalt eate graſſe lyke as an oxe, tyl ſeuẽ yeares be come & gone ouer the: euen vntyll thou knoweſt/ yt the hyeſt hath power vpõ the kyngdomes of men, & that he may gyue thẽ, vnto whom it pleaſeth hym. The very ſame houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonoſor: ſo that he was caſt out of mens cõpany, & dyd eate graſſe lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauẽ, tyll his hearres were as great as Aegles fethers, & his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

G When this tyme was paſt, I Nabuchodonoſor lyft vp myne eyes vnto heauẽ, and myne vnderſtanding was reſtored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyeſt. I magnifyed and prayſed him that lyueth for euermore, * whoſe power endureth alway, and his kyngdome from one generacyon to another: in comparyſon of whom all they that dwell vpon the earthe/ are to be reputed as nothyng. Dani.iii.f.

Pſal.115.a * He handleth accordynge to his wyl amonge the powers of heuẽ and amonge the inhabytours of the earth: & there is none yt may reſyſt his hande/ or ſaye: what doeſt yu? Job.ix.b. * At ye ſame tyme was myne vnderſtanding geuen me agayne, and I was reſtored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignyte/ & to myne owne ſhape agayne. My greate eſtates and Prynces ſought vnto me: and I was ſet in my kyngdome agayne/ ſo that I had yet greater worſhyppe.

Then

Then dyd I Nabuchodonoſor, loue/ magnifye and prayſe the kyng of heauẽ: for all his worckes are true/ and his wayes ryght. As for thoſe that go on proudly, he is able to brynge them downe.

¶ Balthazar kynge of Babylon, abuſynge the veſſelles of the Temple, ſeyth an hande wrytynge in the wall. The Sothſayers called of the kynge, can not expounde the wrytynge. Daniell is called, whiche readeth it, and interpreteth it alſo. Balthaſar beyng ſlayne, Darius ſuccedeth in his rowme.

CAPI. V.

A KYNGE Balthazar made a greate Bancket to hys thouſande Lordes: wyth all theſe thouſande he made greate chere/ and when he was droncken wyth wyne, he commaunded to brynge hym the golden & ſyluer veſſels * whiche his father Nabuchodonoſor had takẽ out of the tẽple at Jeruſalem: that the kyng and his Lordes with his quene & concubynes myght drinke therout. 2.Par.36.c

So they brought the golden veſſell, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes houſe at Jeruſalẽ. Then the kynge and his Lordes with his quene & concubines dronck out of them. They droncke wyne, and prayſed their Idoles of golde, ſyluer/ copper, yrõ wodde and ſtone.

B In the very ſame houre there appeared fyngers/ as it had bene of a mans hãde wrytynge, ryght ouer agaynſte the candelſtycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: & the kyng ſawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaũged the kyng his countenaũce/ and his thoughtes troubled him, ſo that the ioyntes of his body ſhoke/ and hys knees ſmote one agaynſte the other. Jere.1.a Wherfore the kyng cryed myghtelye/ that they ſhulde brynge hym the Charmers/ Caldees and Coniurers of Deuylles. Daniel.ii.a The kynge ſpake alſo to the wyſe men of Babylon, and ſayde: Who ſo can rede this wrytyng/ and ſhewe me the playne meaning therof: ſhalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke/ and rule the thyrd parte of my kyngdome.

Upon this/ came al the kynges wyſe mẽ: but they coulde neyther rede ye wrytyng/ nor ſhewe the kyng what it ſignifyed. The was the kyng ſore afrayed, in ſo muche, yt hys colour chaũged/ & his Lordes were ſore vexed.

C So by reaſon of thys matter, that had happened to the kyng and his Lordes, ye Quene went vp her ſelf into the bancket houſe/ and ſpake vnto ye kyng, ſayinge: O kyng/ God ſaue thy lyfe for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the ſprete of the holy goddes within hym, * as it was ſene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderſtãdyng & wyſdome lyke the goddes. Ye the kyng Nabuchodonoſor thy father made this man chefe of ẏ ſothſayers/charmers, Caldees and deuyl cõiurers; becauſe that ſuche an aboundaunte ſprete, knowledge & wyſdome (to expounde dreames, to open ſecretes, & to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee, euen in Daniel, whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let this ſame Daniel be ſente for/and he ſhal tel what it meaneth.

Then was Daniell brought before the kyng. So the kyng ſpake vnto Daniel, and ſayde: Art thou that Daniel/one of the priſoners of Iuda, whom my father the kyng brought out of Iewry? I haue herde ſpeake of the/that thou haſt the ſprete of the holy goddes, experience and vnderſtandyng, and that there hath bene great wyſdome founde in ẏ.

Now haue there bene brought me, wyſe & cõnyng charmers/to reade thys wrytyng and to ſhewe me the meanyng therof: But they coulde not tel me/what this matter ſignifyed. Then hearde I ſay, that thou canſt expounde darcke thinges, and declare harde doutes. Well than/yf thou canſt reade thys wrytynge, and ſhewe me the meaninge therof: thou ſhalt be clothed wyth purple, haue a cheyne of golde about thy necke/and rule the thyrd part of my kyngdome.

4.Reg.v.b
Matth.x.a

Daniell anſwered, & ſayde before ẏ kyng: * As for thy rewardes, kepe thẽ to thy ſelf, or gyue thy rych gyftes to another: yet not theleſſe, I wyll rede ẏ wrytyng vnto the kyng/and ſhewe him ẏ interpretacyon therof.

Daniel.2.c

* O kyng, God the hyghest gaue vnto Nabuchodonoſor thy father, the dygnyte of a kyng/with worſhyppe & honour: ſo that all people kynredes & tunges ſtode in awe, & feare of hym, by reaſon of the hye eſtate, that he had lent him. For why/he ſlew whom he wolde, he ſmote, whom it pleaſed him. Againe: whõ he wolde, he ſet vp: and whom he lyſt, he put downe.

Dani.4.d.

* But becauſe his hert was ſo proude and his ſtomake ſet ſo faſt vnto wylfulnes: he was depoſed frõ his kyngely trone/and his mageſty was taken from him. He was ſhut out from among mẽ, his hert was lyke a beaſtes hert, and his dwellyng was wyth the wylde Aſſes: he was fayne to eate graſſe lyke an oxe/and his body was wet with the dewe of the heuẽ: tyl he knewe, that the hyeſt God had power vpon the kingdomes of mẽ and ſetteth ouer them, whom he lyſt.

F

And thou his ſonne (O Balthazar) for all this, haſt not ſubmytted thyne herte, though thou knewest al theſe thinges: but haſt magnyfied thy ſelfe aboue the Lorde of heauen/ſo that the veſſels of his houſe were brought before the: that thou, & thy Lordes with thy quene and concubynes, myght drincke wine therout: And haſt prayſed the Idoles of ſyluer and golde, copper and yron, of wod and ſtone which neyther ſe, heare nor vnderſtãd: As for the God * in whoſe hande conſyſteth the bredth and all thy wayes: thou haſte not loued hym.

Actu.17.a

Therfore is the palme of this hande ſente hyther from him, to token vp this wrytyng. And this is the ſcrypture, that is wryten vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacyon of the thynge is this: Mane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetell, thou art weyed in the balaunce, and art founde to lyght: Phares/thy kyngdome is delt in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perſes.

Then cõmaũded Balthazar, to cloth Daniell wyth purple, to hange a cheyne of gold aboute his necke, and to make a proclamacion concernyng hym: that he ſhulde be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngedome: * The very ſame nyght was Balthazar the kynge of the Caldees ſlayne/and * Darius out of Media toke in the kyngdome, beyng .lxij. yeare of age.

Dani.6.a

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the Lordes. The ymagination of an acte agaynſte Daniell. The proclamacion of the acte, whereof Daniel is accuſed vnto the kyng as a tranſgreſſour He is put into a denne of Lions by the cõmaundement of the kyng. He is delyuered by fayth in god. Daniels accuſars are put vnto the Lyons to be torne in ſonder. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnyfyeth the God of Daniel.

IT pleaſed Darius to ſet ouer his kyngdome an. C.&.xx. Lordes, which ſhulde be in al his kyngdome about. Aboue theſe he ſet thre Prynces (of whom Daniell was one) ẏ the Lordes myght geue accomptes vnto thẽ & the kyng to be vndiſeaſed.

But Daniel exceaded al theſe Prynces & lordes, for the ſprete of God was plentuous in hym: ſo that the kynge was mynded to ſet hym ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Prynces and Lordes ſought, to pycke out in Daniel ſome quarel agaynſt the kyngdome yet could they fynde none occaſion nor faute vpon him. For why/he was ſo faythful, that there was no blame nor dyſhoneſty founde in hym.

Then ſayde theſe men: we can get no quarell agaynſt thys Daniel, excepte it be in the law of his God. Upon this wẽt the Prynces and Lordes together vnto the kyng, & ſayde thus vnto him: kyng Darius/God ſaue thy lyfe for euer. Al the great eſtatꝭ of the realme as the Prynces, Dukes, Senatours & Judges, are determyned to put out a commaundement of the kynge, and to make a ſure ſtatute: namely, that who ſo deſyreth any petycion, either of any God or man (within this .xxx. dayes) except it be onely of the, O kyng: the ſame perſon may be caſt into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kynge, confyrme thou this ſtatute/and make a wrytynge: that the thynge which the Medes and Perſes haue ordeyned be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and confirmed it. Nowe when Daniell vnderſtode that the wrytynge was made/he wente into hys houſe: and the wyndowes of his wall towarde Jeruſalem ſtode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys petycion/and prayſed hys God/lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then theſe men made ſearche/& founde Daniell makynge his peticyon, & prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kyng, & ſpake before him concerning his commaundement/ſaying: O kyng/haſt thou not ſubſcribed the ſtatute/ẏ within .xxx. dayes who ſo requyreth his peticyon of any God or mā but onely of thy ſelfe/O kyng: he ſhalbe caſt into the denne of the Lyons? The kynge anſwered, & ſayde: yee/it is true. It muſt be as a lawe of the Medes and Perſes, that maye not be broken.

Then anſwered they, and ſayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the priſoners of Juda O kyng/regardeth nether ẏ nor thy ſtatute, that ẏ haſte made, but maketh his petycyon thre tymes a daye. When the kynge hearde theſe wordes/he was ſore greued/and wold haue excuſed Daniel/to delyuer him, & put of the matter/vnto the Sunne wet downe/to the intent that he myght ſaue hym.

Theſe men perceauyng ẏ kynges mynde ſayde vnto him: knowe this (O kynge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perſes is/ that ẏ cōmaundement & ſtatute which the kynge maketh/may not be altered. † Then ẏ kyng bad them brynge Daniel/and they caſt hym into the Lyons denne.

The kynge alſo ſpake vnto Daniell, and ſayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye ſerueſt/euen he ſhall defende the. And there was brought a ſtone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this ẏ kyng ſealed with his owne rynge/& with the ſygnet of his prynces, that the kynges cōmaundement concernyng Daniel/ſhulde not be broken.

So the kyng wente into his palace/ and kepte him ſober all nyght/ſo that there was no table ſpred before hym, neyther coulde he take any ſlepe. But by tymes in the mornyng at the breake of the daye/ the kynge aroſe/ and went in all haſte vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel, yee the kynge ſpake/and ſayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel/thou ſeruaunt of the lyuyng God/ is not thy God (whom thou alwaye ſerueſt) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Daniel ſayde vnto the kynge. O kynge/God ſaue thy lyfe for euer. * My God hathe ſente hys aungell, † whiche hath ſhut ẏ lyōs mouthes ſo that they myght not hurte me. For why? myne vngyltyneſſe is founde out before him. And as for ẏ, O kynge, I neuer offended ẏ.

Then was the kynge exceadyng glad & cōmaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurte was founde vpon hym. For he put his truſt in his God. And as for thoſe men whiche had accuſed Daniell, the kyng commaunded to bryng them, & to caſt thē in the Lyons denne, them, their chyldren & their wyues. So ẏ lyōs had the mayſtrye of them, and brake all their bones a ſonder/ or euer they came at the grounde.

Dani.14.a.

¶ A vyſyon of .iiii. beaſtes is ſhewed vnto Daniel. The vyſyon is interpreted of .iiii. kyngdomes of the worlde. Of the power and increaſe of Antichryſt. Of the euerlaſtyng kyngdome of Chriſte.

CAPI. VII.

I

IN the fyrſte yeare of Balthaſar kynge of Babylon/ ſawe Danyell a dreame/ and a vyſyon was in hys heade vpon hys bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote/and the ſomme of the matter is this, Daniel ſpake/ and ſayde: I ſawe in my vyſyon by nyght/and beholde:the foure wyndes of the heauen ſtroue vpon the ſee/and foure great beaſtes came vp from the ſee one vnlyke another.

Iere.4.a.b Ezech.1.b. and.x.b. Ezech.17.a The fyrſt was as * a lyon, and yet had he * Aegles wynges. I ſawe, that his wynges were pluckte from him, and he taken awaye from the earthe: that he ſtode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was geuen hym a mans herte.

B Prou.28.c. Beholde, ẏ ſeconde beaſt was lyke a * beare & ſtode vpon the one ſyde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had.iii.great longe teeth/& it was ſayde vnto him. Aryſe, eate vp much fleſh. Then I loked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leoparde:this had wynges as a foule, * euen foure vpon the backe. Daniel.8.b 8.xi.a 1.Mac.1.a. This beaſt had foure heades, and there was power geuen him. After this I ſawe in a viſyon by nyght, and beholde the fourth beaſt was grymme and horrible/and maruelous ſtronge. It had great yron teeth, it deuoured and deſtroyed, & ſtamped the reſydue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beaſtes ẏ were before it:for it had * ten hornes/ Apoca.13.a c whereof I toke good hede.

C And beholde, there came vp amõg them, another lytle horne, before whom there were thre of the fyrſt hornes pluckte awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth ſpeakynge preſumptuous thynges. Apoca.i.c. iiii.a.xx.b Daniel.x.a * I loked tyll the ſeates were prepared, and tyl ẏ olde aged ſat him downe. His clothyng was as whyte as ſnowe, and the heeres of hys heade lyke the pure wol. Hys trone was lyke the fyrye flame, and hys wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forth a fyrye Apoca.v.b ſtreame, & went out from him. * A thouſãde tymes a thouſande ſerued hym. x.M. tymes ten thouſande ſtode before him. The iudgement was ſet/and the bokes opened. Then toke I hede there vnto, becauſe of the voyce of the proude wordes, whiche ẏ horne ſpake. I behelde/tyl the beaſte was ſlayne, and his Math.25.b Apoca.19.b xx.c. body deſtroyed, & geuen ouer to be brent in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beaſtes alſo it was taken awaye/ but their lyues were prolonged for a tyme and ſeaſon. I ſawe in Mat.viii.c Acte.1.b Apoca.1.a a vyſion by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the ſonne of a man, whiche went vnto the olde aged/ before whom they brought him: Then gaue Philip.2.a he him power & dignite regall, that all people tribes and tonges ſhulde ſerue him. & hys Math.28.c Iohn.xii.d power is an euerlaſtynge power, which ſhal neuer be put downe:& his kyngdome endu- Dan.14.f reth vncorrupte. My herte was vexed, * & I Daniel had a troubled ſprete within me, & the viſiõs of my heade made me afrayed:tyl I gat me vnto one of them that ſtode by, to knowe the trueth, concernyng all theſe thinges. So he tolde me, & made me vnderſtande the interpretacyon of theſe thinges.

These foure greate beaſtes/are foure kynges whiche ſhall aryſe out of the earth, E These ſhall take in ẏ kingdome of the ſaintſ of the moſt hyeſt/ and poſſeſſe it ſtyll more & more for a longe ſeaſon. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth, concernynge ẏ fourth beaſt, which was ſo farre vnlyke the other beaſtes, & ſo horrible: whoſe teeth were of yron/and his nayles of braſſe: which deuoured and deſtroyed, & ſtãped the reſydue vnder hys fete. I deſyre alſo to knowe the trueth/as touchynge ẏ x ten hornes that he had vpon his head, & thys other whiche came vp afterwarde/ before whoſe face there fell downe thre: whiche horne had eyes and mouth that ſpake preſumptuous thinges/and loked wyth a grymmer viſage then his felowes. I beheld, & the ſame horne F made batayle agaynſt the ſayntes, yee and gat the vyctory of them: vntyl the tyme that the olde aged came/ that the iudgemẽt was geuen to the chefeſt ſayntes:and tyl the tyme that ẏ ſayncts had the kyngdome in poſſeſſion. He gaue me this anſwere: That fourth beaſt ſhalbe ẏ fourth kyngdome vpon earth it ſhalbe more then all other kyngdomes, it ſhall deuoure/treade downe, and deſtroy al other landes.

* The ten hornes/are ten kynges, ẏ ſhall aryſe out of ẏ kyngdome, after whom there G ſhall ſtande vp another, which ſhalbe greater then ẏ fyrſt. He ſhal ſubdue thre kynges, and ſhall ſpeake wordes agaynſte the hyeſt of all: he ſhall deſtroye the Sayntes of the moſt hyeſt, & and thynke that he may chaũge tymes and lawes. They ſhalbe geuen vnder his power/ & vntyll a tyme/two tymes, and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement ſhalbe kepte/ſo that his power ſhalbe takẽ from him, for he ſhall be deſtroyed/and peryſhe at the laſt. As for the kyngdome/ power/ and all myght that is vnder ẏ heuen: it ſhalbe geuen to the holy people of the moſt hyeſt, & whoſe kyngdome is euerlaſtynge: yee all powers ſhall ſerue & obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles, I Danyel was ſo vexed in my thoughtes/that my countenaunce chaũged & but the wordes I kepte ſtyll in my herte.

¶ A viſyon of a ſtryfe betwene a ramme and an he goate. The vnderſtandynge of the viſyon is of the batall betwene the kynge of Perſia and the kynge of the Grekes. Of the ſhameleſſe kynge Antiochus.

CAPI. VIII.

A IN the thyrde yeare of the raygne of kyng Balthazar, there apeared a vyſion vnto me Daniel, after that I had ſene the * fyrſt. I ſawe in a viſion (& when I ſawe it, I was at Suſis in the chefe cytie, whiche lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the vyſyon/me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulai.

Dan.vii.a.
Gen.x.d.
[illegible]

Then I loked vp/and ſawe: and beholde there ſtode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and theſe hornes were hye/but one was hyer then another, & the hyeſt came vp laſte. I ſawe that thys ramme puſhed with hys hornes agaynſte the weſt, agaynſt the north, and agaynſte the ſouth: ſo that no beaſtes myght ſtāde before hym, nor defende the frō hys power; but he dyd as him lyſted, B and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goate from the weſt ouer the whole earth, and touched nat the grounde.

The goate had a meruelus goodly horne betwyxte his eyes, & came vnto the ramme, that had the two hornes (whom I had ſene afore by thy ryuer ſyde) and ranne fearcely vpō him with his might. I ſawe him drawe nye vnto the ramme, beyng very fearce vpō hym: yee, he gaue him ſuche a ſtroke, that he C brake is two hornes: Neyther had the rāme ſo much ſtrength as to ſtāde before him: but he caſte hym downe, troade hym vnder hys fete: & no man was able to delyuer the rāme out of hys power.

The goate waxed exceadynge greate/ and when he was at the ſtrongeſt, his great horne was broken alſo. * Then grewe there other foure ſuch lyke in the ſteade, towarde the .iiii. wyndes of the heauē. Yee, out of one of the leaſt of theſe hornes, there came vp yet another horne/which waxed meruelous great: towarde the ſouth/towarde the eaſt, and towarde the fayre pleaſaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hooſt of heauen, wherof it dyd caſt ſome downe to the grounde, and of the ſtarres alſo/and trode them vnder fete.

Dan.vii.a.

Yee, it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hooſt, from whom the dayly offeringe was taken, & the place of his Sanctuary caſten downe. And a certayne ſeaſon was geuen vnto it, agaynſte the dayly offerynge (becauſe of wyckedneſſe) that it myght caſte downe the veryte to the grounde/ and ſo to D proſpere in al thynges, that it wente about.

Upon this I herde one of the ſayntes ſpeakynge, whiche ſaynte ſayde vnto one that aſked this queſtion. Howe longe ſhall thys vyſyon of the dayly ſacryfyce and of the waſtyng abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power ſhal ſo be troden vnder fote. And he anſwered hym: Unto the euenynge and the mornynge, euen two thouſande & thre hundreth dayes: then ſhall the Sanctuary be clenſed agayne.

Nowe whē I Daniel had ſene this viſiō, E & ſought for the vnderſtādyng of it: beholde, there ſtode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I harde a mans voyce in ẏ ryuer of Ulay, which cryed, and ſayd: O Gabriel, make this man vnderſtande the viſiō. So he came, & ſtode by me. But I was afrayed at his cōmynge, & fell downe vpon my face.

Then ſayde he vnto me/ O thou ſonne of man/marke well/for in the laſte tyme ſhall this vyſyon be fulfylled. Nowe as he was ſpeakynge vnto me, I waxed faynte, ſo that I ſuncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and ſet me vp agayne, ſayinge: Beholde, I wyll ſhewe the/what ſhal happen in the laſt wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it ſhalbe fulfylled.

The ramme which thou ſaweſt with the two hornes/is the kynge of the Medes and Perſes; but the goate is the kinge of Grekelande: the greate horne that ſtode betwyxte his eyes/that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other roſe vp in the ſteade: it ſignifieth/that out of this people ſhall ſtande vp * foure kyngdomes/but not ſo myghtye as it. 1.Mac.1.a.

F After theſe kingdomes (whyle vngodlyneſſe is a growing) there ſhal aryſe a kynge of an vnſhamefaſt face/whiche ſhalbe wyſe in darcke ſpeakynges.

He ſhalbe myghtye and ſtronge/ but nat in his owne ſtrēgth. He ſhall deſtroye aboue meaſure/and all that he goeth aboute ſhall proſpere: he ſhall ſleye the ſtronge and holy people. And thorowe his craftynes/falſhed ſhall proſpere in his hande, his herte ſhalbe proude, and many one ſhall he put to death in his welthyneſſe. He ſhal ſtāde vp agaynſt the Prynce of Prynces, * but he ſhalbe deſtroyed without hande. And thys vyſyon that is ſhewed vnto the, is as ſure as the euenynge and the mornynge. * Therfore wryte thou vpō this ſight, for it wylbe longe or it come to paſſe.

CAPI. X.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Perſia, there was ſhewed vnto Daniel (other wyſe called Balthaſar) a matter, yee, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderſtode the matter well, and perceaued what the vyſyon was. At the ſame tyme/ I Daniel mourned for the ſpace of thre wekes, ſo that I had no luſt to eate brede: as for fleſhe and wyne there came none within my mouth: No, I dyd nat ones anoynte my ſelfe, tyll the whole thre wekes were out.

Upon the.xxiiij. daye of the fyrſt moneth, I was by the greate floude/ called Tygris, * I lyfte vp myne eyes/ & loked: & beholde/ a man clothed in lynen/ whoſe loynes were gyrded vp wt fyne golde of Araby: hys body was lyke the Chryſolite ſtone, his face (to loke vpõ) was lyke lyghtenyng, his eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes & fete were lyke B fayre glyſtering metal, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

Dani.iii.c. Apoc.1.d.

* I Daniel alone ſawe this vyſion, & the men that were with me/ ſawe it nat: but a greate fearfulneſſe fel vpon thẽ, ſo that they fled awaye/ and hyd thẽ ſelues. I was lefte there my ſelfe alone, and ſawe this great vyſyon/ ſo longe tyll there remayned nomore ſtrength within me: yee, I loſte my coloure clene/ I waſted awaye/ & my ſtrength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes and as ſoone as I harde it/ faynteneſſe came vpõ me/ and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, which ſet me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my handes, ſayinge vnto me. * O Daniel / thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes/ that I ſhall ſaye vnto the, and ſtande ryght vp, for vnto the am I nowe ſent.

A AND in ÿ firſt yeare of Darius of Meden, I ſtode by hym, to comforte hym, and to ſtrength him, and nowe wyl I ſhewe the trueth. Beholde/there ſhall ſtande vp yet thre kynges in Perſia, but the forth ſhal be farre rycher then they all. And whē he is in the cheſeſt power of hys ryches / he ſhall prouoke euery man agaynſte the reame of Grekelande. * Then ſhall there aryſe yet a myghtye kynge/that ſhall rule with greate dominion/and do what hym lyſt. * And as ſoone as his kyngdome cometh vp/ it ſhalbe deſtroyed / & deuyded towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, ſhal nat haue ſuche power and dominion as he: but his kyngdome ſhalbe ſcatred, yee, euen among other then thoſe. And the kynge of the ſouth ſhalbe myghtyer, thē his other prynces. Agaynſt hym there ſhall one make hym ſelfe ſtronge, and ſhall rule his domynion with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they ſhalbe ioyned together / and the kynges daughter of B the ſouth ſhal come to the kyng of ÿ North, for to make frendſhyppe, but ſhe ſhal nat optayne the power of that arme/neyther ſhall ſhe be able to endure thorow his might: but ſhe, and ſuch as brought her (yee and he that begat her/and comforted her for his tyme) ſhalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote/there ſhall one ſtande vp in hys ſteade: which with power of armes ſhall go thorowe the kynges lande of the north/and handle hym accordynge to his ſtrength. As for theyr Idols & prynces/ with theyr coſtly Iewels of golde & ſyluer/he ſhal cary them awaye captyues into Egypte / and he ſhall preuayle agaynſt the kynge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the ſouth/he ſhalbe fayne to turne agayne into his owne lande. Wherfore his ſonnes ſhalbe diſpleaſed/ and ſhal gather together a myghtye greate hooſte of people: and one of them ſhall come / and go thorowe lyke a water flowde: then ſhall he returne / and go forth with defyinge & boaſtynge vnto hys owne lande.

Then the kynge of the ſouth ſhalbe angry and ſhall come forth to fyght agaynſte the kynge of the north: yee, he ſhall brynge a greate multitude of people together, and C a greate heape ſhalbe geuen into his hande: theſe ſhal he cary awaye with greate pryde, for ſo muche as he hath caſt downe ſo many thouſandes / neuertheles/ he ſhall nat preuayle. For the kynge of the north ſhal gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore/and come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeares) with a myghtye hooſt and exceadynge greate good.

At the ſame tyme there ſhall many ſtāde vp agaynſte the kynge of the ſouth/ſo that the wycked chyldren of thy people alſo ſhal exalte them ſelues (to fulfyll the viſion) and then fall. So the kynge of the north ſhall come to laye ſege / and to take the ſtronge fenſed cyties: And the power of them of the ſouth ſhal nat be able to abyde him/and the beſt men of the people ſhall nat be ſo ſtrōge, as to reſyſt hym. Shortely/when he commeth/he ſhall handle him as he lyſt/and no man ſhalbe ſo hardy as to ſtande agaynſte hym. He ſhall ſtande in the pleaſaunt countre / whiche thorowe hym ſhalbe deſtroyed. He ſhall ſet hys face with all hys power to optayne hys kyngdome / and to be lyke it. Yee, that ſhall he do, and geue hym vnto the daughters amōge women/to deſtroye him. But he ſhall fayle/neyther ſhall he optayne hys purpoſe. After thys ſhall he ſet hys face vnto the Iles/and take many of them. A prynce ſhall ſtoppe hym, to do hym a ſhame, beſyde the confuſyon that els ſhal come vnto hym. D Thus ſhall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, ſtomble and fal, and be nomore founde: ſo he that came vpon him and dyd hym vyolence/ſhall ſtande in his place, and haue a pleaſaunte kyngdome: and after fewe dayes he ſhalbe deſtroyed/and that neyther in wrath, nor in battel. In hys ſteade there ſhal aryſe a vyle perſō/nat holden worthy of a kynges dygnyte: this ſhall come in craftely, & optayne the kyngdome with fayre wordes: he ſhall fyght agaynſte the armes of ÿ myghtye (and deſtroye thē) yee, and againſt the prynce of the couenaūt.

So after that he hathe taken truce with hym, he ſhall handle dyſceatfully: that he may get vp, and ouercome him with a ſmal flocke: and ſo with craftyneſſe to get hym to the fatteſt place of the lande, and to deale E other wyſe, thē eyther his fathers or graūdfathers dyd. For he ſhall deſtroye ÿ thynge, that they had robbed and ſpoyled, yee, and all theyr ſubſtaunce: ymagenynge thoughtes agaynſt the ſtronge holdes/and that for a tyme. Hys power and harte ſhalbe ſtyrred vp with a greate armye agaynſt the kynge of the ſouth where thorowe the kynge of the ſouth ſhalbe moued then vnto batell, with a great & a myghty hooſt alſo. Neuertheleſſe, he ſhall nat be able to ſtāde, for they ſhall conſpyre agaynſte hym. Yee, they that eate of his meate ſhal hurte hym: ſo that his hooſt ſhall fall/and many be ſlayne downe.

Theſe two kynges ſhalbe mynded to do myſchefe, and talke of diſceyte at one table: but they ſhall not proſpere, for why/the ende ſhall not come yet, vnto the tyme apoynted. * Then ſhall he go home agayne into his owne lande with great good, & ſet his herte agaynſt the holy couenaunt, he ſhalbe buſy agaynſt it, & then returne home. At the tyme apoynted he ſhal come agayne, & go toward the South. So ſhall it happen otherwyſe then at the fyrſt, yet ones agayne. And why? * the ſhippes of Cithim ſhal come vpon him that he may be ſmytẽ and turne agayne: that he may take indignacyon agaynſt the couenaunt of holyneſſe, to medle agaynſt it. Yee, he ſhal turne him/and drawe ſuch vnto him as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He ſhal ſet myghty men to vnhalowe the Sanctuary of ſtrẽgth, to put downe the dayly offering, and to ſet vp the abhomynable deſolacion. And ſuche as breke the couenaũt ſhall he flattre with fayre wordes. But the people that wyl knowe their God, ſhal haue the ouerhande and proſpere. Thoſe alſo that haue vnderſtanding among the people ſhal enfourme the multitude: and for a longe ſeaſon, they ſhalbe perſecuted with ſwerd, with fyre, with captiuite & with the takyng away of theyr goodes. Nowe whẽ they fall, they ſhalbe ſet vp with a lytle helpe: but many ſhal cleue vnto them faynedly.

The kyng ſhall do what him lyſt * he ſhall exalte and magnyfie him ſelfe agaynſt all that is God. Yee, he ſhall ſpeake marueylous thinges agaynſt the God of al goddes wherin he ſhall proſpere, ſo longe tyll the * wrath be fulfylled, for the concluſion is deuiſed alredy. He ſhall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his luſt ſhalbe vpon wemen, yee/he ſhal not care for any God, for he ſhall magnyfie him ſelfe aboue all. The Booke of the Prophete Oſeas.

¶ The tyme wherin Oſeas prophecyed. Oſeas by takyng an harlot to his wyfe, fygureth the Idolatrye of the people. The deſtruccyon of the offſprynge of Iehu, and of the Iſraelites, is prophecyed.

CAPI. I.

A THis is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Oſeas the ſonne of Beery * in þ dayes of Oſeas, Ioathan/ Ahas & Jezekias kynges of Iuda: in the tyme of Ierobo͞a the ſōne of Ioas kynge of Iſrael. 4. Re. xv. a. and. xvi. a.

☞ Fyrſt, when the Lorde ſpake vnto Oſeas ☞ he ſayde vnto him. * Go thy waye/ take an harlot to thy wyfe/ and get chyldren by her: for the lande hath cōmytted great whoredome agaynſt the Lorde. Leui. xxi. b. Ezec. 44. d. So he wente/ & toke Gomer the daughter of Deblaim: whiche conceyued, and brought forth a ſonne. And the Lorde ſayd vnto him: cal hys name Ieſraell, for * ☞ I wyll ſhortly auenge the bloude of * Ieſrael vpon the houſe of Iehu, and wyll brynge the kyngdome of the houſe of Iſrael to an ende. ☞ 4. Reg. 15. a. & 17. a. 10. b. 3. Reg. xxi. b The wyll I breake the bowe of Iſrael/ in the valley of Ieſrael.

She conceyued yet agayne, and bare a doughter. And he ſayde vnto hym. Call her name. Loruhamah (that is/ not optaynynge mercy): for I wyll haue no pitye vpon the houſe of Iſrael, but forget them/ & put them cleane out of remēbraunce. Neuertheleſſe/ 4. Reg. 17. a. B I wyl haue mercy vpon the houſe of Iuda, & wyll ſaue them, euen thorowe þ Lord their God. Gen. 49. b. 4. Re. xix. e. But I wyll not delyuer them thorowe any bowe, ſwearde/ batell/ horſes or horſmē.

C Nowe, when ſhe had weaned Loruhamah ſhe conceyued agayne & bare a ſonne. Then ſayde he: cal his name/ Lo amy. For why? ye are not my people/ therfore wyll not I be yours. And though the nombre of the chyldren of Iſrael be as the ſande of the ſee/ whiche can neyther be meaſured nor tolde: Roma. ix. c. yet in the place where it is ſayde vnto them: ye bē not my people: euen there ſhall it be thus reported of thē * they be the chyldren of the lyuyng God. Iohn. i. b. Ezech. 37. a. Then ſhal the chyldrē of Iuda and the chyldren of Iſrael be gathered together agayne & choſe them ſelues one head and then departe out of the lande: for greate ſhalbe the day of Iſrael.

¶ The people is called vnto repentaunce.

CAPI. II.

I TEll youre brethren, that they are my people: and youre ſyſterns, that they haue optayned mercy. As for ☞ your mother/ ye ſhall chyde with her/ & reproue her * Iere. iii. a. for ſhe is not my wyfe, neyther am I her huſbande/ oneleſſe ſhe put awaye her whoredome out of my ſyght/ & her aduoutry from her breſtes. If no I ſhall ſtryppe her naked, & ſet her euen as ſhe came into the worlde: yee Ezec. xvi. e. I ſhall lay her waſt, & make her lyke a wyldernes/ and ſleye her for thyrſt. I ſhall haue no pite alſo vpon her chyldrē: for they be the chyldren of fornicacion. Iohn. i. b.

Their mother hath broken her wedlocke, & ſhe that bare them * is come to confuſyon/ 4. Re. 17. a. For ſhe ſayd: ☞ I wyl go after my louers/ ☞ B that geue me my water & my bred, my woll & flaxe/ my oyle and my drynke. But I wyll hedge her way with thornes/ and ſtoppe it/ that ſhe ſhall not fynde her foteſteppes: and though ſhe rūne after her louers, yet ſhal ſhe not get them: ſhe ſhal ſeke thē/ but not fynde them. * Then ſhall ſhe ſaye: well/ I wyll go Leuit. xvi. turne agayne to my fyrſt houſbande/ for at that tyme was I better at eaſe, then nowe. But this wolde ſhe not knowe/ where as I yet gaue her corne/ wyne, oyle/ ſiluer, & gold * whiche ſhe hath hanged vpon Baal. Ezec. xvi.

☞ Wherfore, ☞ nowe wyll I go take my corne & wyne agayne in their ſeaſon, and ſet agayne my woll and my flax/ which I gaue her/to couer her ſhame. ‡ And nowe wyll I diſcouer her foolyſhneſſe, euen in the ſyght of her louers, & no man ſhall delyuer her out of my hãdes. C Morouer, I wyll take awaye al her myrth ‡ her holy dayes, her newmoones, her Sabbathes and all her ſolẽpne feaſtes: I wyl deſtroye her vyneyardes & fygge trees, thoughe ſhe ſayeth: lo, here are my rewardes, ỹ my louers haue geuen me. I wyll make it a wodde, and the wylde beaſtes ſhal eate it vp. I wyll puniſh her alſo for ỹ dayes of Baal, ‡ wherin ſhe cenſed hym, deckynge him with her earinges and cheynes: whẽ ſhe folowed her louers/and forgat me / ſayeth the Lorde.

Wherfore beholde, I wyl cal her agayne bryng her into a wyldernesse, & ſpeake frendly vnto her: there wyll I geue her, her vyneyardes agayne, D yee & the ‡ valey of Achor alſo to ſhewe her hope & comforte. Then ſhall ſhe ſynge there, ‡ as in the tyme of her youth and ‡ lyke as in the daye, when ſhe came out of the lande of Egypt. Then (ſayeth ỹ Lorde) ſhe ſhall ſaye vnto me: (O my houſbande) & ſhal call me nomore Baal / for I wyll take awaye thoſe names of Baal frõ her mouth/ yee/ſhe ſhal neuer remẽbre their names any more. ‡ Thẽ wyl I make a couenaunte with them, with the wylde beaſtes, with the foules of the ayre, & with euery thynge that crepeth vpon the earth.

‡ As for bowe, ſwerde and batel / I wyll deſtroy ſuche out of ỹ lande, & wyl make the to ſlepe ſafely. ‡ Thus wyll I marye the vnto myne owne ſelfe for euermore: yee, euẽ to my ſelfe wyl I mary the/in ryghteouſneſſe, in equyte, in louynge kyndneſſe and mercy. In fayth alſo wyl I mary the vnto my ſelfe and thou ſhalt knowe the Lord. At the ſame tyme wyll I ſhewe my ſelfe frendly and gracious vnto the heauens, ſayeth the Lorde: & the heauens ſhal helpe the earth, & the earth ſhall helpe the corne/wyne/and oyle, & they ſhal helpe Jeſrael. ‡ I wyl ſowe them vpon earth, for a ſede to myne owne ſelfe, ‡ & wyll haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy. And to them which were not my people / I wyl ſaye: thou arte my people and he ſhal ſaye: thou arte my God.

¶ Of the loue of God towarde the people.

CAPI. III.

A Then ſayde the Lord to me: ‡ Go yet thy waye and loue an aduouterous woman / whom thy nyeghboure loueth/as the Lorde doth the chyldren of Iſrael: howe be it they haue reſpecte to ſtraunge goddes, ‡ & loue the wyne kannes. ☞ So I gather her for .xv. ſyluerlinges, and for an Homer, & an halfe of barlye, & ſayd vnto her: Thou ſhalt byde with me a long ſeaſon, but ſe that thou playeſt not ỹ harlot, & loke ỹ medle wt none other mã, & then wyll I kepe my ſelfe for the.

B ‡ Thus the chyldren of Iſraell ſhal ſyt a great whyle without kyng and prince, without offerynge and aulter, without preſte & reuelacyon. But afterwarde ſhal the chyldren of Iſrael conuerte, and ſeke the Lorde their God, & ‡ Dauid their kynge: & in the latter dayes they ſhall worſhyppe the Lorde, & hys louynge kyndneſſe.

¶ A cõplaynt agaynſt the people & the preſtes of Iſrael.

CAPI. IIII.

A Heare the worde of ỹ Lorde, O ye chyldren of Iſraell. For the Lorde muſte puniſh thẽ, that dwel in the lande. And why? There is no faythfulneſſe, there is no mercy there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but ſwerynge, lyeng, manſlaughter/ theft & aduoutry haue gotten the ouerhande, & one bloudgiltines foloweth another. Therfore ſhal the land be in a miſerable caſe, & al they that dwel therin/ſhal mourne. The beaſtes in the felde, the foules in the ayre/& the fiſhes in the ſee ſhal dye. Yet is there none/ỹ wyl chaſten nor reproue another. ‡ The preaſtes which ſhuld refourme other mẽ/are become lyke the people.

B Therfore ſtombleſt thou in the daye tyme & the prophet wt the in ỹ nyght. I wyl brynge thy mother to ſilence, and why? ‡ my people peryſh, becauſe they haue no knoledge. Seynge then ỹ thou haſt refuſed vnderſtãdyng therfore wyll I refuſe the alſo: ſo that thou ſhalt nomore be my preſte. And for ſo muche as thou haſt forgottẽ ỹ lawe of thy God, I wyl alſo forget thy chyldren. The more they increaſed in the multytude, ỹ more they ſynned agaynſt me, therfore wyl I chaunge their honoure into ſhame. ‡ They eate vp ỹ ſynnes of my people, and corage them in theyr wickednes. ‡ Thus ỹ preſt is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyl puniſh them for theyr wycked wayes, and rewarde thẽ accordinge to their owne ymaginacions. C ‡ They ſhal eate, and not haue ynough. They haue vſed whordome, therfore ſhal they not proſpere: and why? they haue forſaken the lorde and not regarded him.

Agaynſt the vnkyndneſſe of Iſrael.

CAPI. XI.

WHEN Iſrael was yong, I loued hym: and called my ſonne oute of the lande of Egypte. But the more they were called / the more they went backe/ offrynge vnto Idols and cenſyng Images. I lerned Ephraim to go/ and bare them in myne armes/ but they regarded not me, that wolde haue helped them. I led the with coardes of frendſhipe, & with bandes of loue: I was euen he, that layed the yoke vpon theyr neckes. I gaue theyr fodes my ſelfe that they ſhulde not go agayne into Egipt. And now is Aſſur their kynge. For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore ſhal the ſwearde begynne in their cytyes, the ſtoare that they haue layed vp/ ſhall be deſtroyed and eaten: and that becauſe of theyr owne ymagynacyons. My people hath no luſt to turne vnto me/ & their prophetes lay the yoke vpon them, but they eaſe them not of theyr burthen.

What greate thynges haue I geuen the, O Ephraim? how faythfully haue I defended the, O Iſrael? haue I dealt with the as with Adama? or haue I intreated the lyke Seboim? No, my hert is otherwiſe mynded. Yee, my mercy is to feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to deſtroye Ephraim in my wrothful diſpleaſure. For I am god and no mã, I am euen that holy one in the myddeſt of the/ though I came not within the cytye.

The Lorde roareth lyke a lyon, that they maye folowe hym: yee, as a lyon roareth he/ that they maye be afrayed lyke the chyldren of the ſee: that they maye be ſcatred awaye from Egypte, as men ſcatre byrdes: and frayed awaye (as doues vſe to be) from the Aſſyryans lande: and that becauſe I wolde haue them tary at home, ſayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goeth about me with lyes, and the houſe of Iſrael diſſembleth. Onely Iuda holdeth hym with God, and with the true holy thynges.

CAPI. XII.

Agaynſt the [illegible] of the people.

Ephraim is fed with wynde, and foloweth after the eaſt wynde: he is euer increaſynge lyes and deſtruccyon. They be confederate with the Aſſyrians, & theyr oyle is caryed into Egypte. The Lorde hathe a courte to holde with Iuda, and wyl puniſh Iacob. After theyr owne wayes and accordynge to theyr owne inuencyons, ſhall he recompenſe them. He toke his brother by the hele/ when he was yet in hys mothers wombe: and in hys ſtrength he wraſtled with God. He ſtroue with the aungell/ and gat the vyctorye: ſo that he prayed and deſyred hym. He founde him at Bethell/ and there he talketh with vs.

Yee the Lorde God of hooſtes/ euen the Lorde hym ſelfe remembred hym. Then turne to thy God/ kepe mercy and equyte/ and hope ſtyll in thy God. But the marchaunte hathe a falſe weyght in hys hande, he hath a pleaſure to occupye extorcion. Ephraim thinketh thus: Tuſh, I am ryche, I haue good ynough: In all my worckes ſhall not one faute be founde / that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the lande of Egypte/ and ſet the in thy tentes/ and as in the hye feaſte dayes.

I haue ſpoken thorow the prophetes, and ſhewed diuerſe viſions and declared my ſelf by the miniſtraciõ of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhominacion, they are fallẽ to vanite. At Gylgal they haue ſlayne oxen: as many hepes of ſtones as they had ĩ their lande forowes / ſo many aulters haue they made. Iacob fled into the lande of Syria/ and Iſrael ſerued for a wyfe/ and for a wife he kepte ſhepe.

By a prophete the Lorde brought them out of Egipt, and by a prophet he preſerued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked hym to diſpleaſure thorowe hys abhomynacyons/ therfore ſhall hys bloude be poured vpon him ſelfe / and the Lorde hys God ſhall rewarde hym hys blaſphemyes.

Of the abhomynacyon of Iſrael.

CAPI. XIII.

THE abhomynacyon of Ephraim is come alſo into Iſraell. He is gone backe to Baal/ therfore muſt he dye. And nowe they ſynne more and more: of theyr ſyluer / they make them molten ymages / lyke the Idols of the Heathen / and yet all is nothynge but the worcke of the craftesman: Notwithſtandynge they preach of the ſame: who ſo wyl kyſſe the calues, offre he men. Therfore they ſhalbe as the mornynge cloude, and as the dewe that early paſſeth awaye, and lyke as duſt that the wynde taketh awaye / from the flore / and as ſmoke that goeth out of the chymney.

[illegible] B ¶ I am the Lorde God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypt: that thou ſhuldeſt knowe no God but me only, and that thou ſhuldeſt haue no Sauioure but only me. I toke dylygent hede of the in the wyldernesse that drye lande. But when they were well fedde and had ynough, they waxed proude, and forgat me, therfore wyll I be vnto the as a lyon / and as a leoparde in the waye to the Aſſirians. I wyll come vpon them as a ſhe beare, that is robbed of her whelpes / & I wyl breake that ſtubburne hert of theirs. There wyll I deuoure them as a lyon: yee / the wylde beaſtes ſhall teare them.

[illegible] ¶ O Iſraell, thou doeſt but deſtroye thy ſelf. In me only is thy helpe. Where are thy kynges now / that ſhulde helpe the in al thy cyties? Yee / and thy iudges / of whom thou ſaydeſt: ¶ geue me a king and prynces? wel, I gaue the a kynge in my wrath, and in my dyſpleaſure wyll I take hym from the agayne. The wyckednesse of Ephraim is bounde together / and hys ſynne lyeth hyd. Therfore ſhal ſorowes come vpon hym / as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vnwyſe ſonne is he: for he conſydreth not / that he ſhulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of hys byrth / had not I defended hym from the graue / and delyuered hym from death.

D [illegible] ¶ O death I wyll be thy death: O hell, I wyll be thy ſtyng. Yet can I ſe no comforte / for when he is nowe the goodlyeſt amonge the brethren, the eaſt wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) ſhall come downe from the wyldernesse / and drye vp his conduyte / and drynke vp hys welles: he ſhall ſpoyle the treaſure of all pleaſaunt veſſels.

As for Samaria / it ſhall be made waſte, and why? they are dyſobedyent vnto their God. They ſhall peryſh with the ſwearde / their chyldren ſhalbe ſlayne, and their women great with chylde ſhalbe rypte vp.

¶ The [illegible] of Iſraell.

CAPI. XIIII.

A [illegible] O Iſraell / ¶ turne the nowe / vnto the Lorde thy God / ¶ for thou haſt taken a greate fall becauſe of thy wyckednesse. Take theſe wordes with you / when ye turne to the Lorde / and ſaye vnto hym: O forgeue vs all oure ſynnes, receaue vs gracyouſly, ¶ and then wyll we offre the bullockes of oure lyppes vnto the. Aſſur ſhal be nomore oure helper / neyther wyll we ryde vpon horſes any more. As for the workes of oure handes / we wyll no more call vpon them. For it is thou that arte oure God / thou ſheweſt euer mercye vnto the fatherleſſe. B

O (yf they wolde do thys) I ſhulde heale their ſores: yee, withal my hert wolde I loue them: ſo that my wrath ſhulde cleane be turned awaye frō them. Yee, I wolde be vnto Iſrael as the dewe, and he ſhulde growe as the lyly, and hys rote ſhulde breake oute as Lybanus. Hys braunches ſhulde ſprede out abroade and be as fayre as the olyue tre and ſmell as Libanus. C They that dwel vnder hys ſhadowe / ſhulde come agayne / and growe vp as the corne, & floryſh as the vine he ſhulde haue as good a name, as the wyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim, what haue I to do with Idols any more? D I wyll gracyouſly heare hym, and lede hym forth. I wyl be vnto the as a grene fyrre tre, vpō me ſhalt thou fynde thy frute. ¶ Who ſo is wyſe ſhal vnderſtande thys: and he that is ryght enſtructe, wyl regarde it. ¶ For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous, ſuche as be Godly wyll walcke in them. Proclayme a faſtyng/ call the D cōgregacion, gather the elders * and all the Joel.2.b. inhabytours of the lande togyther into the houſe of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto yͤ Lorde: alas, alas for this day. CAPI. II.

BLowe out the trompet in Syon, & crye vpon my holy hyll, yͭ all ſuche as dwell in the lāde, may treble at it: for the day of the Lorde cōmeth, & is harde at hande: a darcke day, a gloomyng day, a cloudy day, yee, & a ſtormy daye, lyke as the mornynge ſpredeth out vpon yͤ hylles. Namely, a great & myghtye people: ſuche as haue not bene ſene frō the begynnyng: neyther ſhall be after them for euer more. Before hym ſhal be a conſumyng fyre, & behynde him a burnynge flame. The lande ſhalbe as a garden of pleaſure before him, but behynde hym ſhall it be a very waſt wyldernesse, and there is no man, that ſhall eſcape him. They are to loke vpon lyke barbed horſes, & rūne lyke horſmen. A THE Lorde God ſhewed me thys vyſyon: and beholde, there was a maunde with ſomer frute. And he ſayd: Amos what ſeyſt thou? I anſwered: a maunde with ſommer frute. Then ſayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende cõmeth vpon my people of Iſrael, I wyl nomore ouerſe thẽ. In yͤ daye ſhal the ſonges of the temple be turned into ſorowe, ſayth yͤ Lorde God, many deed bodyes ſhal lye in euery place/and be caſt forth ſecretly.

B Esay. v. b. * Heare this, O ye yͭ oppreſſe the poore/and deſtroye the nedy in the lande, ſaying: Whẽ wyl the newe moneth be gone, yͭ we may ſell vytayle, & the Sabboth/that we may haue ſcarceneſſe of corne: to make yͤ buſſhell leſſe/and the Sycle greater? We ſhal ſet vp falſe wayghtes/that we maye get the pore vnder vs with theyr money/and the nedy alſo for ſhoes: yee, let vs ſell the chaffe for corne.

C Amos. vi. b. * The Lord hath ſworne agaynſt yͤ pryde of Iacob: theſe workes of theyrs wyll I neuer forget. Shall nat the lande treble/and all they that dwell therin, mourne for thys? Shall nat theyr deſtruccyõ come vpon thẽ lyke a water ſtreame, and flowe ouer thẽ, as the floude of Egypte? Jer. xv. b. * At the ſame tyme (ſayeth the Lorde God) ☞ I ſhal cauſe the Sunne to go downe at none/and the lande to be darcke in the cleare daye. Tobi. ii. a. * Youre hye feaſtes wyll I turne to ſorowe/and youre ſonges to mournynge: I wyll brynge ſacke cloth vpõ all backes, & baldnes vpon euery heade: yee, ſuche a mournynge wyll I ſende them, Jere. vi. d. * as is made vpon an onely begotten ſonne, and they ſhal haue a myſerable ende.

Beholde/the tyme commeth (ſayeth the Lorde God) that I ſhall ſende an hunger in to the earth: ☞ nat the hunger of brede, nor the thyrſt of water: but an hunger to heare the worde of the Lorde: ſo that they ſhall go from the one ſee to the other, yee, from the north vnto the eaſt, runnynge about to ſeke the worde of the Lorde, and ſhall nat fynde it. ☞ In that tyme/ſhall the fayre virgins and the yonge men peryſh for thyrſt, yee, euẽ they that ſweare in the offẽce of Samaria/& ſaye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truly as thy God liueth at Berſaba. Theſe ſhall fall, and neuer ryſe vp agayne.

¶ Threatenynges agaynſte Iſrael. No man can eſcape the hande of God.

CAPI. XI.

A I Sawe the Lorde ſtãdynge vpon the aulter, & he ſayde: ſmyte the dore cheke/that the poſtes maye ſhake withall. For theyr couetouſneſſe ſhall fall vpon all theyr heades, and theyr poſterite ſhalbe ſlayne with the ſwearde. Psal. 139. a. * They ſhal nat fle away, there ſhall nat one of thẽ eſcape/nor be delyuered. Abdy. i. a. * Though they were buryed in the hell, my hande ſhal fetch thẽ frõ thence: though they clyme vp to heauen/yet ſhall I caſte them downe: though they hyde them ſelues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet ſhal I ſeke thẽ out, and brynge them from thence: though they crepe downe fro my ſyght into the depe of the ſee, B I ſhall cõmaunde the ſerpente/euen there to byte them. If they go awaye before theyr enemyes into captiuite, then ſhall I cõmaunde the ſwearde/there to ſleye them.

Thus wyll I ſet myne eyes vpon thẽ, for theyr harme & not for their wealth. For whẽ the Lorde God of hooſtes toucheth a lande, it conſumeth awaye/and al they that dwell therin, muſt nedes mourne: And why? theyr deſtruccion ſhal aryſe as euery ſtreame and runne ouer thẽ/as the floude in Egypt. 3. Re. viii. g. * He that hathe hys dwellynge in heauen/and groundeth hys tabernacle in the earth: Amos. v. b. * he that calleth the waters as the ſee, and poureth them out vpõ the playne grounde: hys name is the Lorde. C Beholde, the eyes of the Lorde are vpon the realme that ſynneth, to rote it cleane out of the earth: Neuertheles, Jere. xxx. b. Esaia. xiii. b. Roma. xi. e. & I wyl not vtterly deſtroye the houſe of Iacob, ſayeth yͤ Lorde.

For lo, this I promyſe: though I ſyfte the houſe of Iſrael among al nacyons (lyke as they vſe to ſyfte in a ſyue) yet ſhall nat the ſmalleſt grauel ſtone fall vpõ the earth: D But al the wycked doers of my people, that ſaye: Tuſh/the plage is nat ſo nye, to come ſo haſtely vpon vs: thoſe ſhall peryſh with the ſwearde. Actes. xv. c. Mich. 7. b. * At that tyme wyll I buylde agayne the ☞ tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallẽ downe/and hedge vp his gappes: and loke what is broken, I ſhall repayre it: Yee, I ſhall buylde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, that they maye poſſeſſe the remnaunt of Edom, yee, and all ſuche people as call vpon my name with thẽ/ſayeth the Lorde, which dothe theſe thynges.

Beholde/the tyme commeth (ſayeth the Lorde) that the plowmã ſhall ouer take the mower & treader of grapes, hym yͭ ſoweth ſede. Joel. iii. e. & The mountaynes ſhall droppe ſwete wyne/and the hylles ſhal be frutefull, and I wyll turne the captyuyte of my people of Iſrael: they ſhall repayre the waſte cyties/and haue thẽ in poſſeſſyon: they ſhall plante vynyardes, & drynke the wyne therof: they ſhall make gardens / & enioye the frutes of them. And I wyll plante them vpon theyr owne grounde/ ſo that I wyl neuer rote them out agayne from theyr lande which I haue geuen them ſayeth the Lorde thy God.

¶ The flyght of Jonas when he was ſent to preache. A tempeſt aryſeth, ⁊ caſteth hym in the ſee for his dyſobedience.

CAPI. I.

A 4.Re.14.c.

The worde of the Lord came vnto * Jonas the ſonne of Amythai, ſayeng: ‡ Aryſe, ⁊ get yͤ ☞ to Niniue that great cyte: and preache vnto them, howe yͭ ‡ their wickednes is come vp before me. And Jonas made him redy to fle ☞ vnto Tharſis from the preſence of the Lorde, and gat him downe to Joppa: where he foūde a ſhyp redy for to go vnto Tharſis. So he payde his fare, and wente aborde / that he myght go with them vnto Tharſis / from the preſence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde into the ſee / and there was a myghtye tēpeſt in the ſee: ſo that the ſhyppe was in ieoperdy of goyng in peces. Then yͤ maryners were afrayed, and cryed euery mā vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the ſhyppe, they caſt into the ſee / to lyghten it of thē. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches / where he layed him downe ⁊ ſlombred.

Jonas.3.a Gene.b Gene.18.c

B So the maſter of the ſhyppe came to him and ſayde vnto him: why ſlombereſt thou? Up, call vpon thy God: yf God (happely) wyll thynke vpon vs / that we peryſhe not. And they ſayde one to another: come / let vs caſte lottes: that we may knowe, for whoſe cauſe we are thus troubled. ‡ And ſo they caſt lottes, ⁊ the lot fell vpon Jonas.

Joſue 7.c

C Then ſayd they vnto him: tel vs / for whoſe cauſe are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence commeſt thou? (and whether goeſt thou?) what coūtreman art thou, ⁊ of what nacion? He anſwered thē: J am an Ebrue, ⁊ J fere the Lorde God of heauen / which made both yͤ ſee, ⁊ dry lād. Then were the mē excedyngly afrayed, ⁊ ſayd vnto him why dyddeſt yͧ ſo? (for they knew, yͭ he was fled from the preſēce of the Lord, becauſe he had tolde thē) ⁊ ſayde moreouer vnto him: What ſhal we do vnto yͤ, that the ſee may ceaſſe fro troublynge vs? (for the ſee wrought ⁊ was troublous) he anſwered them: Take me, and

D caſt me into the ſee, ſo ſhal it let you be in reſt: for J wote / it is for my ſake, that this great tempeſt is come vpon you.

Neuertheleſſe, the mē aſſayed with rowynge / to brynge the ſhyppe to lande: but it wolde not be / becauſe the ſee wrought ſo / ⁊ was ſo troublous agaynſt them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lord, ⁊ ſayde: ‡ O Lord let vs not peryſh for thys mans death / neyther lay yͤ innocēt blode vnto our charge: for yͧ, O lord, haſt done, euē as thy pleſure was.

Deut.21.b

So they toke Jonas, and caſte him into the ſee / and the ſee lefte ragyng. And the mē feared the Lorde excedyngly, doynge ſacryfices and makyng vowes vnto the Lorde.

A O Lord, whē I herde ſpeke of the I was afrayed. The worke ẏ thou haſt taken in hāde, ſhalte ẏ perfourme in his tyme, O Lord ⁊ when thy tyme cōmeth, ẏ ſhalt declare it. In thy very wrath ẏ thynkeſt vpon mercy. God commeth from Theman, ⁊ the holy one frō the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glory couereth the heuens, ⁊ the earth is ful of his prayſe. His ſhine is as the ſōne, ⁊ beames of lyght go out of his hādes/ there is power hyd. Deſtruccion goeth before hī/ and burnyng creſſettes go frō his fete. * He ao.ix.a. B ſtandeth, and meaſureth the earth. He loketh and the people cōſume away/ the mōtaines of the worlde fal downe to poulder, and the hylles are fayne to bowe them ſelues, for his goinges are euerlaſtynge and ſure.

I ſawe, ẏ the pauilyons of the Morians and the tētes of the lāde of Madiā were vexed for werynesse. Waſt ẏ not angry, O Lord, in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes and thy diſpleaſure in the ſee? yes, whē thou ſatteſt vpon thyne horſe, and when thy charettꝭ had the victory. Thou ſheweſt thy bow openly/ lyke as ẏ haddeſt promyſed with an othe* vnto the trybes. Selah. ene.46.a

Thou dydſt deuyde ẏ waters of ẏ earth. When the mountaynes ſawe the/ they were afrayed, the water ſtreame went away: the depe made a noyſe at the lyftyng vp of thyn C hande. * The Sūne and Mone remayned ſtyl in their habitacion. Thine arowes went out gliſteryng, and thy ſpeares as the ſhyne of the lyghtnyng. * Thou trodeſt downe the lande in thyne angre, and dydeſt threſſh the Heathen in thy diſpleaſure. Thou cameſt forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thine anoīted. Thou ſmoteſt downe the heade of the houſe of the vngodly, ⁊ diſcoueredſt hys foūdaciōs, euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah. sue.x.c. bac.xl.b

Thou curſeſt his ſcepters/ the Captayne of his mē of warre: which come as a ſtormy wynde to ſcatre me abrode, ⁊ are glad when they may eat vp the pore ſecretly. Thou makeſt away for thyne horſes in the ſee, euen in the mudde of great waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lyppes trēble at the voyce therof, my bones corrupte, I am afrayed where I ſtāde, O that I myght reſt in the daye of trouble, that I myght go vp vnto our people, which are alredy prepared.

But as for me/ I wyll be glad in the Lorde, and wyl reioyce in God my ſauiour. * The Lord God is my ſtrength, he ſhall make my fete as the fete of hertes: ⁊ he whiche geueth the vyctory, ſhal bryng me to my hye places ſyngyng vpon my pſalmes. Canones. xvi. diſtin. which ſaith/ that men reade thē but in generall: as though he ſhulde ſaye/ that generally & thorowly they are not alowed. And not wythout a cauſe: For that they haue bene corrupted and falſyfyed in many places/ it appeareth ſuffycyently by Euſebius in his boke called Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica: which thing is eaſy to be knowen euen now a dayes i certain poītes/ namely in the bokes of the Machabees: whoſe ſecond boke S. Auſtē cōfeſſeth that he found not i the Hebrue/ by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more ſuſpect and the leſſe receaued. In lyke maner is it of the thyrde & fourthe boke of Eſdras/ whiche S. Hierome proteſteth that he wolde not haue tranſlated/ eſteamyng thē for dreames: where as Ioſephus yet in hys boke of hys Antyquytyes declareth the ſumme of the matter after the maner of a ſtory/ as well of the boke of Machabees as of the .iii. of Eſdras: al though he eſteame the bokes cōpryſed ſēs the raygne of king Artaxerxes vnto his tyme, to be Agiographa. Wherfore then/ whā thou wylt mayntayne any thing for certen/ redynge a reſon of thy fayth/ take heade to procede therin by the lyuing and pithy Scriptures/ folowyng S. Peter/ which ſayth: He that ſpeaketh/ let him ſpeake as though he ſpake the word of God. He ſaith the word of God/ as a thyng moſt true & certē/ opened by Prophetes & Apoſtles/ inſpyred with the holy gooſt: of whom we haue wytneſſe moare cleare then the day. ¶ Joſias holdeth paſſeouer. After his death is Jechonias his ſonne made kynge in his ſteade: whome the kynge of Egypte putteth out, and ſetteth in his brother Joachim. Jeruſalem is deſtroyed, and Sedechias taken.

CAPI. I.

A AND Joſias helde the feaſt of Eaſter in Jeruſalem vnto the Lorde, and ſlewe the Paſſeouer ẏ.xiiij day of the firſt moneth. He ſet the preſtes alſo in ordre (accordyng to theyr dayly courſes) being arayed in long garmentes in the tẽple of ẏ Lord. And he ſpake vnto ẏ Leuites the holy miniſters of Iſraell, that they ſhulde halow thẽ ſelues vnto the Lord, to ſet the holy arcke of the Lorde, in the houſe that kyng Salomon the ſõne of Dauid had buylded, & ſayde: Ye ſhal nomore beare the Arcke vpon your ſhulders. Now ſerue your Lord, & take the charge of his people of Iſrael, after your villages & your trybes: accordynge as kyng Dauid the kyng of Iſrael hath ordayned, & accordyng as Salomon his ſõne hath honorably prepared: ye loke that ye all do ſeruyce in the tẽple, accordynge to the ordring & deſtribucion of the principal mẽ whiche are appoynted out of the tribes, to do ſeruice for the children of Iſrael. *Kyl the paſſeouer, & prepare offringes for your brethren & do accordynge to the commaundement of ẏ Lord/which was giuen vnto Moſes. And vnto the people ẏ was founde Joſias gaue, xxx.M.of ſhepe, lãbes, kyddes, & Goates, & iij.M.oxen. B These the kynge (of his kyngly liberalite) gaue vnto ẏ people, accordyng as he had promyſed: & to the Preſtes for the Paſſeouer) he gaue.ij.M.ſhepe, & an.C.oxen. Moreouer/Jechonias & Semeias, & Nathanael brethrẽ, & Haſabias, Jehiel, & Joſabad gaue thẽ to the Paſſeouer.v.M.ſhepe and v.C.bullockes.

And when theſe thinges were brought to paſſe, the Preſtes & the Leuites ſtode goodly in theyr ordre, & had the vnleuened bred thorowe out the tribes. And after the ordring of the principal mẽ in the tribes, they offred vnto the Lord in the ſyght of the people accordyng as it is wrytten in the boke of Moſes Exod.xii.b & ſo they roſted the Eaſter lãbe as accordyng was. As for the thãke offeringes & the other they dyght thẽ in kettels & pottes, and ſet thẽ before the people with good wyl, & afterwarde before thẽ ſelues, and the preſtes. For the preſtes offred the fat, vntyl the tyme was expyred, but the Leuytes prepared for thẽ ſelues & for theyr brethrẽ the chyldrẽ of Aaron. The holy ſyngers alſo the chyldrẽ of Aſaph ſtode in their ordre/accordyng as Dauyd deuiſed So dyd Aſaph zachary & Jduthun, which were appoynted by the kyng. Moreouer the porters and dore kepers ſtode by the dores & C that diligẽtly, ſo that none wente out of his ſtandyng and ſeruice: for theyr brethren (the Leuites) prepared for thẽ. Thus were al thinges performed, that belõged to the offeryng of the Lord. In that day they helde the paſſeouer, and offred thankofferynges beſyde the ſacrifyce of the Lorde, accordyng to the commaundement of kyng Joſias.

So the chyldrẽ of Iſrael which were thẽ preſent helde an honorable Paſſeouer, & the feaſt of ſwete bread, vij.dayes long. Yee ſuch a Paſſeouer was not kepte in Iſrael, ſyns the tyme of ẏ Prophete Samuel. And al the kinges of Iſrael helde not ſuche an Eaſter/ as this which kyng Joſias helde, & the preſtes the Leuites, the Jewes and al Iſrael, of all thẽ ẏ were at Jeruſalẽ. And in the.xviij.yere of the raygne of Joſias was this Paſſeouer kepte. And with a parfecte herte dyd kynge Joſyas order al his workes/before the lorde and the thynges that were wrytten of hym in tymes paſte, concernynge thoſe that ſynned and were vngodly agaynſte the Lorde: before all people / and that ſoughte not the wordes of the Lorde vpon Iſraell. *After al theſe actes of kynge Joſyas Pharao the kynge of Egypte wente vp & came towarde Carcmis by Euphrates, and Joſyas wente to 4.Reg.23.f 2.Par.35.d mete him. Then ſet the kyng of Egipt vnto Joſias ſaying: what haue I to do ẘ the/ O kyng of Juda? I am not ſent of the Lord to D fyght agaynſt ỷ, for my war is vpō Euphrates. go ỷ thy waye home agayne in al ỷ haſt. And Joſias wolde not turne agayne vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fyght agaynſt him, ⁊ herkened not vnto the worde of ỷ prophete, which he tolde hī out of the mouth of God, but pytched a batayle agaynſt him in the felde of Mageddo. And the princes preaſed to kyng Joſias. Then ſayd the kyng vnto his ſeruaūtes: Cary me awaye out of the batayle, for I am ſore woūded. And immediatly his ſeruaūtes toke him away out of the front of the batayle. Then ſat he vp vpon ỷ ſecond charet, came to Jeruſalē, died/ ⁊ was buried in hẏs fathers ſepulcre. And in al Jewry they mourned for Joſias/ yee the rulers alſo with their wyues made lamētacion for him vnto this day: And this was done euer ſtyll in Iſrael.

These thynges are wrytten in the boke of the ſtories of the kynges of Juda/ namely/ all the actes and workes of kynge Joſias / his kyngly power ⁊ maieſty, his vnderſtandyng in the lawe of God, ⁊ what he dyd, yee thinges which are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Iſrael ⁊ Juda. * And the peo-E ple toke Jechonias the ſonne of Joſias and made him kynge in ſteade of Joſias his father/ when he was .xxiij. yeare olde. And he raygned ouer Iſrael thre monethes. And ỷ kyng of Egypt put him downe, ỷ he ſhulde not raygne in Jeruſalem, ⁊ rayſed vp a taxe of the people: namely, an .C. talentes of ſyluer and one talente of golde. The kynge of Egypt alſo made Joachim his brother king of Juda and Jeruſalē. As for thē of the kynges counſel with the kyng him ſelfe and Zaracis his brother, he toke thē ⁊ caried them awaye preſoners into Egypt. Fyue ⁊ twentie yeare olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lāde of Juda and Jeruſalē, ⁊ he dyd euyl before the Lord. After this /

4.Re.24.a
* Nabuchodonoſor ỷ kyng of Babilō came vp, and bounde him with bandes of yron, ⁊ caried him vnto Babylō. Nabuchodonoſor alſo toke alſo the veſſels ỷ were halowed in the tēple of the Lord, and al the Jewels and caryed thē vnto Babilon, ⁊ brought thē into his owne tēple at Babylon. Of his vnclenes and vngodlynes, it is wrytten in ỷ boke of the actes of the kinges. And Joachim his ſonne raygned in his ſteade: He was made
F kynge beyng .xviij. yeare olde, and raygned but thre monethes and .x. dayes in Jeruſalē ⁊ dyd euyll before the Lord. So after a yere Nabuchodonoſor ſent and cauſed him to be brought vnto Babylon ẘ the holy veſſels of the Lord, ⁊ made Sedechias his brother kyng of Juda ⁊ Jeruſalē, whē he was .xxi. yeare olde: and he raygned .xi. yeare.

And he dyd euyll alſo in the ſyght of the Lorde, and cared not for the wordes ỷ were ſpoken vnto hī * by the prophete Jeremy at the mouth of the Lorde. And where he had made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonoſor, he forſwore hī ſelfe, and fel from him hauīg a ſtyfneck ⁊ a hert, ⁊ trangreſſed all the ſtatutes and ordinaunces of the Lorde God of Iſrael. The rulers alſo ⁊ heades of the people of the Lord dyd much euyl, ⁊ became vngodly, more then the Heathen, beynge defyled in al maner of abhominacions: Yee/ ⁊ defiled the holy tēple of the Lord at Jeruſalē. And the God of their fathers ſente his meſſaungers vnto thē, to turne them backe ⁊ to cal them agayne frō their ſines: for he wolde fayne haue ſpared them for his holy tabernacles ſake. Neuertheles, they had his meſſāgers in deriſion: ⁊ loke what god ſpake vn- G to thē by his ꝓphetes, they made but a ſport of it. This drewe on ſo longe, tyll the Lorde was wroth with his people for their vngodlynes/ and tyl he cauſed the kynges of ỷ Caldees to come vp, whiche ſlew their yonge mē with the ſwerde/ yee euen in the compaſſe of their holy temple/ ⁊ ſpared no body/ neither yong nor olde, nether maden nor yonge mā: but they were all delyuered into the power of the kinges of the Caldees, and al the holy veſſels of the Lorde and the kynges treaſures toke they/ and caried them vnto Babilō. * As for the houſe of the Lorde, they wēt vp into it/ and brent it, ⁊ brake downe the walles of Jeruſalem/ ſet fyre vpon her towres/ deſtroyed al her noble buyldīges ⁊ brought them to nought / and the people that were not ſlayne with the ſwearde/ they caryed vnto Babylon.

Thus became they preſoners ⁊ bōdemē of the kyng of Babilon, tyll they were delyuered ⁊ raygned for them ſelues/ * when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whiche he promyſed them by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremy, and tyl the lande had her reſt namely/ all the tyme that it lay waſte/ had it reſt and quyetnes .lxxviij. yeares.

¶ Cyrus geueth lycence to the Jewes to returne to Jeruſalem, and reſtoreth them the veſſels of the temple. After that are there letters ſende to Artaxerxes, which accuſe the Jewes for buyldynge of the cytie, and ſo is the buyldyng hyndered tyll the .ii. yeare of Darius.

CAPI. II.

A N*Owe when the kyng Cyrus raygned ouer the Perſians/ ⁊ when the Lorde wolde perfourme the worde that he had promyſed by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy: the Lorde rayſed vp the ſprete of Cyrus/ the kynge of Perſians, ſo that he cauſed thys wrytynge to be proclaymed thorowe out his whole realme, ſayinge: Thus ſayeth Cyrus the kyng of Perſians: The Lorde of Iſrael that hye Lorde hath made me kynge of the lande, and commaunded me to buylde hym an houſe at Jeruſalē in Jewry. If there be any nowe of youre people, the Lorde be wyth hym, and go vp wyth hym to Jeruſalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute that place ſhall helpe them, whether yt be wyth golde, wyth ſyluer, wyth gyftes, horſes and neceſſary catell, and all other thynges that are brought wyth a fre wyll to the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem.

Then the principall men out of the trybes and vyllages of Juda and Beniamin ſtode vp: ſo dyd the preſtes alſo and the Leuites (whom the Lorde had moued) to go vp, and to buylde the houſe of the Lorde at Jeruſalem. And they that were about them, helped them with al maner of gold, and ſyluer, and catell alſo and with many lyberall gyftes, and thys dyd many one, whoſe mynde was ſtered vp there to. B *kynge Cyrus alſo brought forth the veſſels and ornamentes, that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whyche Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of Babylō had caryed awaye from Jeruſalem/ and conſecrated them to hys Idoll and ymage) ⁊ deliuered them to Mithridatus his treaſurer, and by him they were delyuered to Salmanaſar the debyte in Jewry. And this was the nōbre of them: Two thouſande ⁊.iiij.C. ſyluer boulles, xxx. ſyluer baſens, xxx. baſens of golde, ij. M. and .iiij. C. veſſels of ſyluer, and a thouſande beſyde. All the veſſels of gold and ſyluer were .v. M. viij. C. and .ix. Theſe were nōbred vnto Salmanaſar, and to thē that were come agayne with hym to Jeruſalem out of the captiuite of Babylon. *Nowe in yͤ tyme of kynge Artaxerſes the kynge of Perſia/ theſe men: Balemus and Mithridatus/ Sabellius/ Rathim⁹/ Balthemus, Semellius the Scribe, ⁊ other that dwelt in Samaria ⁊ in other places vnder yͤ dominiō therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerſes, wherin they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jewry and Jeruſalem The letter was made after thys maner.

C Syr, thy ſeruaūtes Rathimus the ſtory wryter, Sabellius the Scribe, ⁊ other iudges of the courte in Celoſyrya ⁊ Phenyces. Be it knowen ⁊ manifeſte to oure Lorde the kyng, yͭ the Jewes which are come vp from you vnto vs into Jeruſalem the rebellious and wicked cytye, begynne to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to ſet vp the temple a new. Now yf this cytie ⁊ the walles therof be ſet vp agayne, they ſhall not onely refuſe to geue trybutes and taxes but alſo rebell vtterly agaynſt the kynge. And for ſo moch as they take thys in hande now aboute the temple, we thought it reaſō to thinke no ſcorne of it, but to ſhewe it vnto oure Lorde the kynge, and to certyfie hym therof: to thintent that if it pleaſe the kinge he maye cauſe it to be ſought in the bokes of olde: and thou ſhalt fynde ſoche warning wrytten, ⁊ ſhalt vnderſtande, that this cytie hath all way bene rebelyous and diſobediēt that it hath ſubdued kynges and cytyes, ⁊ that the Jewes whiche dwell therin, haue euer bene a rebellyous, obſtynate, vnfaythfull/ and fyghtyng people/ for the whiche cauſe thys cytye is waſted. Wherfore nowe we certyfye our Lorde the kynge/ yͭ yf thys cytye be buylded ⁊ occupyed agayne/ and yͤ walles therof ſet vp a new: thou canſt haue no paſſage into Celoſyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the ſtory wryter/ to Balthemus/ to Sabellius yͤ Scribe/ ⁊ to yͤ other officiers ⁊ dwellers in Syria and Phenices/ after thys maner: I haue red the epiſtle which thou ſēteſt vnto me, ⁊ haue commaunded to make diligēt ſearch/ ⁊ haue founde/ yͭ the cytie hath euen reſyſted kynges/ yͭ the ſame people are dyſobedient/ and haue cauſed much warre, and that myghty kynges haue raygned in Jeruſalem/ whiche alſo haue rayſed vp taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherof/ I haue cōmaūded thoſe people, yͭ they ſhal nat buylde the cytie/ that they make nomore in it/ and that they proceade no forther with the buyldynge: for ſo much as it myght be the cauſe of warre/ and diſpleaſure vnto kynges. D

Nowe when Rathymus and Sabellius the Scribe/ ⁊ the rulers in the lāde had red the wrytynge of kynge Artaxerſes/ they gat them together, and came in all the haſte to Jeruſalem with an hooſt of horſmē/ ⁊ with muche people of fote, ⁊ forbad thē to buylde. And ſo they lefte of from buyldynge of the temple of Jeruſalem vnto the ſeconde yeare of yͤ raygne of Darius kynge of perſeans.

¶ Darius maketh a feaſt. The thre ſentēces of the thre yonge men, of whiche the fyrſt is declared,

CAPI. III.

A Kynge Darius made a greate feaſt vnto hys ſeruauntes, vnto all his courte, and to all the offycers of Media & Perſia, yee to all the debytes and rulers that were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia/ an hundreth & xxvii. countrees. So when they had eaten and droncken beynge ſatyſfyed, & were gone home agayne/ Darius yͤ kynge wente into his chambre/ layed hym downe to ſlepe, & ſo awaked. Thē the thre yong mē, that kepte the kynges perſonne, and watched his body, cōmoned amonge thē ſelues, & ſpake one to another: let euery one of vs
B ſaye ſome thynge/ and loke whoſe ſētence is wyſer & more excellent then the other, vnto hym ſhal kynge Darius geue great gyftes, and clothe hym with purple. He ſhall geue hym veſſels of golde to drynke in/ clothes of golde and couerynges: he ſhal make hym a coſtly charet and a brydle of golde/ he ſhall geue hym a bonet of whyte ſylke, and a cheyne of golde aboute his necke: yee he ſhalbe the ſeconde & pryncypall nexte vnto kynge Darius/ & that because of hys wyſdome, & ſhalbe called the kynges kynſman.
So, euery one wrote his meaning, ſealed
it/ and layed it vnder the kynges pyllowe/and ſayde: when the kynge aryſeth, we wyll geue hym oure wrytynges, and loke whoſe worde the kyng and his chefe Lordes iudge to be the moſt wyſely ſpoken/ the ſame ſhall C haue the victory. One wrote: wyne is a ſtronge thynge. The ſeconde wrote: The kynge is ſtronger. The thyrde wrote: womē haue yet more ſtrength/ but aboue al thyn-ges the trueth beareth awaye the vyctory.
Nowe when the kynge was ryſen vp/ they toke theyr wrytynges & delyuered thē vnto hym/ and ſo he red them. Then ſent he forth to call all his chefe lordes, all the debytes & rulers of the countrees of Media & Perſia.
And when they were ſet downe in the coun-cell/ the wrytynges were red before them.
And he commaunded to call for the yonge mē/ yͤ they myght declare theyr meaninges them ſelues by mouth. So when they were ſente for, & came in/ the kynge ſayde vnto them: ſhewe vs & make vs to vnderſtande
what the thynges are that ye haue wrytten.
D Then beganne the fyrſt (which had ſpokē of the ſtrength of wyne) & ſayde: O ye men Prou. xx. a. a wyne is meruelous ſtrōge and ouercommeth thē yͤ drynke it: it deceaueth yͤ mynde.
and bryngeth both yͤ poore man & the kynge to dotage & vanyte. Thus doth it alſo with the bonde man & with the fre/ with the poore and rychemā taketh awaye theyr vnderſtā-dynge, & maketh thē carelesſe & mery/ ſo that none of thē remembreth any heuynes dette or dewty: It cauſeth a mā to thynke alſo yͤ the thynge which he doth/ is honeſt & good:
and remembreth not that he is a kynge/ nor that he is in auctoryte/ & that he ought not do ſuch thynges. Moreouer/ when men are drynckynge/ they forget all frendſhyppe/ all brotherly faythfulnes & loue: but as ſoone as they are dronke/ they drawe out yͤ ſwerde and wyll fyght: & whē they are layed downe frō the wyne, & ſo ryſen vp agayne, they can nat tel what they dyd: iudge ye nowe is nat wyne yͤ ſtrongeſt? For who wolde els take in hande to do ſuche thynges? And when he had ſpoken thys/ he helde his tonge.

¶ The declaracyon of the .ii. laſt ſentences of the yonge mē, propounded in the Chapter before: of whiche the laſt, that is, that verytye beareth the vyctory in all thynges is moſte commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all the rulers vnder hym, that they ſhulde ayde Zorobabell to the buyldynge of Ieruſalem.

CAPI. IIII.

THEN the ſeconde (which had ſayde, A that the kyng was ſtronger) beganne to ſpeake/ ſayenge: O ye men, are nat they the ſtrongeſt & moſte excellēte/ yͤ cōquere the lande & the ſee, and all that is in the ſee and in the earth? Nowe is the kynge lorde of all theſe thynges/ & hath dominion of thē all: & loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he ſende his men forth a warfare/ they go, and breake downe hylles/ walles and towres.
They are ſlayne/ and ſlaye (other men) thē ſelues/ & ouerpaſſe nat the kynges worde.
If they get the victory/ they bryng yͤ kynge all the ſpoyle. Lyke wyſe, the other yͤ medle nat with warres and fyghtynge, but tyl the grounde: when they reape, they brynge tribute vnto the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do byd commaunde to kyll/ they kyll: yf he cōmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: yf he commaunde to ſmyte, they ſmyte: yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he com-maūde to breake downe, they breake downe:
yf he commaūde to plante, they plante. The commen people and the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kynge in the meane ſea-ſon ſytteth hym downe, eateth, & drynketh, and taketh hys reſt: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kynge/ and nat one of them dare get hym out of the waye to do his owne buſynes, but muſt be obediēt vnto the kynge at a worde. Iudge ye nowe, B O ye mē, howe ſhulde nat he go farre aboue vnto whom men are thus obedient? And whē he had ſpokē this, he helde hȳ tōge. The

thyrde, whoſe name was Zorobabel, whiche had ſpoken of wemen and of truth, began to ſaye after this maner: O ye men/ it is not the greate kynge/ it is not the multitude of men/ neyther is it wyne that excelleth: who is it then that hath the Lordſhyp ouer them haue not wemen borne the kynge/ and all the people that rule thoſe thinges? Haue not wemen borne thē/ and brought thē vp, that plāte the vynes, wherout the wyne cōmeth? They make garmentes for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, and without wemē cannot men lyue. If they gather golde and ſyluer and all precious thynges, & ſe a faire well fauoured woman, they leaue all together, and turne their eyes onely vnto ẏ woman, and gape vpon her, & haue more deſyre C vnto her, thē vnto the ſyluer & golde, or any maner of precious thynge. * A man leaueth ene.ii.d his father ẏ brought hī vp, leueth his owne at.xix.a naturall countre, & cleaueth vnto the womā Cor.6.b phe.v.g yee he ieopardeth his lyfe with the womā/ & remembreth nether father/ nor mother/ nor countre. By this then ye muſt nedes knowe, that wemen haue the dominion ouer you.

Doth it not greue you? A man taketh hys ſwerde, and goeth his way to ſteale, to kyll/ to murther, to ſayle vpon the ſee, and ſeyth a lyon, and goeth in the darckenes: & when he hath ſtollen, diſceyued and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne/ a man loueth his wyfe better then father and mother: yee many one there be/ ẏ renne out of theyr wyttes, and become bōdmen for theyr wyues ſakes: many one alſo haue peryſhed, haue ben ſlayne, & haue ſynned becauſe of wemen.

And now beleue me/ I knowe a kynge whiche is great in his power, and al landes ſtande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hande vpon him: yet dyd I ſe/ that Apame (the daughter of the great kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubyne/ ſat beſyde the kynge vpon the ryght hande/ & toke of his crowne from his head, & ſet it vpon her owne heade, D and ſmote the kyng with her left hande. Moreouer, the kynge loked vpon her with open mouth: if ſhe laughed vpon him/ he laughed alſo: but yf ſhe toke any diſpleaſure with hī the kynge was fayne to flatter her, & to gyue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men/ are not wemen then ſtronger? Greate is the earth, & hye is the heauē, who doth theſe thinges? Thē ẏ kyng & ẏ Prynces loked one vpon another. So he beganne to ſpeake of ẏ truth: O ye men, are not wemē ſtronger? Greate is the earth, hye is the heauen, ſwyft is the courſe of the ſonne, * he cōpaſeth the heauen rōde about, and fetcheth Eccle.i.a his courſe agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellēt that dothe this? yee greate is the truth, & ſtronger then al thinges. All the earth calleth vpō the truth/ the heauen prayſeth it/ all workes ſhake and tremble at it/ and with it is no vnrightuous thynge. Wyne is vnryghtuous: the kyng is vnryghtuous: wemē are vnryghtuous: al ẏ chyldren of men are vnryghtuous, yee all theyr workes are vnryghtuous/ and there E is no truth in thē, in theyr vnryghtuouſnes alſo ſhall they be deſtroyed & peryſh. As for the truth, * it endureth, & is al way ſtrōge: Eſaye.xl.a it lyueth and cōquereth for euermore worlde Pſal.117.a without ende.

The truth accepteth no perſonnes, it putteth no differēce betwixt the rych or poore, betwyxt the myghtye or ſimple, but doth right vnto euery mā, whether they be euil or good and all men are louyngly delte withal in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there is no vnryghteous thyng, but ſtrength kyngdome and power and magieſty for euermore Bleſſed be the God of truth.

And with that he helde his tong, and all the people cryed, & ſayd: Great is the truth, and aboue all. Then ſayde the kynge vnto him: Aſke what thou wylt/ more then is appoynted in the wrytyng, and I ſhall geue it the/ for thou art founde wyſer then thy companyons: thou ſhalt ſyt nexte me, & be called my kynſmā. Then ſayd he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyſe and vowe, whyche thou haſt vowed and promyſed (in the daye when thou cameſt to ẏ kyngdome) to buylde vp Ieruſalē, & to ſende againe al the veſſels and Iewels, that were takē away out of Ieruſalem: whiche Cyrus ſeperated, when he offred in Babylon, & wold ſende thē agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple whiche the Edomytes brent, when Ieru- F ſalem was deſtroyed by the Chaldees. This onely (O kynge) is the thing that I requyre this is the maieſty, which I deſyre and aſke of the: that thou perfourme the vowe, which thou wt thyne owne mouth haſt made vnto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge ſtode vp/ and kyſſed hym, * & wrote a letter vnto al the debites and Shreues/ to al the Lordes and nobles/ that they ſhulde conuey him forth, and al thē ẏ wolde go vp wt him to buylde Ieruſalē. 2.Eſd.2.b 1.Eſd.6.b He wrote a letter alſo vnto al ẏ ſhreues ẏ were in Celoſiria & Phenices, & vnto Libanus, that they ſhuld drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jeruſalē,to buylde the cytie withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry becauſe of ẏ fredome,that no officer no ruler/nor ſhreue,ſhulde come to theyr dores/and that all theyr lande which they had conquered,ſhuld be fre & not tributary: And that ẏ Edomites ſhulde geue ouer the cities and villages of the Jewes,whiche they had takē in:yee and that they ſhulde yerely geue xx.talentes to the buyldyng of the tēple,vntyll the tyme that it were fynyſhed / and to the dayly halowyng of ẏ brent offerīges(as it is commaunded)ten talentes yearely alſo And that all they which come from Babylō to buylde the cytie,ſhulde haue fre lybertie/ they and theyr chyldren,& all the Preſtes.

G He wrote the greatneſſe alſo,& commaūded that the holy garmēt ſhulde be geuē thē wherin they miniſtred:and wrote that commaundemētes ſhulde be geuen to the Leuites/vntyll the day/that the houſe were fynyſhed,and Jeruſalem buylded vp:and commaūded that all they that watched the cytie ſhulde haue theyr porcyons and wages.

He gaue ouer alſo al the veſſels that Cyrus had ſeperated from Babylon, & all that Cyrus had geuen in commaundemente/the ſame charged he alſo/that it ſhulde be done and ſent vnto Jeruſalem. Nowe when this yong mā was gone forth,he turned his face towarde Jeruſalem / and prayſed ẏ kynge of heauen/and ſayde:* Of the commeth the victory/of the cōmeth wyſdome & cleareneſſe & I am thy ſeruaūt. Bleſſed art thou/which haſt geuen me wyſdome:the wyll I prayſe / O Lord/thou God of our fathers.

And ſo he toke the letters,and wēt vnto Babylon:And when he came there, he tolde thys vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon/and they prayſed the God of their fathers,that he had geuē them refreſhyng and libertye to go vp,and to buylde Jeruſalē & the tēple(wherin the name of the Lord is called vpon) & they reioyſed with inſtrumētes and gladneſſe ſeuen dayes longe.

¶ They that returne to Jeruſalem are nombred. They begynne to laye the foundacyon of the tēple, but are let by the meanes of enemies:and ſo is the buyldynge hyndred by the ſpace of two yeares.

CAPI. V.

A After this were the pryncypall men of all the vyllages choſen in the trybes & kynredes/that they ſhulde go vp with theyr wyues and chyldren/with theyr ſeruauntes and maydens/with all theyr catel and ſubſtaunce. And Darius the kyng ſent with thē a thouſande horſmen/to conuey them ſafely vnto Jeruſalem: and theyr brethren were glad/playeng vpon inſtrumentes/and ſyngyng/and he cauſed them to go together w̄ them. [illegible] alſo of the Sabbathes and of the newe mones, and all holy feaſtes. 1.Eſd.3.b * And al they that vowed offerynges vnto the Lorde, beganne at the newe mone of the .vii. moneth to offre vnto God / for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto yͤ Maſons and Carpenters, money / meate / & drinke with cherefulneſſe. F Unto them of Sidon alſo and Tyre they gaue cartes, that they ſhulde cary Cedre trees from Libanus to be ioyſtes and beames, & that they ſhuld make ſhyppes in the hauen of Ioppe, accordynge as it was appointed and ordained by Cirus kynge of the Perſyans.

And in the ſecond yeare they came into yͤ temple of God at Ieruſalem. Eccl.29.b c * In the ſecōd moneth begāne Zorobabel the ſonne of Salathiel, and Ieſua the ſonne of Ioſedec and their brethren the Preſtes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Ieruſalem out of the captiuite of Babylon, & layed the foundacion of the temple, in the new mone of the ſecond moneth in yͤ ſecōd yere that they were come into Iewry & Ieruſalē. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were aboue .xx. yere olde) vnto the ſeruice of the Lord: ſo Ieſua & his ſonnes & his brethren, al the Leuites ſtode together, and perfourmed the lawe & ordinaunce in the houſe of the Lorde.

And the Preſtes ſtode, & had theyr garmentes and trōpettes, and the Leuytes the ſonnes of Aſaph had Cimbals geuyng thākes and prayſes vnto the Lorde, accordyng 1.Par.16 b * as Dauyd the kynge of Iſrael had ordayned. And the ſong that they dyd ſyng vnto yͤ Lorde, was after this maner. Psal.135.a Eſd.iii.b * O ſyng vnto the Lorde for he is gracious, & his goodnes vpon Iſrael endureth for euer. G And al yͤ people blew out with trompettes, and ſong with loude voyce, prayſynge the Lord together in the rearing vp of the houſe of yͤ Lord 1.Eſd.3.b * There came alſo from among the Preſtes and Leuites the rulers and elders, accordīg to the tribes and kynredes (ſuch as had ſene the houſe afore) to the buyldyng of this temple with greate crye and great mournynge, many alſo with trōpettes & great ioy: In ſo much, that the trōpettes myght not well be hearde for the wepyng and mournyng. For the cōmen people blewe goodly vpon the trōpettes, ſo that it myght be harde farre of.

1.Eſd.4.a * Then came the enemies of the tribes of Iuda and Beniamin, to knowe what that trompettyng and noyſe of ſhawmes myght be. And they perceyue yͤ it was they whiche were come agayne out of captyuite, & wolde buylde the temple vp a newe vnto the Lord God of Iſrael. So they went to Zorobabell and Ieſua, and to the rulers of the villages and ſayde vnto them. Shal we buylde with you alſo? For we lyke wyſe haue herde your Lorde, and we walke after the ſame maner, from the dayes of Aſbazareth the kynge of Aſſiria, which brought vs hyther. Then Zorobabel and Ieſua and the rulers of the villages of Iſrael ſayde vnto them. It is not mete, that ye ſhulde bulde the temple of our God wᵗ vs: we our ſelues alone wyll buylde vnto the Lorde of Iſrael lyke 1.Eſd * as Cyrus yͤ kyng of the Perſyās hath cōmaunded vs.

But the Heathen in the lande layde them ſelues agaynſt thoſe yͤ were in Iewry, helde vp yͤ buylding from them, layed wayt vpon them preuely / ſtopped ſuch as brought any tynge to them, forbad them to buylde, and hindered thoſe yͤ made the paſſage, that yͤ buildyng ſhuld not be fynyſhed: & this cōtynued ſo long as kynge Cyrus lyued: & ſo they put of the buylding for the ſpace of two yeres, vntyl the raygne of kyng Darius.

¶ Aggeus and zachary prophecye. They buylde the temple without let or hynderaunce, by the commaundemente of Darius.

CAPI. VI.

A 1.Eſd NOt withſtandynge in the ſeconde yere of the raygne of Darius. Aggeus and Zachary the ſōne of Addo prophecied vpon them in Iewry, and Ieruſalem, in the name of the God of Iſrael. Aggeu * Then Zorobabell the ſone of Salathiell, and Ieſua the ſonne of Ioſedec ſtode vp / and beganne to buylde the houſe of the Lorde at Ieruſalem, when the Prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At the ſame tyme came Syſennes the vnder Shreue in Syrya and Phenices / with the lande lordes and his companyons, and ſaid vnto them. Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde this houſe, to make yͤ rofe and al other thynges agayne? And who are the worcke men / that buylde them? Neuertheleſſe the elders of the Iewes had ſucche grace of the Lorde / that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked therto) buylded on ſtyll / vntyl that kyng Darius were certifyed therof, & an anſwered receyued frō him. The letter that theſe mē ſent vnto king Darius, was after this maner.

Syſennes the vnder Shreue in Syrya and Phenyces, and the landlordes wᵗ theyr companyons, which are head rulers in Syrya and Phenices, ſende theyr ſalutacion vnto Darius the kynge. We certyfy the Lorde the kinge yͤ we came into the lāde of Iewry / and went to Ieruſalē: where we founde the

and went to Ieruſalē: where we founde the buyldyng the great houſe of God and the temple, with great coſtely free ſtone ⁊ wᵗ goodly tymbre for the walles: yee they make greate haſte with the worcke/ ⁊ helpe one another/ and it goeth forth proſperouſly in their handes, and with great dylygence and worſhip is it made. B Then aſked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make vp the houſe and the buylding, and this we dyd, to the intent that we myght certyfie the perfectly/ ⁊ wryte vnto the, the names of thoſe that were the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs thys anſwere: we are the ſeruauntes of the Lord, which made heauen and earth: and as Reg. vi. a for this houſe, it hath bene buylded and ſet vp afore tyme by the great ⁊ myghty kinge of Iſrael. But when our fathers prouoked Re. 34. 35 God vnto wrath / and ſynned agaynſte the em. 39. lii. God of Iſrael, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonoſor king of Babylon the kynge of the Caldees/ whiche brake downe the houſe/ ⁊ brent it/ ⁊ caryed awaye [illegible] the peple preſoners vnto Babilon. * Neuertheles, in yͤ fyrſt yeare yͤ kyng Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cyrus yͤ kynge wrote ⁊ cōmaunded to buylde vp thys houſe agayne: ⁊ all the holy veſſels of golde ⁊ ſyluer that Nabuchodonoſor caried away from Ieruſalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto his owne tēple: theſe brought Cyrꝰ forth againe, and delyuered them to Zorobabel ⁊ to Salmanaſar, the vnder Shreue, commaundynge them that they ſhulde bringe thoſe ſame veſſels to Ieruſalem into the temple, ⁊ to begynne from yͤ tyme forthe/ to buylde yͤ tēple agayne ī his owne place. Thē Salmanaſar layed yͤ foūdacyō of yͤ Lordes C houſe at Ieruſalem/ ⁊ euer ſence haue they buylded/ ⁊ yet is it not ended. And therfore O kynge, yf thou thynckeſt it good/ let it be ſought in the Lybraries and rolles of kyng Cyrus that are in Babylon, yf it be founde then yͤ the buyldīge of the houſe of the Lord at Ieruſalem was begon by the coūcel ⁊ cōſent of king Cirus ⁊ if our lorde the kyng be ſo mynded let hym wryte vnto vs therof. Eſd. vi. c. * Then cōmaunded kynge Darius, to ſeke Eſd. iii. a in the Lybraryes: and ſo at Egbathanis in a lytle cyte in medea ther was founde ſuch a wrytynge: In the firſt yeare of the raygne of Cyrus, the ſame king Cyrus cōmaunded that the houſe of yͤ Lorde at Ieruſalē ſhuld be buylded agayne (and oblacions to be made ther cōtynually vnto yͤ Lord (whoſe heyght ſhalbe x. cubites, ⁊ the bredeth, thre ſcore cubites / ⁊ foure ſquare with thre hewen ſtones wᵗ a loft of tymbre of the ſame countrē/ yer wᵗ a new loft, ⁊ the expenſes therof to be geuen of the houſe of kyng Cyrus. And the ornamētes of golde and ſyluer/ that Nabuchodonoſor toke out of yͤ houſe of yͤ Lorde at Ieruſalē, ſhalbe ſet agayne in yͤ tēple at Ieruſalem, where they were afore. Syſennes alſo the vnder ſhreue ī Syria ⁊ Phenices, ⁊ Prynces ⁊ their cōpanions, ⁊ the other yᵗ be head rulers in Syria ⁊ Phenices, ſhall not medle nor haue any thīge to do with yͤ place.

I Cyrus haue commaunded alſo, yᵗ they D ſhal builde the houſe of the Lord whole vp, and haue ordeined them, to helpe thoſe that become out of captiuyte: tyl the houſe of the Lord be finiſhed: and out of the tribute and taxing that is yearly rayſed vp in Syria ⁊ Phenices, diligently to gyue the a certayne ſumme to the offeryng of the Lord: and the ſame to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel the offycer, that he therwithal may ordeine oxen/ rammes, lambes/ and corne, ſalt, wyne and oyle, and that cōtinually euery yeare: after the expences * which the Preſtes that be at Eſdr. vi. b. Ieruſalem ſhew to be made dayly: this ſhal be geuen vnto them without delaye/ yᵗ they may offer ſacrifices dayly to the hyeſt God, for the kynge and for his ſeruauntes, and to praye for theyr lyues. Let it be proclamed alſo on euery ſyde, that whoſoeuer breaketh or deſpyſeth this cōmaundemēt of the king, ſhalbe hanged vpon a galowes (made of hys owne good) and all his goodes ſhalbe ſeaſoned vnto yͤ king. The Lord therfore (whoſe name is there called vpon) rote out and deſtroye al the kynges and peple/ that vndertake by vyolence to hynder the ſame / or to deale vncurteouſly wᵗ the houſe of the Lord at Ieruſalem. I Daryus the kynge haue ordeyned/ that theſe thynges ſhall be done with all dylygence.

¶ The temple is fynyſhed and dedycate: and the feaſte of vnleuened breade is holden.

CAPI. VII.

THen Syſennes the vnder ſhreues in A Celoſyria/ and Phenyces / and the other Landelordes with their companyons/ obeyed the thynges that kynge Daryus had ordeyned, and were dylygent in the holy workes, ⁊ were felowe helpers with the olde rulers of the Iewes. And ſo the worke of the Sanctuary wente forthe and proſpered, when Aggeus and Zachary prophecyed. And they performed all thynges thorow yͤ cōmaundement of the Lord God of Iſrael, and after the deuyce of Cyrus/ Darius and Artaxerſes kynges of Perſia.

And thus was oure houſe finiſhed vnto

the .xxiii. daye of the moneth Adar, ī the .vi. yeare of kinge Darius. And the chyldren of Iſrael the preſtes and the Leuytes/and the other that were come out of captyuyte/and ſuch as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moſes. And in the dedicacion of the temple: they offred an hūdred oxen two hundred rammes, foure hundred lambes/and twelue goates for ye ſynnes of al ye people of Iſrael/after ye nombre of the trybes of Iſrael. C The preſtes alſo ⁊ the Leuites ſtode arayed in ye preſtly garmētes, after ye trybes/ouer al the workes of the Lorde God of Iſraell accordynge to the boke of Moſes ⁊ the porters by al dores.

And the chyldren of Iſrael (with thoſe ye were come out of captyuite) helde the paſſeouer the fourtene day of the fyrſt moneth/ when the preſtes and the Leuytes were ſanctifyed. They ye came out of captyuyte/were not all ſanctyfyed together: but the leuytes were all ſanctyfyed together, and ſo al they that came out of captyuite, killed the eaſter lambe/for theyr brethrē/for the preſtes and for them ſelues. And the chyldren of Iſrael D that came out of captyuyte, and eſcaped frō all the abhominacyons of ye heathen, ſought ye Lorde, ⁊ kepte the feaſt of vnleuened bread ſeuen dayes longe, eatyng and drynckynge and were mery before the Lord: that ye Lord had turned the deuyſe of the kynge of Aſſyria, and comforted theyr handes to the workes of the Lorde God of Iſrael.

¶ Eſdras cauſeth the people to aſſemble and come together, and then readeth them the law. They kepe the feaſt of Tabernacles.

CAPI. VIII.

A AND after hym * when Artaxerſes the kynge of the Perſyans raygned, there 1. Eſd. vii. a wente vnto hym Eſdras the ſonne of Saraias/the ſonne of Azarias/the ſonne of Helchiach/the ſonne of Sallum/the ſonne of Sadoch/the ſonne of Achitob/the ſonne of Amarias, the ſonne of Azarias, the ſonne of Boccus/the ſonne of Abyſu/the ſonne of Phineas/the ſonne of Eleazar/the ſonne of Aarō the fyrſt preſte. This Eſdras wēte vp from babylon (for he had good vnderſtandynge in the lawe of Moſes, that was geuē of the Lord God of Iſrael, to be taught and done in dede.) And the kyng fauoured him, and dyd hym great worſhyppe and honour after al hys deſyres. There went vp wt him alſo certayn of the chyldren of Iſrael, of the preſtes/of the Leuites/of the ſyngers/porters ⁊ mynyſters of the tēple at Jeruſalem. In the ſeuenthe yeare of the raygne of kynge Artaxerſes/in the fyfth moneth that is in the ſeuenth yeare of ye raygne, they wēt from Babylon in the newe moone of the .v. moneth, and came thyther to Jeruſalē after his cōmaūdement, lyke as the Lorde had proſpered their iourney. For these Eſdras gat greate inſtruccyon that he ſhulde leaue none of ye thinges behynde, which are in the lawe and commaūdementes of God. And he taught whole Iſrael al ryghteouſnes and iudgment.

Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artaxerſes, and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come frō Artaxerſes the kynge) to Eſdras the preſte ⁊ reder of the lawe of ye Lord And thys is the copye of the letter: kynge Artaxerſes ſendeth hys gretynge vnto Eſdras the preſte and reder of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendſhyppe ⁊ good wyll I haue ordeyned and charged/yf there be eny of the Jewes/of the preſtes ⁊ Leuytes in my realme/which deſyreth and is cōtent to go with the vnto Jeruſalem, ye he maye do it. Therfore/yf any be mīded to beare the company, B let them come together/and go with ye (lyke as I am content and my ſeuen frendes/my coūcelers) to ſe what they do at Jeruſalem ⁊ in Jewry/⁊ kepe the thynkes accordynge as thou haſt in the lawe of the Lorde: and to brynge the gyftes vnto God the Lord of Iſrael/that I and my frendes haue promyſed to Jeruſalem/and al the ſyluer and gold ye is in the countre of Babylon vnto the Lorde to Jeruſalem/with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jeruſalem. Yee, that the ſame ſyluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, ſhepe and goates ⁊ other ye belonge to theſe thynges: ⁊ that they may offer ſacryfyces vnto ye Lorde, vpō the aulter of their Lorde, which is at Jeruſalem. And whatſoeuer thou ⁊ thy brethren wyll do with the ſyluer ⁊ gold, that do after thy mynde/accordyng to ye cōmaundement of the Lord thy God, ⁊ lykewyſe, wt the holy veſſels that are geuen the, for ye ſeruyce of ye houſe of ye Lord thy God: which is in Jeruſalem ⁊ other thīges whatſoeuer is neceſſary for ye to the worcke of the temple of thy god, that ſhal be geuen the of ye kinges treſure ⁊ loke what thou wt thy brethren wyl do with the gold ⁊ ſyluer, that do after the wyll of the Lord. And I kyng Artaxerſes haue commaūded the kepers of ye treaſures in Syria and Phenyces, ye whatſoeuer Eſdras the preſte and reder of the lawe of the Lorde doth wryte it ſhalbe dylygently geuen hym vntyl an hundred talentes of ſyluer,and of golde in lyke maner. Of corne alſo an hundreth meaſures,and tyl an hũdreth veſſels of wyne,& other plẽteous thynges without nombre. Let all thynges be done after the law of God, vnto the hyeſt God yͭ the wrath of God aryſe nat in the realme of the kyng,& of his ſonnes. I cōmaũde you alſo that ye requyre no taxe nor tribute of yͤ preſtes/Leuytes/ſyngers,and miniſters of the tẽple,nor of the wryters:& that no mã haue auctorite to medle any thyng agaynſt thẽ. As for the(O Eſdras) ſet thou iudges and arbyters in the whole lande of Syria & Phenices/after the wyſdome of God:& learne al ſuch as are ignoraũt in the lawe of God thy Lord/& let al them that offende agaynſt the lawe/be diligently punyſhed: whether it be with death/with payne/to be condemned in money,or to be banyſhed.

1.Eſdr.7.d Then ſayde Eſdras the wryter* Bleſſed be the God of our fathers,that hath gyuẽ ſo good a minde & wyl into the hert of the king to magnifie his houſe that is at Jeruſalem and hath made me to be accepted in the ſight of the kyng,of his councell/of hys frendes/& of his nobles. And ſo I was ſtedfaſt in my mynde/accordyng as the Lord my God helped me/and I choſe out mẽ of Iſraell to go vp wͭ me.‡ And theſe are yͤ hedes,(after their kynredes and houſes of theyr fathers) that went vp with me from Babylon/ out of the kyngdome of Artaxerſes: Of the ſonnes of Phares/Gerſonius. 1.Eſdr.8.b * As for the ſonnes of the preſtes & Leuites/I founde none there. Then ſent I vnto Eleazar/and Eccelom/and Maſmam/ and Malobam/and Enaathan/and Samea/ & Joribimathan/Eunagan Zachary, Moſollamum(theſe were the leders & men of experyence)and I ſente them worde / that they ſhulde come vnto Loddeus/whiche was by the place of the treaſury / and commaunded them that they ſhulde ſpeake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren and to thoſe that were in the treaſury,to ſende vs ſuch men as myght execute the preſtes offyce in the houſe of the Lorde our God. And with the myghty hãde of our Lord God/they brought vnto vs mẽ of good experience,from among the ſonnes of Moolius/the ſonne of Leui/ the ſonne of Iſrael/Sebebiam and the ſonnes and hys brethrẽ Aſbin and Anin/of whom there were xviij. 1.Eſdr.8.c ‡ Then cōmaũded I a faſtyng vnto the yonge men before the Lorde/ that I myght deſyre of hym a proſperous iourney and a good waye for vs/yee for vs,for our chyldrẽ and for the catell,because of the layenges awayt/& I durſt not requyre of the kyng horſmen & fote men,to conuey vs ſafely agaynſt our enemyes,for we had ſaid vnto the king that the power of the Lorde our God ſhulde be wͭ them/that ſeke hĩ wͭ theyr whole hert. And therfore/ we beſought God oure Lord earneſtly becauſe of theſe thynges,& he was merciful vnto vs,and herd our prayer. And I ſeperated frõ among the rulers of the people,& from the preſtes of the temple.xij.men and Sebebia & Aſania,and ten men of theire brethren wͭ them. And I weied thẽ the gold and the ſiluer & al the preſtly ornamentes of the houſe of our God,which the kynge/ and his cõũcel,and his Prynces, and whole Iſrael had geuẽ. And when I had weyed it/ I gaue them an hundreth and fyfty talẽtes in ſiluer/and an hũdreth talẽtes of ſiluer veſſel an hũdreth talentes of golde/and of golden veſſell ſeuen tymes twentye/ and veſſels of other metall(yee,of good metal)twelue,gliſteryng as the golde,and ſayde vnto them: ye are holy vnto the Lorde / and the Veſſels are holy, ⁊ the golde and the ſiluer is promyſed vnto the Loꝛde God of our fathers. Be dylygente nowe and kepe it / vntyll the tyme that ye delyuer it to the Rulers of the people / to the pꝛeeſtes, to the Leuytes / and to the pryncypall men of the cyties of Iſrael in Jeruſalem / ⁊ in the chamber of the houſe of our God. 1.Eſd.8.d So the Pꝛeeſtes and the Leuytes whiche receyued of me the golde / the ſyluer, and the veſſel / bꝛought it into Jeruſalem into the temple of the loꝛde. And from the ryuer of Thya we bꝛake vp the twelueth day of the fyꝛſt moneth / tyll we came to Jeruſalem. And when the thyꝛde day was paſt the weyed golde / and ſyluer was delyuered in the houſe of the Loꝛd our God the fourth day, vnto Marimoth the ſonne of Joꝛ the pꝛeſt / and with him was Eleazar the ſonne of Phinees, and with them were Joſabdus the ſonnes of Jeſuet, Medias and the ſonne of Banus, and certaine of the Leuites to the nõbꝛe and to the weyght: ⁊ the weight of thẽ was wꝛytten vp the ſame tyme. As foꝛ thoſe that were come out of captiuite, they offred ſacryfyce vnto the Loꝛd God of Iſrael: euẽ twelue oxen foꝛ al Iſraell. lxxxvj. Rammes lxxij. ſhepe. xij. goates foꝛ ſinne, twelue kine foꝛ a thankofferyng / al to the ſacrifyce of the Loꝛd. And the kynges cõmyſſion delyuered they vnto the ſtewardes and debytes of the kynge, ⁊ to the vnderſhꝛeues in Celoſyꝛia and Phenices, ⁊ they honoured the people ⁊ the temple of the Loꝛde.

1.Eſd.9.a ¶ Nowe, when theſe thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me / and ſayd: The generacion of Iſrael / the Pꝛinces, the Pꝛeſtes and Leuites, the ſtraunge people ⁊ indwellers of the lande / haue not put awaye theyꝛ vnclenneſſe, from the Cananites / Hethytes Pherelytes, from the Moabites, Egyptiãs, and Edomytes. Foꝛ bothe they ⁊ theyꝛ ſonnes haue mingled them ſelues ẘ the daughters of them / and the holy ſede is mixte with the out landyſh Heathen, ⁊ ſens the begynnyng of theyꝛ raygne haue the rulers ⁊ heades bene partakers of theyꝛ wyckedneſſe.

F 1.Eſd.9.a ¶ As ſone as I had herde theſe thynges / immediatly I rent my holy garmentes, and pulled out the heares of my head ⁊ my berd / and ſat me downe ſoꝛowfull and heuye. So al they that were moued thoꝛowe the woꝛde of the Loꝛd God of Iſrael, came vnto me: beyng ſoꝛowful foꝛ this wyckednes, and I ſat ſtyl, full of heuyneſſe vntyl the euenynge ſacrifice. Then ſtode I vp from faſtynge / hauyng rente clothes ⁊ the holy garment, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my hãdes vnto the Loꝛde, and ſayde: O Loꝛde / I am cõfounded and aſhamed befoꝛe thy face foꝛ our ſynnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wyckedneſſes are exalted vnto the heauen: foꝛ ſens the tyme of our fathers we are in great ſynne vnto this daye. And foꝛ the ſynnes of vs and our fathers / we with our bꝛethꝛen and with our Pꝛeſtes haue bene delyuered vnto the kynges of the earth, into the ſwearde / and into captiuite: ⁊ became a ſpoyle with confuſion and ſhame vnto thys daye. And nowe, O Loꝛde God / howe great is the mercy that we haue gottẽ of thee, in that ẏ haſt left vs a rote ⁊ a name ĩ ẏ place of thy ſãctuary, to diſcouer our light ĩ the houſe of the Loꝛd our God, ⁊ haſt geuẽ vs meate at all tymes of our mynyſtracyon. And when we were in captiuyte, we were not foꝛſake of the Loꝛd our God: but he made the kynges of Perſia gracyous ⁊ fauourable vnto vs, ſo that they gaue vs vytayles and meate, yee and leue to buyld vp the temple of our Loꝛd God agayne, to repayꝛe the waſted places of Syon, and to dwell in Jewꝛy and Jeruſalem. And now, O Loꝛd, what ſhall we ſaye / hauynge al theſe thynges in poſſeſſyon? Foꝛ we haue bꝛoken thy commaundementes / which thou gaueſt vnto vs by the hãdes of thy ſeruauntes ẏ pꝛophetes / ſayeng: G The lande that ye go vnto and that is geuẽ you foꝛ an herytage to haue in poſſeſſion, is defiled with the vnclẽnes and fylthynes of the Heathen, and ẘ theyꝛ abhominacion haue they poluted it al togither. Therfoꝛe, ſhal ye not ioyne your daughters, vnto theyꝛ ſonnes, noꝛ mary your ſonnes vnto theyꝛ daughters. Moꝛeouer / ye ſhall neuer ſeke to make peace with thẽ that ye maye increaſe and eate the beſt in the lãd, and that ye maye deuide the inheritaunce of the lande vnto youre childꝛen foꝛ euermoꝛe. As foꝛ the thynge that now happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all foꝛ our wycked woꝛkes and great ſinnes, yet haſt thou geuẽ vs ſoch a rote, ẏ we are come agayne into our owne lande / and we are ſo wycked ẏ we haue bꝛoken thy ſtatutes ⁊ cõmaundementes agayne and mengled our ſelues with the vnclennes of the outlandyſh Heathen. O Loꝛde / arte ẏ angrye with vs? wylte thou rote vs cleane out? that our rote and name remayne no moꝛe? O Loꝛd God of Iſrael thou art true, foꝛ oure rote endureth yet vnto thys pꝛeſent day. And beholde, now are we befoꝛe the in our ſynnes, now can we not ſtãde befoꝛe the in them.

¶ And when Eſdꝛas ẘ thys pꝛayer had knowleged knoledged the ſynne, weppynge, and lyenge flat vpon the grounde before the tēple, there gathered vnto hym from Jeruſalē a greate multitude of men and wemen/ of yonge mē and maydens, for there was a very greate weppyng ⁊ mournynge in the cōgregacyon. So when Jechonias the ſōne of Jehely one of the chyldren of Iſrael cryed, he ſayd vnto Eſdras: we haue ſynned againſt the Lorde, becauſe we haue maried outlandyſh wemē of the Heathen. Nowe art yͧ ouer all Iſrael. We wyll ſweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we ſhall put awaye all our wyues, whiche we haue taken of the Heathen, with theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted the by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, open thou it/ ⁊ declare it playnely vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, ⁊ we wyll helpe the, quite thy ſelf manly. So Eſdras aroſe, and toke an othe of the rulers of the preſtes, and of the Leuytes/and of all Iſrael/to do after theſe thynges: and they ſware.

¶ After Eſdras had reade the lawe, the people put awaye theyr ſtraunge wyues: and then returneth euery man merely vnto hys owne dwellynge.

CAPI. IX.

A THEN Eſdras ſtode vp frō the courte of the temple without, ⁊ went in to the chamber of Jonathas the ſōne of Naſabus, and remayned there, ⁊ dyd eate no meat, nor dronke drynke, for the multytude of the people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewry ⁊ at Jeruſalem, for all ſuch as were gathered at Jeruſalē out of captiuite, yͭ whoſoeuer came not to Jeruſalem within two or thre dayes (accordynge to the iudgement of yͤ olde lordes of councel) his goodes ſhulde be taken from hym/ and be excluded frō the congregacion of the captyuyte. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda and Beniamin gathered together at Jeruſalem, the twētyeth daye of the nynth moneth. And the whole multytude ſat tremblynge in the courte of the temple, for it was wynter. So Eſdras aroſe vp, ⁊ ſayde vnto them: ye haue done vnryghteouſly, in that ye haue take outlandyſh wiues to mariage, and ſo to increaſe the ſynnes of Iſrael. And nowe knoledge the ſame, and geue prayſe vnto the Lorde God of our fathers/ ⁊ performe hys wyll/ departynge from the heathen of the lande/ and from the outlandyſhe

B wyues. Then cryed the whole multytude with loude voyce/ ⁊ ſayd: lyke as yͧ haſt ſpoken, ſo wyll we do: but for ſo much as yͤ people are many/ and the wynter here/ we may nat ſtāde without the houſe: agayne, thys worke is nat a thynge/ yͭ can be fynyſhed in a daye or two, for we be many yͭ haue ſynned in theſe thynges. Ordeyne therfore that the rulers of the multytude ⁊ they yͭ dwell with vs, ⁊ as many as haue outlandyſh wiues, yͤ preſtes alſo and iudges of euery place may ſtāde in the tyme appoynted, tyl they ſwage the wrath of the Lorde in this buſynes.

Eſdr.x.b.

Then Jonathas the ſonne of Ezely, and Ozias and Thecan receaued the charge of this matter/ ⁊ Bozoramus, and Letus/ and Sabatheus helped them therto. After thys, all they ſtode vp that were come out of captyuyte. And Eſdras the preſt choſe vnto hym the pryncypall men from amonge the fathers accordynge to theyr names/ ⁊ in the newe mone of the tenth moneth they ſat together, to examen thys matter. C And ſo the matter was a determynynge (concernynge the men that had outlandyſh wyues) vntyl the newe mone of the fyrſt moneth. And of the preſtes that had myxte them ſelues with outlandyſh wyues/ there were founde, *Of the ſonnes of Jeſu the ſonne of Joſedec and hys brethren, Mazeas/ Eleazar/ Jozibus ⁊ Joadeus/ whiche offred them ſelues to put awaye theyr wyues/ and to offre a ramme for theyr ignoraunce. And of the ſonnes of Semmeri/ Maſſeas/ and Eſſes/ ⁊ Jeelech Azarias. Of the ſōnes of Foſera, Limoſias, Hiſmaen/ Nathanea/ Juſſio, Jeddus, and Talſas. And of the Leuytes Joſabdus, Semeis/ and Colnis/ Caletas/ Facteas, Colnas/ ⁊ Elionas. Of the ſyngers of the Sanctuary/ Eliarib, Zackarus. Of the porters, Sallumus and Tolbanes. And of Iſrael/ of the chyldren of Fozo, Oſi/ ⁊ Remias, ⁊ Geddias, ⁊ Melchias/ Michilus, Eleazarus/ Jemmebias/ ⁊ Bannas. And the chyldrē of Jolamā/ Chamas/ Zachari/ Jeireelus/ Joddius, Erimoth/ and Elias. D And of yͤ ſonnes of Jathoim/ Eliadas, Liſamus/ ⁊ Zochias, Larimoth/ Sabdis/ and Tebedias. And of the ſonnes of Zebes/ Johannes/ Amanias/ Zabdias/ ⁊ Emmeus. And of yͤ ſonnes of Bannꝰ/ Olāmus/ Maluchus/ Jeddus, Jaſub, Aſabus/ and Jerimoth. And of yͤ ſonnes of Addin, Naatus, ⁊ Mooſias, ⁊ Calcꝰ, and Raanas, Maaluas Mathathias/ Beſel, Bannꝰ, ⁊ Manaſſes.

1.Eſdr.x.c.

And of the ſōnes of Naue, Mones, Alcas, Melchias, Sanneas, Simon/ Beniamin, Malchus and Marras. And of the ſōnes of Aſom, Carianeus/ Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manaſſes, Semei. Of the ſonnes of Bauues, Jeremy, Moodias, Abramas, mas, Joel/Baneas/Peliaas/ Jona/Maramoth, Eliaſib, Mathaneus, Eliaſis, Ozias, Dielus/Memedi⁹, zambris, & Joſeph. Of the ſonnes of Nobeus, Jdelus, Mathathias, Sabad⁹, Zecheda, Sedmi, Jeſſeus, and Baneas. All theſe had taken outlãdyſh women to mariage, and they put thẽ awaye with theyr chyldren.

E The preſtes and Leuites/and all they that were of Jſrael, dwelt at Jeruſalem and thorowout all the lande, in the newe moone of the ſeuenth moneth, & the chyldren of Jſraell were in theyr dwellynges. And the whole multitude came together vpon the floore at the Eaſt ſyde of the holy porte of the tẽple. And they ſpake vnto Eſdras the hye preſte and reader/that he wolde brynge the lawe of Moſes, whiche was geuen of the Lorde God of Jſrael. So Eſdras the hye Preſt brought yͤ lawe vnto the whole multitude of thẽ/to mã ⁊ womã, & to all Preſtes/yͭ they myght heare yͤ lawe, * in the newe mone of yͤ .vii. moneth. And he red in the floore yͭ is before the holy porte of the temple/frõ the mornyng early vnto the euenynge before men and wemen. And they applyed theyr mynde all vnto the lawe. ii.Eſd.iii.a ii.Eſd.iii.a

F And Eſdras the Preſt and reader of the lawe ſtode vp vpon a pulpyt of wodde, whiche was made therfore: and vpon his ryght hande there ſtode by hym Mathathias/Samus/Ananias/Azarias/Urias/Ozechias, and Balſamus: Upon his lefte hande ſtode Faldeus/ Miſael/ Malachias/ Abuſchas/ Sabus/ Nabadias and Zachary. Then toke Eſdras the boke before the whole multytude/for he was the pryncypall/ & had in moſt honoure of them all. And when he had red out the lawe/they ſtode al ſtrayght vpõ theyr fete. So Eſdras prayſed the Lorde the moſt hye God/yͤ almyghty God of Hoſtes. And all the people anſwered: Amen: and helde vp theyr handes/fell downe flat vpõ the earth/and prayſed the Lorde. And Jeſus/Beneas, Sarebias/Jaddinus/Accubus/Sabbatheus Calitthes, Azarias/Jozadus, Ananias, & Philias the Leuites lyft theyr handes vpwarde, & bowed their faces

G to the grounde/& prayſed the Lorde: Thoſe were they which taught the law of the Lord and red the lawe of the Lord/in the congregacion: & euery man ſet them before that vnderſtode the lawe. Then ſpoke Atharates vnto Eſdras the hye Preſt & reder/& to the Leuites that taught the multytude/ ſaying Thys daye is holy vnto the Lorde: and all they that had hearde the lawe/wepte. So Eſdras ſayde: * Departe youre waye then/ and eate yͤ beſt/& drynke the ſweteſt, & ſende gyftes vnto them that haue nothynge: for this daye is holy vnto the Lorde and be nat ye ſory/ for the Lorde wyll brynge you to honoure. And the Leuytes ſhewed it openly to them all, ſaynge: This daye is holy be ye not ſory. Then wente they theyr waye euery chone, and dyd eate and drynke, and were mery, and ſente rewardes vnto them that had nothynge, yͭ they alſo myght eate with gladneſſe: for they were excedyngly reioyſed, thorowe the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe. And ſo they were all gathered together at Jeruſalem to holde the feaſt, accordynge to the couenaunte of the Lorde God of Jſrael. 2.Eſd.8.c

But nowe what ſhall I do vnto you? I ſhal caſt you out fro my face? * When ye offre vnto me/ I ſhal turne my face from you: for your ſolempne feaſt dayes, youre newe moones/ and your circumcyſyons haue I forſake. I ſent vnto you my ſeruaūtes the Prophetes, whom ye haue taken and ſlayne, and torne theyr bodyes in peces / whoſe bloude I wyll requere of youre handes, ſayeth the Lorde. Math.xxiij.d.

Thus ſayeth the Almyghty Lorde: youre houſe muſt be deſolate, I wyll caſte you out as the wynde doth the ſtrawe, youre chyldrē ſhall nat be frutefull, for they haue deſpyſed my commaundement/ and done the thynge that is euell before me. Youre houſes wyl I geue vnto a people that ſhall come, & * they that neuer harde me/ ſhall beleue in me: and they vnto whom I neuer ſhewed tokē, ſhall do the thyng ẏ I cōmaunde thē. They haue ſene no Prophetes, yet ſhall they call theyr ſynnes to remembraunce / and knowledge them. I reporte me vnto the grace, ẏ I wyl do for the people which is come / whoſe chyldren reioyſe in gladnes: & though they haue not ſene me with bodely eyes, yet in ſprete they beleue the thing that I ſaye. THVS ſayeth the Lorde: I brought thys people out of bondage, I gaue them my commaundementes by my ſeruauntes the Prophetes / whiche they wolde nat heare / but deſpyſed my counſels. The mother that bare them / ſayeth vnto them: Go youre waye ye chyldren / for I am a wydowe and forſaken: I brought you vp with gladneſſe / but with ſorowe and heuynes haue I loſte you: for ye haue ſynned before the Lorde youre God, and done the thynge that is euell before hym. But what ſhall I nowe do vnto you? I am a wyddowe and forſaken: go youre waye, O my chyldre, and aſke mercy of the Lorde. As for me, O father/ I call vpon the for a wytneſſe ouer the mother of theſe chyldren, whiche wolde not kepe my couenaunt, that thou brynge them to confuſyon, and theyr mothers to ſpoyle, that ſhe beare no more. Let theyr names be ſcatred abroade amonge the Heathen, let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thought ſcorne of my couenaunte.

Wo be vnto the Aſſur/ thou that hydeſt ỷ vnryghtuous by the. Thou wycked people, remembre* what I dyd vnto Sodome & Gomorre, whoſe lāde is turned to pytch and aſhes. Euen ſo alſo wyll I do vnto all them/ that heare me not, ſayeth ỷ almyghty Lorde. Thus ſayeth the Lorde vnto Eſdras: Tell my people/ ỷ I wyl geue thē the kyngdome of Ieruſalem, whiche I wolde haue geuen vnto Iſrael. Theyr glory alſo wyll I take vnto me/ & geue them the euerlaſtynge tabernacles/ whiche I had prepared for thoſe.

And thoſe that be dead wyll I rayſe vp agayne from theyr places, and brynge them out of the graues/ for I haue knowen my name in Iſraell. Feare nat thou mother of the chyldren/ for I haue choſen the, ſayeth the Lorde. And for thy helpe I ſhall ſende the my ſeruauntes Eſay and Ieremy/ after whoſe councel I haue ſanctifyed and prepared for the twelue trees loded with dyuerſe frutes/ and as many welles, flowynge with mylke & hony/ and ſeuen moūtaynes/ wherupon there growe roſes and lylyes/ wherin I wyll fyll my chyldren with ioye. For when the daye of trouble and heuynes cometh/ other ſhall wepe and be ſorowfull/ but thou ſhalt be mery and plenteous. The Heathē ſhalbe gelous, but they ſhalbe able to do nothynge agaynſt the/ ſayeth the Lorde. My handes ſhall couer the/ ſo that thy children ſhal nat ſe the fyre euerlaſtyng. Be ioyfull, O thou mother with thy chyldren/ for I wyll delyuer the/ ſayeth ỷ Lorde. Remembre thy deed chyldren/ for I ſhall brynge them out of the earth/ and ſhewe mercy vnto them/ for I am mercyful/ ſayeth the Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chyldren/ vntyll I come, and ſhewe mercy vnto them/ for my welles runne ouer/ and my grace ſhall nat fayle.

I Eſdras receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb/ that I ſhulde go vnto Iſraell. But when I came vnto Iſraell they ſet me at naught and deſpiſed the commaundemente of the Lorde. And therfore I ſaye vnto you, O ye Heathē that heare and vnderſtande: Loke for youre ſhepherde/ he ſhall geue you euerlaſtynge reſt, for he is nye at hande/ that ſhall come in the ende of the worlde. Be readye to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerlaſtynge lyght ſhall ſhyne vpon you for euermore. Fle the ſhadowe of this worlde/ receaue the ioyfulnes of your glory. I teſtifie my ſauyour openly: O receaue the gyfte that is geuen you/ & be glad, geuynge thankes vnto hym ỷ hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Aryſe vp, and ſtande faſte: beholde the nombre of thoſe that be ſealed in the feaſt of the Lorde, whiche are departed from the ſhadowe of the worlde/ and haue receaued gloryous garmentes of the Lorde. Take thy nombre O Syon/ and ſhut vp thy puryfyed, whiche haue fulfylled the lawe of the Lorde. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longedeſt for/ is fulfylled: beſeche the power of the Lorde, that thy people whiche haue bene called frō the begynnynge/ maye be halowed.

*I Eſdras ſawe vpon the mount Syon a great people/ whom I coulde nat nombre, and they all prayſed the Lorde with ſonges of thankeſgeuynge. And in the myddeſt of them there was a yonge man of an hye ſtature, more excellente then al they, & vpon euery one of theyr heades he ſet a crowne, & was euer higher and higher, whiche I marueled at greatly. So I aſked the angel, and ſayd: Syr, what are theſe? He anſwered and ſayde vnto me: Theſe be they, that haue put of the mortall clothynge and put on the immortal, and haue teſtifyed and knowledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned, & receyue the rewarde.

Then ſayde I vnto the Aungell: what yonge perſonne is it, that crowneth them / & geueth thē the palmes in theyr handes? So he anſwered, & ſayde vnto me: It is yͤ ſonne of God, whom they haue knowledged in the worlde. Then begāne I greately to cōmende thē, yͭ ſtode ſo ſtyfly for the name of the Lord And ſo the angel ſayd vnto me: Go thy way, & tell my people, what maner of thinges and howe greate wonders of the Lorde thy God, thou haſt ſene.

¶ The wonderous workes whiche God dyd for the people are recited. Eſdras marueileth that God ſuffreth the Babilonias to haue rule ouer his people, which yet are ſiners alſo.

CAPI. III.

A IN the thyrtyeth yeare of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bed / and my thoughtes came vp ouer my herte: for I ſawe the deſolacion of Syon, and the plentuous wealthe of them that dwelte at Babylon: and my ſpryte was ſore moued / ſo that I beganne to ſpeake ferefull wordes to the moſt hyeſt / and ſayd: O Lorde Lord / thou ſpakeſt at the begynnyng when thou plantedſt the earth (and that thy ſelfe alone) and gaueſt commaundement vnto the people / and a body vnto Adā / whiche was a creature of thy handes, & haſt brethed in him the brethe of lyfe: & ſo he lyued before the / and thou leddeſte him into Paradyſe / whiche garden of pleaſure thy ryght hande had plāted, or euer yͤ earth was made. And vnto him thou gaueſt commaundemente to loue thy way / whiche he trāſgreſſed, and immedyately thou appoyntedſt death in hym / and in his generacions. Of hym came na-

B cyons, trybes people and kynreddes out of nombre. ene.vi.b. * And euery people walcked after their owne wyll / and dyd nyce thynges before the: & as for thy cōmaundementes, they deſpyſed them.

ene.vii.b * But in proceſſe of tyme thou broughteſt the water floude / vpon thoſe that dwelte in the worlde, and deſtroyedſt them. And lyke as the death was in Adam, ſo was yͤ water floude alſo in theſe. Neuertheleſſe one of thē thou lefteſt: namely Noe with his houſe holde, of whome came all ryghtuous men. And it happened that when they that dwelt vpon the earth / beganne to multyplye, and had gotten many chyldren, and were a great people / they begāne to be more vngodly thē the fyrſte.

Nowe when they all lyued ſo wyckedly before the / * thou dydeſt choſe the a man frō amonge them, whoſe name was Abraham. Gene.12.15. Him thou louedſt, and vnto hym onely thou ſhewedſt thy wyl, and madeſt an euerlaſting couenaunt with hym, promyſynge him, that thou woldeſt neuer forſake his ſede. Gene.xxi.a Gene.xxv.c * And vnto him thou gaueſt Iſaac, * vnto Iſaac alſo thou gaueſt Iacob and Eſau. As for Gene.32.a Iacob thou dydeſt choſe him / and put backe Eſau. * And ſo Iacob became a greate multytude.

C And it happened that when thou leddeſt his ſede out of Egypt, * thou broughteſt thē Exod.xix.a Deut.iiii.b vp to the mounte Syon bowyng downe the heauens, ſettynge faſt the earthe, mouynge the grounde, makyng the depthes to ſhake / and troublynge the worlde: And thy glorye went thorowe foure partes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes / and colde: that thou myghteſt geue the lawe vnto the ſede of Iacob / & diligēce vnto yͤ generacion of Iſrael.

And yet tokeſt thou not away from them that wycked herte, yͭ thy lawe myght brynge forth frute in them. For the fyrſt Adam bare a wycked hert / tranſgreſſed, and was ouercome, & ſo be all they that are borne of hym Roma.5.c * Thus remayneth wickednes with the law in the herte of the people, wͭ the wyckeneſſe of the rote: ſo that the good departed awaye and the euyll abode ſtyll. So the tymes paſſed awaye / and the yeares were brought to an ende. 1.Reg.16.a * Then dydeſt thou rayſe the vp a ſeruaūt called Dauid, 2.Reg.v.c. * whom thou cōmaūdedſt to buylde a cyte vnto thy name, and to offre vp incenſe and ſacryfyce vnto the therin. This was done nowe many yeares. Thē the inhabiters of the cyte forſoke the & in all thīges dyd euē as Adā & al his generacions had done: for they alſo had a wicked hert.

D And ſo thou gaueſt thy cyte ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon thē better and more ryghtuous then thy people, that they ſhall therfore haue the domynyon of Syon? For when I came there / and ſawe theyr vngodlynes, and ſo greate wyckedneſſe / that it coulde not be nombred: yee / when my ſoule ſaw ſo many euyl doers (in the thyrtye yeare) my herte fayled me for I ſawe, how thou ſuffredſt them in ſuch vngodlynes, and ſpareſt the wicked doers: but thyne owne people haſt thou roted out/ and preſerued thyne enemyes, and this haſt thou not ſhewed me.

I can not perceyue howe thys happened. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there any other people/ that knoweth the/ ſauynge the people of Iſrael? Or what generacion hath ſo beleued thy couenauntes, as Iacob? And yet theyr rewarde appeareth not, & theyr labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here & there thorow yͤ Heathen, & I ſe that they be riche & wealthy, and thyncke not vpon thy cõmaundementes. Wey thou therfore our wyckedneſſe now in the balaunce, and theirs alſo yͭ dwel in the worlde, & ſo ſhal thy name be no where foũde but in Iſrael. Or where is there a people vpon earth/ that hath not ſined before the? Or what people hath ſo kept thy cõmaundemẽtes? Thou ſhalt fynde/ that Iſrael by name hath kepte thy preceptes / but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The angell reproueth Esdras because he semed to enter into the profounde iudgementes of God.

CAPI. IIII.

A AND the angel that was ſent vnto me (whoſe name was Uriell) gaue me an anſwere, & ſaid: Thy hert hath take to much vpon it in this worlde, and yͭ thynkeſt to comprehende the way of the hyeſt. Then ſayd I: Yee my Lorde. And he anſwered me, & ſayd: I am ſent to ſhew the thre wayes, and to ſet forth thre ſymylitudes, before the: wherof yf thou canſt declare me one, I wyll ſhewe the alſo the waye/ that thou deſyreſt to ſe: and I ſhall ſhewe the frome whence the wycked herte commeth. And I ſayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then ſayde he vnto me: Go thy way, weye me the weyght of the fyre / or meaſure me the blaſte of the wynde/ or cal me agayne the daye that is paſt. Then anſwered I and ſayde: What man borne is able to do that? why requyreſt thou ſuch of me? And he ſaid vnto me: If I ſhulde aſke the/ howe depe dwellynges are in the ſee? Or how great water ſprynges are vpon the firmamẽt? Or how great water ſprynges are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or whiche are the out goynges of Paradyſe? Peraduenture thou woldeſt ſaye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet into the depe nor hel, neither dyd I euer clime vp into heauen. Neuertheleſſe/ nowe haue I aſked the but onely of fyre and wynde and of the day, where thorow thou haſt trauayled/ and from the which thou canſt not be ſeperated: and yet canſt thou geue me no anſwere of them.

He ſayd moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thinges, & ſuche as are growne vp with the, canſt thou not knowe: howe ſhuld thy veſſel then be able to comprehende the waye of the hyeſt/ and nowe outwardely in the corrupte worlde, to vnderſtãde the corrupcion that is euidẽt in my ſight? Then ſaide I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all/ then that we ſhulde lyue in wyckedneſſe/ & to ſuffre/ & not to knowe wherfore. B He anſwered me/ & ſayde: I wente in a wod, & * the trees toke ſuch a deuyſe and ſayd: Come let vs go and fyght againſt the ſee, that it may depart away before vs, and that we maye make vs yet more woddes.

The floudes of the ſee alſo in lyke maner toke thys deuyſe, and ſayde: Come let vs go vp/ and fyght agaynſt the trees of the wood yͭ we maye make our lande the wyder. The thought & deuyce of the wod was but vayne & nothing worth, for the fyre came and conſumed the wod: The thought of the floudes of the ſee came likewiſe to naught alſo, for the ſande ſtode vp and ſtopped them.

If thou were iudge nowe betwyxte theſe two, whom woldeſt thou iuſtyfie, or whome woldeſt thou condemne? I anſwered & ſayd: Verely it is a folyſhe thought that they both haue deuyſed. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wod, and the ſee alſo hath his place to bere his floudes. Then anſwered he me/ and ſayde: Thou haſt geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudgeſt thou not thy ſelfe alſo? For lyke as the grounde is geuen vnto the wod / and the ſee to his floudes: euen ſo * they yͭ dwell vpon earth, may vnderſtande nothyng, but that whiche is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauẽs, may only vnderſtand the thynges, yͭ are aboue the heauens. Then anſwered I/ and ſayd: I beſeche yͤ, O Lord, let me haue vnderſtandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thinges, but of ſuche as we dayly medle withall/ namely, wherefore that Iſraell is blaſphemed of the Heathẽ, and for what cauſe the people (whom thou euer haſt loued) is geuen ouer/ to be puniſhed of vngodly nacyons: & why yͤ lawe of our fathers is brought to naught, and the wrytten couenauntes come to none effecte, and we paſſe away out of the worlde as the greſhoppers, & our life is a very feare and we are not worthy to optayne mercye. What wyll he do then vnto his name/ which is called vpõ ouer vs? Of theſe thĩges haue I aſked a queſtyon.

C Then anſwered he me, & ſayde: The more thou ſearcheſt/ the more thou ſhalt marueile for the worlde haſteth faſt to paſſe awaye/ & can not comprehende the thinges ẏ are promyſed for the rightuous in tyme to come, for Iohn.v.c *this worlde is ful of vnryghtuouſnes and weakenes.

But as concernynge the thinges wherof thou aſkeſt me/ I wyll tell the. The euyll is ſowed, but the deſtruccion therof is not yet come. Yf the euyl nowe that is ſowed, be not turned vpſyde downe, & yf the place where the euyll is ſowne, paſſe not awaye/ then can not the thyng come that is ſowne with good For the corne of euyll ſede hathe bene ſowne in the hert of man from the begynnyng, and how muche vngodlines hath he brought vp vnto this tyme? and how muche ſhall he yet brynge forth, vntyll he come into the barne?

Ponder nowe by thy ſelf, whē the corne of euyll ſede is cut downe, howe great a barne ſhall it fyll? I anſwered and ſayde. Howe & whē ſhall theſe thinges come to paſſe? wherfore are your yeares fewe & euyl? And he anſwered me, ſayinge: Haſt not thou to muche vpon the hyeſt, for thy haſtynes to be aboue him is but vayne/ thou makeſt to much a do. Did not the ſoules alſo of ẏ rightuous aſke queſtyon of theſe thynges in theyr holynes/ ſaying: poca.6.b *Howe long ſhall I hope of thys faſhyon? when cōmeth the frute of my barne/ and my reward? And vpon this Ieremiel ẏ Archangel gaue thē anſwere, and ſayd: Euē when ẏ nōbre of the ſedes is filled in you/ for he hath weyed ẏ world in the balaūce: in meſure & nōbre hath he meaſured ẏ tyme, & moueth it not, vntyll ẏ ſame meaſure be fulfylled. Thē anſwered I & ſaid: O Lord, Lord, now are we al ful of ſine, & for our ſake peraduenture it is not/ ẏ the barne of the ryghtuous ſhal not be fylled, becauſe of the ſines of thē that dwel vpon the earth.

D So he anſwered me, & ſayd: Go thy waye to a womā with chylde, and aſke of her, whē ſhe hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her chyldbed may kepe ẏ birth any longer within her. Then ſayd I: No Lorde, that can ſhe not. And he ſayde vnto me: In hell the ſecret places of ſoules are lyke the preuy chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauayleth, maketh haſte/ when the tyme/ and neceſſyte of the byrthe is at hande. Euen ſo doth ſhe haſt to delyuer it that is commytted vnto her. Loke what thou deſyreſt to ſe/ it ſhall be ſhewed the from the begynnynge. Then anſwered I, & ſayde: If I haue founde fauoure in thy ſyght / and yf it be poſſyble/ and yf it be mete therfore, ſhewe me then/ whether there be more to come then is paſt/ or more paſte then is for to come. What is paſte/ I knowe: but what is for to come/ I knowe not.

And he ſayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght ſyde/ and I ſhall expounde the ſymylitude vnto the. So I ſtode, and behold, an whote burnynge ouen wente ouer before me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by/ the ſmoke had the vpper hāde After this there went ouer before me a watery cloude, and ſent downe much rayne with a ſtorme: & when the ſtormy rayne was paſt the droppes remayned ſtyll. Then ſayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes/ and as the fyre exceadeth the ſmoke / euen ſo the meaſure of the thynges that are paſt, hath the vpperhande. Then wente the droppes and the ſmoke aboue: and I prayed and ſayde: May I lyue (thynkeſt thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what ſhall happen in thoſe dayes? He anſwered me, and ſayde: As for the tokēs wherof thou aſkeſt me/ I may tell the of them in a parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I may not ſhewe the / for I am not ſent therfore.

¶ Eſdras and the Angell comen together.

CAPI. V.

Neuertheleſſe / as concernynge the tokens/ marke this: Beholde/ the dayes ſhall come / that they whiche dwell vppon earth, ſhalbe taken in a greate nombre/ and the waye of the trueth ſhalbe hyd/ & the land ſhalbe baren from fayth: but *iniquite ſhal haue the vpperhande, lyke as thou haſt ſene nowe, & as thou haſt herde longe ago: And ẏ lande that thou ſeyſt now to haue rule, ſhalt thou ſhortly ſe waſte. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou ſhalt ſe after the thyrde trōpet, that the ſūne ſhal ſodenly ſhyne agayne in the night, & the mone thre tymes i the day, & bloude ſhall droppe out of wodde, and the ſtone ſhall geue his voyce, & the people ſhal be vnquyete: and euen he ſhall rule, whom they hope not/ that dwell vpon earthe/ & the foules ſhall flyt, & the Sodomytiſhe ſee ſhall caſt out his fyſh, & make a noyſe in the nyght which many ſhall not knowe/ but they ſhall all heare the voyce therof. A Mat.24.a

There ſhalbe a cōfuſion alſo in many places, and the fyre ſhalbe oft ſent agayne/ and the wylde beaſtes ſhall go theyr waye / and menſtruous wemen ſhall beare monſters/ & ſalt waters ſhall be founde in the ſwete: one frende ſhal fyght agaynſt another: then ſhall all wyt and vnderſtandyng be hyd and put aſyde into their ſecrete places, & ſhalbe ſought of many, and yet not be foūde: then ſhal vn ryghtuouſnes and voluptuouſnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One lāde alſo ſhal aſke another/and ſay: Is ryghtuouſnes gone thorowe the? And it ſhall ſaye: No. At the ſame tyme ſhall men hope, but nothynge optayne: they ſhall laboure / but theyr wayes ſhall not proſpere.

¶ To ſhewe the ſuche tokens I haue leue / and yf thou wylt praye agayne, ⁊ wepe as nowe and faſt ſeuen dayes, thou ſhalt heare B yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnes went thorowe all my body/ and my mynde was feble and carefull, ſo that I almoſt ſowned withall. So the angell that was come to talke with me, helde me/ cōforted me/and ſet me vpon my fete.

And in the ſeconde nyght it happened / ẏ Salathiel the captayne of the people came vnto me/ſaying: Where haſt thou bene? and why is thy countenaunce ſo heuy? Knoweſt thou not, that Iſrael is cōmitted vnto the, in the lande of theyr captiuite? Vp then/⁊ eate, ⁊ forſake vs not, as ẏ ſhepherde that leaueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then ſayd I vnto hym: Go thy way fro me, ⁊ come not nye me, ⁊ he herde it/as I ſaid: ſo went he his way fro me. And ſo I faſted ſeuē dayes, mournyng ⁊ wepyng, lyke as Uriell the angel cōmaunded me. And after ſeuē dayes it happened ẏ the thoughtes of my herte were very greuous vnto me agayne / ⁊ my ſoule receyued the ſpirete of vnderſtandyng/ and I beganne to talke with the moſte hyeſt agayne/and ſayde: O Lorde, Lord/ of euery wood of the earth and all the trees therof: thou haſt choſen the one onely vyneyarde: and of all landes of the whole worlde thou haſt choſen one pyt: and of al floures of the grounde thou haſt choſen the one lylye: and of all the depthes of the ſee thou haſt fylled the one ryuer: and of all buylded cyties thou haſt halowed Syon vnto thy ſelfe: and of al the foules that are created, thou haſt named the one doue: ⁊ of all the catell that are made thou haſt prouyded the one ſhepe: and amōg all the multytudes of folckes thou haſt gotten the one people, ⁊ vnto this people whom thou louedſt/thou gaueſt a law/that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why haſte thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many/and vpon the one rote thou haſt prepared other, ⁊ why haſt thou ſcatred thy one onely people among many/ which treade them downe / yet which haue euer withſtande thy promyſes, and neuer beleued thy couenauntes? And though thou wereſt enemye vnto thy people/yet ſhuldeſt thou punyſh them with thyne owne hādes. Nowe whē I had ſpoken theſe wordes ẏ angell ẏ came to me ẏ nyght afore, was ſente vnto me, ⁊ ſayde vnto me: C Heare me/and herken to the thynge that I ſay, ⁊ I ſhal tel the more. And I ſaid: Speke on my Lorde. Then ſayd he vnto me. Thou arte ſore vexed ⁊ troubled for Iſraels ſake. Loueſt thou that people better thē hym that made them? And I ſayd to hym: No Lorde/ but of very grefe ⁊ cōpaſſion haue I ſpoken For my reines payne me euery hour, becauſe I wolde haue experiēce of the way of ẏ moſt hieſt, ⁊ to ſeke out parte of his iudgmēt. And he ſayde vnto me: ẏ thou mayeſt not. And I ſayde: Wherfore Lorde? whereunto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers childbed then my graue? So had I not ſene the miſery ⁊ trouble of Iacob, ⁊ the trauaile of my people of Iſrael.

And he ſayd vnto me: Nōbre the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together ẏ droppes, ẏ are ſcatred abroade: make me the floures grene agayne, that are withered: opē me the thyng that is cloſed: ⁊ bryng me forth the wyndes, ẏ are ſhut vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then ſhal I declare the thyng, that thou laboureſt to knowe. And I ſayde: O Lord/Lord, who may knowe theſe thinges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with men? As for me/ I am vnwyſe, howe may I then ſpeake of theſe thynges wherof thou aſkeſt me? Then ſayde he vnto me: lyke as ẏ cāſt do none of theſe thīges that I haue ſpoken of, euē ſo canſt thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende ẏ loue that I haue promyſed vnto my people. And I ſayd: Beholde, O Lorde/yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what ſhall they do/ ẏ haue bene before me/ or we that be nowe/ or they that ſhall come after vs? And he ſayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgemente vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no ſlackeneſſe of the laſt, euen ſo is there no ſwyfteneſſe of ẏ fyrſte. So I anſwered and ſayd: couldeſt thou not make thoſe (that haue bene made, ⁊ be nowe/ and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghteſt ſhewe thy iudgemente the ſoner? Then anſwered he me/and ſayde: The creature may not haſte aboue the maker, neither D may the worlde holde thē at once, that ſhal be created.

And I ſayde: Howe haſt thou ſayde then vnto thy ſeruaūte, that thou lyuynge maker, haſt made the creature lyuynge at once, and the creature bare it: euē ſo might it now alſo beare them that be preſent, at once. And he ſayde he ſayde vnto me: Aſke the chyldebed of a woma͂, and ſaye vnto her: If thou bryngeſt forth chyldren, why doeſt thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therfore to brynge forthe ten chyldren at once. And I ſayde: ſhe cannot/ but muſte do it one after another.

Then ſayde he vnto me: Euen ſo haue I geue a chyldebed vnto the earthe, for thoſe yͭ be ſowen vpo͂ it by proceſſe of tyme. For lyke as a yong chylde may not bryng forth yͤ thinges that belong to the aged: eue͂ ſo haue I ordayned the worlde which I made.

And I aſked and ſayd: Seyng thou haſt nowe geuen me a waye, I wyl ſpeake before the: for our mother of whom thou haſt tolde me/ is yet yonge/ and nowe ſhe draweth nye vnto age? He anſwered me, and ſayde. Aſke a woma͂ that beareth chyldren, and ſhe ſhall tell yͤ. Say vnto her: wherfore are not they (whom thou haſte nowe brought forth) lyke thoſe that were before yͤ, but leſſe of ſtature? And ſhe ſhall anſwere the: They that be borne in the youth of ſtre͂gth, are of one faſhyon and they that are borne in the tyme of age/ (when the chyldebed fayleth) are other wiſe. Conſydre nowe thy ſelfe, howe that ye are leſſe of ſtature, then thoſe yͭ were before you/ & ſo are they yͭ come after you, leſſe the͂ ye: as the creatures which now begynne to be old, and haue paſſed ouer the ſtrength of youth. Then ſayd I: Lord I beſeche the, yͭ I haue founde fauoure in thy ſyght, ſhewe thy ſeruaunt/ by whome doeſt thou vyſet thy creature?

¶ The Angel inſtructeth Eſdras, and geueth hym anſwere to his queſtyons.

CAPI. VI.

A AND he ſayde vnto me. In the begynnyng when the grounde was made: before the worlde ſtode, or euer the wyndes blew before it thondred and lyghtned, or euer the foundacions of Paradyſe were layed/ before the fayre floures were ſene, or euer the moueable powers were ſtabliſhed/ before the innumerable multitude of Angels were gathered together, or euer the hyghneſſes of the ayre were lyfted vp/ afore the meaſures of the firmament were named, or euer the chimnes in Syon were hote, & or the preſent yeres were ſought out/ and or euer the inuencyons of them that nowe ſynne, were put aſyde, before they were ſealed that nowe gather fayth for a treaſure: then dyd I conſydre and pondre all theſe thynges, and they all were made thorowe me, and thorowe none other: by me alſo they be ended, and by none other. Then anſwered I and ſayde: whiche ſhall be the partynge aſunder of the tymes? Or when ſhalbe the ende of the fyrſt and the begynnynge of it that foloweth? And he ſayd vnto me: From Abraham vnto Iſaac, when Iacob and Eſau were borne of hym. Iacobs hande helde fyrſte the hele of Eſau: for Eſau is the ende of this world, and Iacob is the begynnyng of it that foloweth The hande of man betwyxte the hele and the hande. Other queſtyon (Eſdras) aſke thou not.

I anſwered then, & ſayde: O Lord, Lord/ yͭ I haue founde fauour in thy ſyght/ I beſech the, ſhewe thy ſeruaunte the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou ſhewedſt me parte the laſt nyght. So he anſwered and ſayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce of ſounde. There ſhall come a greate mocyon/ but the place where thou ſtandeſt ſhall not be moued. And therfore whe͂ thou hereſt the wordes, be not afrayed: B for of the ende ſhall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderſtand. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh for it knoweth, that it muſte be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, yͭ when I had hearde it, I ſtode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: & beholde, there was a voyce that ſpake, & the ſounde of it was lyke yͤ ſounde of many waters, and it ſayde: Beholde, the dayes come/ that I wyll begynne to drawe nye, & to vyſet them that dwell vpon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquiſycion of them/ what they be that haue hurt equite with vnryghtuouſnes/ and when the low eſtate of Syon ſhalbe fulfylled: and when the worlde, that ſhall vanyſhe away, ſhalbe ouerſealed, then wyll I do theſe tokens.

The Bokes ſhalbe opened before the firmament, and they ſhall ſe all together, & the chyldre͂ of a yere olde ſhall ſpeake with their voyces: the wemen with chylde ſhall brynge forth vntymely chyldren of thre or foure monethes olde, and they ſhall lyue/ and be rayſed vp: and ſode͂ly ſhall the ſowen places appeare as the vnſowen/ the full ſtorehouſes ſhall ſodenly be founde emptye: & the trompet ſhall geue a ſounde, which whe͂ euery ma͂ heareth, they ſhalbe ſodenly afrayed. *At yͤ tyme ſhall frendes fyght one agaynſt another lyke enemyes, and the earthe ſhall ſtande in feare with them. Mich. vii. a Math. x. c

The ſprynges of the welles ſhall ſtande ſtyll/ and in thre houres they ſhall not renne. Whoſoeuer remaineth fro͂ all theſe thynges that I that I haue told the/ſhall eſcape,and ſe my ſaluacyon,and the ende of your worlde. And the men that haue receyued/ſhall ſe it/ they that haue not taſted deathe from theyr byrth:and the hert of the indwellers ſhal be chaunged,& turned into another meanynge for euyll ſhalbe put out/ and diſceyte ſhalbe quenched. As for fayth, it ſhall floryſhe,corrupcion ſhalbe ouercome:& the truth,which hath bene ſo longe without frute,ſhalbe declared. And it happened when he talked wt me,that I loked demurely vpon him,before whome I ſtode/ and theſe wordes ſayde he vnto me: I am come to ſhewe the/the tyme of the nyght for to come.

Yf thou wylte praye yet more,and faſt ſeuen dayes agayne,I ſhall tell the more thinges, and greater then before, for thy voyce is hearde before the hyeſt:for why?ẏ myghtye hathe ſene thy ryghtuous dealynge / he hath ſene alſo thy chaſtyte/ which thou haſt had euer ſence thy youth:and therfore hathe he ſent me to ſhewe the al theſe thynges,& to ſaye vnto the: Be of good comforte,& feare not/and haſt not wt the tymes that are paſte to thyncke vayne thynges,& make not haſte of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this/that I wept agayne/and faſted ſeuen dayes in lyke maner,ẏ I myght fulfyll the thre wekes:which he tolde me. In the eyght night was my hert vexed withī me agayne,& I begāne to ſpeke before the hyeſt:for my ſprete was greatly ſet on fyre/and my ſoule was in diſtreſſe, & I ſayd, O Lord,thou ſpakeſt vnto thy creature frō the begynnyng(euen the fyrſt daye) and ſaydeſt:a Let heauen & earth be made/ and thy worde was a perfecte worcke. And then was there the ſprete,and the darckeneſſes were yet on euery ſyde/and ſylence:there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then cōmaunded thou a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treaſures,that thy workes myght appere and be ſene.

Upon the ſeconde daye thou madeſt the ſprete of the firmament,and commaūdeſt it to part in ſunder,and to make a deuyſion betwixte the waters,that the one parte myght remayne aboue/and the other beneth. Upon the thyrde day thou broughteſt to paſſe,that the waters were gathered in the ſeuēth part of ẏ earth:ſyxe partes haſt thou dryed vp/ and kepte them, to thyntent that mē myght ſowe & occupye huſbandry therin. As ſoone as thy worde wente forth / the worcke was made. For immediatly there was greate innumerable frute/and many diuerſe pleaſures & deſyres of tēptacyon,floures of chaungeable coloure and ſmel/and this was done the thyrde day.

* Upon the.iiii.daye thou cōmaundedſt ẏ the Sunne ſhuld geue his ſhyne,& the mone her lyght:the ſtarres dydeſt thou ſet in order & gaueſt thē a charge:to do ſeruyce euen vnto man/that was for to be made. Upon the fyfth daye thou ſaydeſt vnto the ſeuenthe part(where the * waters were gathered)that they ſhulde brynge forthe diuerſe beaſtes/ foules and fyſhes. And ſo it came to paſſe, that the domme water and without ſoule/ brought forth lyuynge beaſtes/ at the commaundement of God,that all people myght prayſe thy wonderous worckes. Then dydeſt thou preſerue two ſoules/ the one thou calledſt Enoch and the other Leuiathan, & dideſt ſeperate the one from the other:for the ſeuenth parte(namely,where the water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Unto Enoch thou gaueſt one parte/ whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye/ that he ſhulde dwel in the ſame part/wherin are a thouſande hylles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gaueſt the ſeuēth part, namely ẏ moyſt and haſte kepte him to deuoure what thou wylte,and whan. Upon the ſyxte daye thou gaueſt cōmaundement vnto the earthe,that before the/it ſhulde brynge forth beaſtes,catell/and all that crepe,and(beſydes this)Adam alſo,whome thou madeſt Lorde of all thy creatures. Of hym come we all,and the people alſo,whom thou haſt choſē ſpecyally vnto thy ſelfe. Al this haue I ſaid nowe and ſpoken before the O Lord,ẏ I myght ſhewe howe that the world is made for our ſakes. As for the other people whiche alſo come of Adam thou haſt ſaid that they are nothyng/ but be lyke a ſpetle,& haſt lykened the aboūdaunce of them vnto a droppe(that falleth) from the rofe of the houſe.

And nowe,O Lorde/the Heathen which haue euer bene reputed as nothynge / haue begōne to be Lordes ouer vs/and to deuour vs:but we thy people(whom thou haſt called the fyrſt borne,thy onely begotten,& thy feruente louer)are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde nowe be made for our ſakes,why haue we not the inherytaūce in poſſeſſyon with the worlde? Howe longe ſhall this endure?

¶ The Angell ſheweth Eſdras many thynges to come.

CAPI. VII.

AND it happened after that I had ſpoken out theſe wordes/there was ſente vnto me an Angell, whiche had bene by me alſo the nightes afore, and he ſayd vnto me: vp Eſdras/and here the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I ſayd: ſpeake on Lord my God. Then ſayd he vnto me. The ſee is ſet in a wyde place/that it might be depe and greate: but the entraunce is narowe & ſmall lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go into the ſee/ to loke vpon it/and to rule it? If he wente not thorow the narowe, how myght he come into the brode.

Item another: A cytie is buylded and ſet vpon a brode felde/and is full of al goodes, the entrãce is narowe and ſodayne, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hande, and a depe water at the lefte, and as it were onely one ſtrayte path betwixte thẽ bothe, ſo ſmall that there coulde but one man go there.

If this cyte nowe were geuẽ to an heyre/ & he neuer went thorowe the parlous waye/ how wolde he receyue his enheritaũce? And I ſayde: It is ſo Lord. Then ſaid he to me: Euen ſo is Iſrael alſo a porcyon. And why? for theyr ſakes haue I made the world: and when Adam tranſgreſſed my ſtatutes, then was the thyng iudged that was done. Thẽ were the entraũces of the worlde made narowe, ful of ſorowe & trauayle. They are but fewe & euil, ful of perels & labour. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wide & ſure, and brought immortall frute.

If they nowe whiche are entred into this worlde, maye not comprehende theſe ſtrayte and vaine thinges, muche leſſe may they cõprehende and vnderſtande the ſecrete thynges: why diſquieteſt thou thy ſelf thẽ, ſeyng thou art but a corruptyble man? And what woldeſt thou knowe where as thou art but mortall? And why haſt thou not receyued in to thyne herte the thynge that is for to come, but that is preſent?

Then ſayd I: O Lord Lord, * thou haſt ordayned in thy lawe, that the ryghtuous ſhulde inherete theſe thĩges, but that the vnfaythful and vngodly ſhulde peryſh. Neuertheleſſe, the rightuous ſhal ſuffre ſtrayte thĩges/& hope for wide: for they that haue liued vngodly and ſuffred ſtrayte thynges / ſhall not ſe the wyde.

And he ſayd vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God/and none that hath vnderſtandynge aboue the Hyeſt. For there be many ẏ peryſhe, becauſe they deſpyſe ẏ lawe of God that is ſet before them. For God hath geuen ſtrayte cõmaundement to ſuch as come, that they knowe what they do / and howe they ſhulde lyue: and yf they kept this they ſhuld not be punyſhed.

Neuertheleſſe, they were not obediẽt vnto hym, but ſpake agaynſte hym: ymagyned vayne thynges/and purpoſed to ſynne, and ſayd moreouer, that there was no God/and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowen, his lawe haue they deſpyſed/and denyed hys promyſes: in his ſtatutes & ordynaunces haue they not bene faythfull and ſtedfaſte, and haue not perfourmed hys workes.

And therfore Eſdras: vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye/emptyneſſe. Beholde/ the tyme ſhal come/that theſe tokens which I haue tolde the ſhall come to paſſe/and the bryde ſhall appeare/and the earth that now paſſeth awaye/ſhalbe ſhewed: and whoſoeuer is delyuered frõ the forſayde euyls, ſhal ſe my wonders. For my ſonne Ieſus ſhalbe opẽly declared, with thoſe that be with him. and they that remayne, ſhalbe mery in foure hundreth yeares.

After theſe ſame yeares ſhall my ſonne Chriſt dye/and al men that haue lyfe, and ẏ world ſhalbe turned into the olde ſylence ſeuen dayes/lyke as in the fore iudgementes, ſo that no mã ſhal remayne. And after ſeuen dayes, the world that yet a waked not/ſhalbe rayſed vp/and ſhal dye corrupte. And the earth ſhall reſtore thoſe that haue ſlept ĩ her and ſo ſhal the duſt thoſe that dwel in ſilẽce/ and the ſecrete places ſhal deliuer thoſe that be committed vnto thẽ. And the moſt hyeſt ſhalbe openly declared vpõ the ſeate of iudgement, and all myſery ſhall vanyſh away/ and long ſufferyng ſhalbe gathered together But the iudgement ſhal cõtinue/ the trueth ſhall remayne/and fayth ſhal waxe ſtronge, the worcke ſhall folowe, & the rewarde ſhall be ſhewed: the ryghtuouſnes ſhall watch/& the vnryghtuouſneſſes ſhall beare no rule.

Then ſayde I: * Abraham prayed fyrſte for the Sodomites/‡ & Moſes for ẏ fathers that ſinned in the wyldernes, & he that came after him for Iſrael, in the tyme of Achas & Samuel: and ‡ Dauid for the deſtruccyon ‡ and Salomon for them that came into the Saynctuary, * and Helias for thoſe that receyued rayne, & for the deade, that he myght lyue, & Ezechias for the people in the time of Sennacherib: & diuerſe other in lyke maner whiche haue prayed for many.

Euẽ ſo now, ſeyng the corrupte is growen vp/and wyckednes increaſed, and the ryghteous haue prayed for ẏ vngodly, wherfore ſhall it not be ſo nowe alſo?

He anſwered me/and ſayd: Thys preſente world is not the ende/there remayneth much honour in it, therfore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome ſhalbe the ende of this tyme/ & the begynnyng of the immortalite for to come, wherin all corrupcion baniſhed, al voluptuouſnes is louſed, al miſbeleue taken away, ryghtuouſneſſe growne & the verytie ſpronge vp. Then ſhall no man be able to ſaue hym that is deſtroyed, nor to oppreſſe him that hath gotten the vyctorye. I anſwered then, and ſayd: This is my firſt and laſt ſayinge: that it had bene better/ not to haue geuẽ the earth vnto Adã: or els whẽ it was geuen him, to kepe hym that he ſhuld not ſinne. For what profite is it for me nowe in this preſent tyme to lyue in heuineſſe, and after death to loke for punyſhment. O thou Adam/ what haſt thou done? For though it was thou that ſinned, thou art not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyte is it vnto vs, yf there be promyſed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle wyth deadly workes? and that there is promyſed vs an euerlaſting hope, where as our ſelues are euyll & vayne, and that there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of health & fredome, where as we haue lyued euyll, & that the worſhyppe of the hieſt is kept to defende them, whiche haue led a paciente lyfe, where as we haue walked in the moſt wycked wayes of all? And that there ſhalbe ſhewed a paradyſe, whoſe frute endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medycyne, where as we ſhall not go in? for we haue walcked in vnpleaſaũt places: And that the faces of them whiche haue abſteyned, ſhal ſhyne aboue the D ſtarres, where as our faces ſhall be blacke and darcke? For whyle we lyued & dyd vnryghtuouſly, we conſydered not, yͭ we ſhulde ſuffre therfore after death?

Then anſwered he me, and ſayde: Thys is the conſyderacyon and thought of the battayle, whiche man hathe vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he ſhall ſuffre as thou haſte ſayde. But yf he get the vyctorye, he ſhall receyue the thynge that I ſaye. For thys is the lyfe wherof Moyſes ſpake vnto the people, Deu. xxx. b whyle he lyued/ ſayng: *Choſe the lyfe, that thou mayſt liue. Neuertheleſſe/ they beleued hym not/ neither the Prophetes after hym, No nor me whiche haue ſpoken vnto them/ that heuynes ſhulde not reach vnto them to theyr deſtruccyon, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer thoſe that haue ſuffered them ſelues to be enfourmed in ſaluacyon.

I aunſwered then, and ſayde: I knowe Lorde/ that the hyeſt is mercyfull/ in that he hath mercy vpon them/ which are not yet in the worlde/ and vpon thoſe alſo that walcke in his lawe: and that* he is pacient and lõg Roma ſufferynge towarde thoſe that haue ſynned in theyr workes/ and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requyreth: and that he is of great mercy/ for he multiplied his louing kyndneſſes towarde thoſe yͭ are preſent/ and B that are paſte/ and to them whiche are for to come. For yf he multiplye not hys mercyes/ the worlde ſhall not be made lyuynge/ with thoſe yͭ dwel therin. He geueth alſo/ for yf he gaue not of his goodnes, that they whiche haue done euyll/ myght be eaſed, from theyr wyckednes, the ten thouſande parte of men ſhuld not be made lyuyng. And yf the iudge forgaue not thoſe that be healed with hys worde, & if he wolde deſtroye the multytude that ſtryueth, there ſhulde be very fewe lefte in an innumerable multitude.

¶ Eſdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon his owne mercye, then on the ſynnes of the people.

CAPI. VIII.

AND he anſwered me, ſayeng: The moſt hyeſt made this worlde for many, but I the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a ſymylitude/ Eſdras: As when thou aſkeſte the earth/ it ſhall ſay vnto the/ that it geueth muche moulde/ where of earthen veſſels are made, but lytle of it yͭ golde cõmeth of. Euen ſo is it wᵗ the worke of thys worlde. *There be many created/ but fewe ſhall be ſaued. Then anſwered I and ſayde: Thẽ ſwalowe vp the witte (thou ſoule) and deuoure the vnderſtandynge/ for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare, and wyllyng to prophecy/ for thou haſt no longer ſpace geuen the, but onely to lyue. O Lord/ wylte thou not gyue thy ſeruaunt leaue, that we may pray before the/ & that thou mayeſt gyue ſede vnto oure herte, & tyllynge to our vnderſtandyng, that there maye cõme frute of it: & that euery one which is corrupte/ and beareth the ſtate and place of a man/ may lyue?

For thou art alone, & we al are one workmanſhyppe of thy handes, lyke as thou haſt ſayd/ and lyke as the body is faſhioned now in the mothers wõbe/ & thou geueſt the mẽbres, and thy creature is preſerued in fyre & water: & .ix. monethes doth thy worke ſuffre thy creature, whiche is faſhyoned in her: but the thing that preſerueth/ and it that is preſerued/ ſhall both be kept together: and whẽ tyme is/ the wombe delyuereth the thynge that is kepte and growen in her.

For thou haſt cõmaũded the breſtes to geue mylcke vnto the frute, that the thyng

which is created and faſhyoned, may be nouryſhed for a tyme: and then thou dyſpoſeſt & ordreſt it with thy mercy/ bryngeſte it vp wt thy righteouſnes, nurtureſt it in thy lawe, & refourmeſt it with thy wiſe vnderſtandyng, mortifieſt it as thy creature, & makeſt it lyuyng as thy workes. B Seynge then that thou deſtroyeſt him, which with ſo great laboures is created and faſhyoned thorowe thy commaundemẽt, thou couldeſt lyghtly ordeyne, alſo, that the thynge which is made, myght be preſerued.

And thys I ſpeake now of all men in generall/ as yͤ knoweſt: but of thy people/ for whoſe ſake I am ſory: & of thy inheritaũce: for whoſe cauſe I mourne: and of Iſraell/ for whom I am wofull: and for Iacob/ for whoſe ſake I am greued/ therfore begynne I to pray before the, for my ſelfe & for them/ for I ſe the fall of vs, euen of vs/ that dwel vpon earth. But I haue herde the ſwiftnes of yͤ iudge, which is to come: therfore heare my voice, and vnderſtande my wordes, and I ſhall ſpeake before the. Thys is the begynnynge of the wordes of Eſdras/ before he was receaued. And I ſayde, O Lorde/ thou that dwelleſt in euerlaſtingneſſe, whoſe eyes are lyfte vp in the ayre, whoſe ſtoole is exceadynge hye, whoſe glory & mateſty may not be comprehended, before whom the Hoſtes of aungels ſtande with trẽbling, whoſe kepyng is turned in wynde and fyre/ whoſe worde is true, whoſe talckynge is ſtedfaſte, whoſe commaundement is ſtronge, whoſe ordinaunce is fearful, whoſe loke dryeth vp the depthes, whoſe wrath maketh the moũtaynes to melte awaye / and whoſe trueth beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy ſeruaunt / and marke with thyne eares the petycyon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll ſpeake, and ſo longe as I haue vnderſtanding, I wyl anſwere. O loke not vpon the ſynnes of thy people/ which ſerue the in trueth. Haue no reſpecte vnto the wicked ſtudies of the Heathen, but to the deſyre of thoſe that kept thy teſtimonyes with ſorowes. Thyncke not vpõ thoſe that haue walked fainedly before the/ but vpon them/ whiche with wyll haue knowen thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to deſtroye them, which haue had beaſtly maners, but to loke vpon thẽ that haue clearly taught thy law. Take thou no indignacyõ at thẽ, which are worſe then beaſtes: but loue them/ that alwaye put theyr truſt in thy ryghteouſnes & glory: for we & our fathers haue al the ſame ſyckenes and dyſeaſe, but becauſe of our ſynnes thou ſhalt be called mercyfull.

C For yf thou haſt mercy vpon vs/ yͤ ſhalt be called mercyfull? where as we haue no workes of righteouſnes: for the righteous whiche haue layed vp many good workes together, ſhal out of theyr dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, that thou ſhuldeſt take dyſpleaſure at him? Or what is the corruptible mortal generacyon, that thou ſhuldeſt be ſo rough towarde hym.

†For of a trueth there is no man amonge them that be borne, but he hath dealte wyckedly: and among the faithful there is none whiche hath not done amyſſe. For in thys (O Lord (thy ryghteouſnes and thy goodnes ſhalbe prayſed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, which are not rych in good workes.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Some thinges haſt thou ſpoken a right, and accordinge vnto thy wordes it ſhall be. For I wyl not verely conſydre the workes of them/ which haue ſynned before death/ before the iudgment, before deſtruccyon, but * I wyll reioyce ouer the worcke and thought of the ryghteous. I wyll remẽbre alſo the pylgremage the holy makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue ſpoken now, ſo ſhal it come to paſſe. For as the huſbande man ſoweth much ſede vpon the grounde/ and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is ſowne or planted is not al kepte ſafe, nether doth it all take rote: Euen ſo is it of thẽ that are ſowne in the worlde/ they ſhall not all be ſalued.

I anſwered then and ſayde: If I haue foũde grace, then let me ſpeake. Like as the huſbande mans ſede periſheth, yf it receaue not rayne in dewe ſeaſon, or if there come to much rayne vpõ it: Euen ſo peryſheth man alſo, which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne ymage and to thy ſelfe, for whoſe ſake thou haſt made al thynges/ and lykened hym vnto the huſbande mans ſede. Be not wroth at vs / O Lorde/ but ſpare thy people/ and haue mercy vpon thyne owne inherytaunce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

D Then anſwered he me & ſayde: Thinges preſent are for the preſẽte, & thinges to come for ſuche as be to come. For thou lackeſte yet much, ſeynge thou mayeſt loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft times drawne me vnto the, but neuer to the vnryghteous. In this alſo thou art maruelous before yͤ hieſt in that thou haſt humbled thy ſelfe as it becõmeth tormenteſt the/and haſte not regarded thyne owne ſelfe/that thou art had i ſuch honour amōge the ryghteous. Therfore ſhall great wretchednes and myſery come vpō the, that in the latter tyme ſhall dwell in the worlde, becauſe they haue walcked in greate pryde.

But vnderſtande thou for thy ſelfe/ and ſeke out glory for ſuch as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradyſe opened/ the tre of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteouſnes made ready: a cytie is buylded for you, & a reſt is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wyſdome. The rote of euel is marcked from you/the weaknes & mothe is hyd frō you, & into hell flyeth corrupcyon in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyſhed awaye/ and in the ende is ſhewed the treaſure of immortalyte. And therfore aſke thou no more queſtions, concernyng the multytude of thē that peryſhe. For they haue taken libertye/ deſpyſed the hyeſte/ thought ſcorne of hys lawe/and forſaken his wayes.

Moreouer/they haue troden downe hys Psa. xiiii.a ryghteous, and * ſayde in theyr herte/that there is no God, yee and that wyttingly, for they dye. For lyke as the thige that I haue ſpoken of, is made ready for you: Euen ſo is thyrſt & payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyll that man ſhulde come to naught: but they which be created haue deſpyſed the name of hym that made them, and are vnthanckful vnto him/ which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgment now at hand. Theſe thiges haue I not ſhewed vnto all men/ but vnto fewe/ namely vnto the, and to ſuch as be lyke the. Then anſwered I & ſayd, Beholde O Lorde, nowe haſt ỹ ſhewed me the multitude of the tokens, which ỹ wylt begyn to do at the laſt: but at what tyme & whē, thou haſt not ſhewed me.

¶ Eſdras hath reſponſe vnto hym.

CAPI. IX.

A HE anſwered me then & ſayd: Meaſure thou ỹ tyme dylygētly in it ſelfe/when thou ſeyſt that one parte of the tokens come to paſſe / whiche I haue tolde the before: ſo ſhalte thou vnderſtande/that it is the very ſame tyme/ wherin the hyeſt wyll begynne to vyſet the worlde, whiche he made. And when there ſhall be ſene earth quake & vproure of the people in the worlde, thē ſhalt thou well vnderſtande/ that the moſt hyeſt ſpake of thoſe thinges/from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnynge.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende/and the ende is manyfeſt: Euen ſo the tymes alſo of ỹ hyeſt haue playne begynnynges in wonders and ſygnes, and the ende in worckyng and in tokens. And euery one that ſhalbe ſaued/ and ſhall be able to eſcape by hys workes and by faith, wherin ye haue beleued, ſhalbe preſerued from the ſayde parels, and ſhal ſe my ſauyoure in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me frō the worlde. Thē ſhall they be in carefulnes, which nowe haue abuſed my wayes: & they ỹ haue caſte thē oute deſpytefully, ſhal dwell in paynes.

For ſuche as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowne me/ & they that haue abhorred my lawe / whyle they had yet fredome, and whē they had yet open leyſure of amendemēt and conuerſyon, and vnderſtode not, but deſpiſed it: ỹ ſame muſt knowe it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore careful, howe the vngodly ſhalbe puniſhed, & howe the ryghteous ſhal be ſaued, and whoſe the worlde is, & for whō the worlde/and when it is. Then anſwered I and ſayde: * I haue talcked before & now I ſpeake, and wyl ſpeake alſo herafter, that B there be many mo of them whiche peryſhe/ thē ſhalbe ſaued/lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes.

And he anſwered me/ſayinge, lyke as the felde is, ſo is alſo the ſede: as the floures be/ ſo are the coulours alſo: ſuche as the workmanes, ſuch is alſo the worcke: and as the huſband man is him ſelfe, ſo is his huſbandrye alſo/for it was the tyme of the worlde.

And when I prepared for them that are nowe or euer the worlde was made / wherein they ſhulde dwell / then was there no man that withſtode me. Nowe when euery one was/ and the maker alſo in the worlde which is nowe prpared/ & the moneth that ceaſeth not/ and the lawe which is vnſearcheable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I conſydred the worlde/& beholde/there was parell / becauſe of the thoughtes that were come into it. And I ſawe/ and ſpared them greatly/ and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes/ & a plante from amonge many generacyons. Let the multytude peryſhe then/whiche are growne vp in vayne/ and let my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante: for with greate laboure haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles, yf thou wylt take vpon the yet ſeuen dayes mo(but thou ſhalt not faſte in them(go thy waye then in to the felde of floures, where no houſe is buylded, and eat onely of the floures of ỹ felde, taſt no fleſh, drynke no wyne, but eate floures onely.

Pꝛaye vnto the Hyeſt contynually, ſo wyll I come/ and talke with the.

C So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he cōmaunded me) and there I ſat amonge the floures, & dyd eat of the herbes of the felde, and the meat of the ſame ſatiſfyed me. After ſeuen dayes I ſat vpon the graſſe/ and my herte was vexed within me lyke as afoꝛe: & I opened my mouth/ and beganne to talke befoꝛe the Hyeſt/ and ſayde: O Loꝛde/ thou that ſheweſt thy ſelfe vnto vs, * thou haſte declared and opened thy ſelfe vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth/ in a baren place/ when they came out of Egypt, and thou ſpakeſt, ſayinge: Heare me O Iſrael, & marke my woꝛdes yͤ ſeade of Iacob. Beholde, I ſowe my lawe in you/ and it ſhall bꝛynge frute in you & ye ſhalbe honoured in it foꝛ euer. Foꝛ oure fathers which receaued yͤ lawe/ kepte it not and obſerued not thy oꝛdinaunces and ſtatutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: foꝛ it myghte not/ foꝛ why? it was B thyne. * Foꝛ they that receaued it, periſhed, becauſe they kepte not the thynge that was ſowen in them.

It is a cuſtome when the grounde receaueth ſede, oꝛ the ſee a ſhyp, oꝛ a veſſell meate and dꝛincke, that when it periſheth oꝛ is bꝛoken wherin a thing is ſowen, oꝛ wherin any thynge is put: the thynges alſo peryſhe and are bꝛoken, which are ſowen oꝛ put therin. D But vnto vs it hath not happened ſo foꝛ we that haue receyued the lawe, peryſh i ſinne, & oure herte whiche alſo receaued the lawe: notwithſtādyng * the lawe peryſheth not/ but remayneth in hys laboure.

And when I conſydered theſe thinges in my herte after thys maner/ I loked aboute me with mine eyes, and vpon the right ſyde * I ſawe a woman, whiche mourned ſoꝛe/ made greate lamentacyon/ and wepte with loude voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, and ſhe had aſſhes vpon her heade. Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in and turned me vnto her, and ſayde: wherfoꝛe wepeſt thou? why art thou ſo ſoꝛy & diſcomfoꝛted? And ſhe ſayde vnto me: Syꝛ, let me bewayle my ſelfe and take yet moꝛe ſoꝛow: foꝛ I am ſoꝛe vexed i my mynde/ & bꝛought very lowe. And I ſayde vnto her: what ayleth yͤ? Oꝛ who hath done eny thyng to yͤ? tel me. She ſayde: I thy hand maid haue bene vnfruteful & baren, and haue had an huſband thyꝛtie yeares. And theſe xxx. yeares I do nothynge els daye and nyght & all houres but make my pꝛayer to yͤ Hyeſt. After thyꝛtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my humylite, cōſydꝛed my trouble, and gaue me a ſōne, and I was glad of him, ſo was my huſbād alſo & al my neyghbours, & we gaue greate honoure vnto the Myghtie. And I noꝛyſhed hym with great trauayle. So when he grewe vp, and came to the tyme, that he ſhulde haue a wyfe/ I made a feaſt.

¶ Eſdꝛas and the woman that appeareth vnto him commen together.

CAPI. X.

A AND it happened that when my ſonne went into his chamber he fell downe, & dyed: then ouerthꝛewe we all the lyghtes, & all my neyghbours roſe vp to cōfoꝛte me. Then toke I my reſt vnto the ſeconde day at night: & whē they had all reſted, that they might comfoꝛte me/ I reſted & alſo roſe vp by night, & fled/ and am come hyther in to thꝫ felde, as thou ſeyſt: & am purpoſed not to returne into the cyte, but to remayne here, & neither to eate noꝛ dꝛyncke, but continually to mourne and to faſt, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacyons & thoughtes fal, that I was in, & ſpake to her in diſpleaſure: Thou moſt foolyſh woman, ſeiſt thou not oure heuynes & mournyng/ & what happeneth vnto vs? how Syon our mother is all wofull and ſoꝛy/ and howe ſhe is cleane bꝛought downe and in miſery? ſeinge we be all nowe in heuynes, & make oure moue (foꝛ we be all ſoꝛowful.) As foꝛ the heuines that thou takeſt, it is but foꝛ one ſōne. Demāde the earthe, and ſhe ſhall tel the, that it is ſhe which ought (by reaſon) to mourne/ foꝛ the fall of ſo many that growe vpon her.

Foꝛ from the begynnyng all men are boꝛne of her, and other ſhal come: and beholde they walke almoſt al into deſtruccyon, and many of them ſhall be roted out. Who ſhulde then (by reaſon) make moꝛe mournynge/ then ſhe, that hath loſt ſo great a multitude & not thou/ which art ſoꝛy, but foꝛ one. But yf thou woldeſte ſaye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke yͤ mournyng of the earth, foꝛ I haue loſt the frute of my body, whiche I bare with heuines & ſoꝛowe: but the earth is accoꝛdyng to the maner of the earth, and the pꝛeſent multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to paſſe: Then ſay I vnto the: lyke as thou haſt boꝛne with trauayle & ſoꝛowe/ euē ſo the earth alſo frō the begining geueth her frute vnto man, foꝛ hym yͤ made her. And therfoꝛe withholde thy ſoꝛowe and heuynes by thy ſelfe & loke what happeneth peneth vnto the, beare it ſtrongly. For yf thou iudgeſt the marche and ente of God to be righteous and good, ⁊ receaueſt his councell i tyme, thou ſhalt be cōmēded therin. Go thy way then into the cyte to thy huſbande.

And ſhe ſayde vnto me: that wyll I not B do/ I wyll not go into the cytye, but heare wyl I die. So I commened more with her, and ſayde: Do not ſo, but be counceled/ and folowe me, for how many falles hath Siō? Be of good comforte because of the ſorowe of Jeruſalem. For thou ſeiſt that our Sanctuary is layed waſte/ oure aulter broken/ oure temple deſtroyed, oure playenge of inſtrumentes and ſyngyng layed downe/ the thankeſgeuinge put to ſylence, our myrthis banyſhed awaye/ the lyght of oure candelſtick is quenched, the arcke of the couenaūt is taken from vs/ all oure holy thynges are defyled/ and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is diſhonoured: our childre are put to ſhame, our preſtes are brente, oure Levytes are caryed away into captiuite, oure virgins are defyled, and oure wyues raviſhed, oure ryghteous men ſpoyled, and oure chyldren deſtroyed, oure yong men are brought in bondage/ and oure ſtronge worthyes are become weake: and Syō (which ſeale is the greateſt of all) is lowſed vp from her worſhyp for ſhe is delyuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore ſhake of thy great heuynes/ and put awaye the multytude of ſorowes: that the Mighty maye be mercyfull vnto the, and that the Hyeſt maye geue the reſt from thy laboure and trauayle. And it happened/ that when I was talkynge with her, her face dyd ſhine and gliſter, ſo that I was afrayed of her, ⁊ muſed what it myght be. And immediatly ſhe caſte oute a greate voyce/ very fearful/ ſo that the earth ſhoke at the noyſe of the woman: and I loked, and beholde the woman appeared vnto me nomore but there was a cyte builded, ⁊ a place was ſhewed frō the grounde ⁊ foundacion.

Then was I afrayed/ and cryed with loude voyce/ and ſayde: where is Uriel the C angell, ⁊ which came to me at the fyrſt? For 4. Eſd. 4. a he hath cauſed me to come in many conſideracyons and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corrupcion, ⁊ my prayer to rebuke. And as I was ſpeakynge theſe wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, ⁊ I laye as one that had bene deed, and myne vnderſtanding was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and cōforted me, and ſet me vpon my fete, and ſayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thyne vnderſtanding vexed? and the vnderſtandyng of thy herte, ⁊ wherfore art thou ſory? And I ſayd: Becauſe thou haſt forſake me: ⁊ I haue done *accordynge vnto thy wordes/ I wente into the felde, and there haue I ſene thinges, that I am not able to expreſſe. He ſayd vnto me: Stande vp and be manly/ and I ſhall geue the exortacyon.

4. Eſd.

Then ſayd I: Speake on to me my Lord forſake me not, leſt I dye in vayne: for I haue ſene that I knewe not, and herde that I do not knowe. Or ſhall my vnderſtandyng be diſceaued/ ⁊ my minde? But nowe I beſeche the, that thou wylt ſhewe thy ſeruaūte of this wōder. He anſwered me then ⁊ ſayd: heare me, and I ſhall enfourme the, and tel the wherfore thou art afrayed/ for the hyeſt hath opened many ſecrete thiges vnto the.

He hath ſene that thy waye is ryght, and that thou takeſt ſorowe continually for thy people, and makeſt greate lamentacyon for Sion: and therfore vnderſtande the viſyon whiche thou ſaweſt a lytle whyle ago after thys maner: Thou ſaweſt a woman mourninge, and thou haſt comforted her. Neuertheles now ſeyſt thou the lykenes of the womā nomore, but thou thoughteſt there was a cyte buylded: and lyke as ſhe tolde the of ẏ fal of her ſonne, ſo is this the anſwere: The woman whom thou ſaweſte/ is Syon/ and where as ſhe tolde the/ that ſhe hathe bene thyrtye yeares vnfrutefull and baren, thoſe are the .xxx. yeares, wherin there was no offerynge made in her.

But after .xxx. yeares Salomon buylded D her/ ⁊ offred/ ⁊ then bare the baren a ſonne. And where as ſhe tolde ẏ: that ſhe noryſhed hym with laboure, that was the dwellyng of Jeruſalem. But where as ſhe tolde the ẏ her ſōne dyed whan he came into his chamber, that is the fall of Jeruſalem. And thou ſaweſt her lykeneſſe/ howe ſhe mourned for her ſōne: and what els happened vnto her/ I haue ſhewed ẏ. And now God ſeyth/ that thou arte ſory in thy mynde/ ⁊ ſuffreſt from thy herte for her, ⁊ ſo hath he ſhewed the her clearneſſe, and the fayrnes of her bewtye. And therfore I bad the remayne in ẏ felde where no houſe is builded. For I knew that the Hyeſt wolde ſhewe thys vnto the/ therfore I commaunded the to go into the felde/ where no foundacyon of buyldynge is. For in the place where the Hyeſt wyll ſhewe his cytie, there ſhal be no mans buyldyng. And therfore feare not/ and let not thyne herte be afrayed/ but go thy waye in, and ſe the glory-glorious and fayre buyldynge, and howe greate it is, and howe greate thou thynkeſt it after the meaſure of thyne eyes, and then ſhalte thou heare as muche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou art bleſſed aboue many other, and arte called with the hyeſt, as the fewe. But to morowe at nyght thou ſhalt remayne here, & ſo ſhall the hyeſt ſhewe the vyſiōs of hye thynges, whyche he wyll do vnto them, that dwell vpon earth in the laſt dayes. So I ſlepte yͤ ſame nyght and the other lyke as he commaunded me.

¶ In this Chapter & in the.ii. next enſuynge, he entreateth of ſeuen vyſyons and of the interpretacyons therof.

CAPI. XI.

A THEN ſawe I a dreame: and beholde, there came vp from the ſee an Aegle, whiche had.xii. wynges & thre heades: And I ſawe, & beholde, he ſpred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in thē, & ſo they were put together agayne. And I behelde, & out of his fethers there grewe other lytle cōtrary fethers: the heades reſted, the heade in the myddeſt was greater thē yͤ other, yet reſted it with the reſidue. Moreouer I ſawe, that the Aegle flewe with his wynges, & rayned vpō earth, and ouer all thē that dwel vpon the earth: & I ſawe that all thinges vnder heauen were ſubiecte vnto hym/ & no man ſpake agaynſt hym/ no not one creature vpō earth. I ſawe alſo that the Aegle ſtode vp vpon hys clawes, & gaue a ſounde with his fethers/ and a voyce ſayinge after this maner: watch not all together, ſlepe euery man in his owne place, and watch for a tyme/ but let the heades be preſerued at the laſt. Neuertheles I ſawe/ that the voyce wente nat out of hys heades/ but from the myddeſt of hys body. And I nombred his cōtrary fethers/ and beholde, there were eyght of them. And I loked/ and beholde vpon the ryght ſyde there aroſe one fether/ & rayned ouer all the earth. And it happened/ that when it rayned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared nomore. B So the nexte folowynge ſtode vp, and rayned, and had a great tyme: and it happened, that when it rayned, the ende of it came alſo lyke as the fyrſt, ſo that it appeared nomore.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & ſayd, Heare thou that haſte kepte in the earth ſo longe thys I ſaye vnto the, before thou begynneſt to appere nomore: There ſhal none after the atteyne vnto thy tyme. Then aroſe the thyrde, & rayned as the other afore, and appeared nomore alſo. So went it with all the reſidue one after another/ ſo that euery one rayned/ and then appered nomore. Then I loked/ and beholde/ in proceſſe of tyme the fethers that foloweth were ſet vp vpon the ryght ſyde/ that they myght rule alſo: and ſome of them ruled/ but within a whyle they appeared nomore: for ſome of them were ſet vp, but ruled nat. After thys I loked, and beholde the.xii. fethers appeared no more/ and the two wynges: and there was nomore vpō the Aegles body/ but two heades that reſted, and ſyxe fethers. Then ſawe I alſo/ that the ſyxe fethers were parted in two/ and remayned vnder the heade, that was vpon the ryght ſyde, for the foure continued in theyr place. C So I loked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to ſet vp them ſelues, & to haue the rule. Then was there one ſet vp, but ſhortly it appeared nomore/ & the ſeconde was ſoner awaye then the fyrſt. And I behelde and lo, yͤ two thought alſo by thē ſelues to rayne: and when they ſo thought/ beholde/ there waked one of the heades that were at reſt, namely/ it that was in the myddeſt, for that was the greater of the two heades. And thē I ſawe, that the two heades were fylled with hym, & the heade was turned with thē that were by hym, and dyd eate vp the two vnder wynges, that wolde haue rayned.

But thys heade put the whole earth in feare/ and bare rule in it/ ouer all thoſe that dwelt vpō earth with much labour/ and he had the gouernaunce of the worlde/ ouer al the fowles yͭ haue bene. After this I loked, and beholde/ the heade that was in yͤ myddeſt, ſodenly appeared nomore, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, whiche ruled vpon earth/ & ouer thoſe yͭ dwell therin. D And I behelde/ & lo, the heade vpon the ryght ſyde, deuoured it that was vpon the lefte ſyde. And I herde a voyce, which ſayde vnto me, loke before the, and conſydre the thynge that thou ſeyeſt. Then I ſawe and beholde, as it were a lyon that roareth, rennynge haſtely out of the wod, & he ſent out a mans voyce vnto the Aegle, & ſayd: Heare thou/ I wyl talke with the/ & the hyeſt ſhal ſaye vnto yͤ: Is it nat thou yͭ haſt yͤ victory of the foure beaſtes/ whō I made to rayne vpon earth and in my worlde/ and that the ende of their tymes might come thorow thē?

And the fourth came, and ouercame all the beaſtes that were paſte/ and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulnes, and ouer the whole cōpaſſe of the earth with the moſt wicked laboure, & ſo longe tyme dwelt he vpon the earth with diſceate/ & the earth haſt thou iudged nat with trueth. For thou haſt troubled the meke/ thou haſte hurte the peaceable & quyete, thou haſt loued lyers, & deſtroyed yͤ dwellynges of thē that brought forth frute, and haſt caſt downe the walles of ſuch as dyd yͤ no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealynge and blaſphemye come vp vnto the Hyeſt, and thy pryde vnto the Myghty. The Hyeſt alſo hath loked vpon the proude tymes, and beholde/ they are ended, & theyr abhominacyons are fulfylled. And therfore appeare nomore thou Aegle, & thy horrible wynges, & thy wycked fethers, and thy vngracyous heades, & thy ſynfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earth maye be refreſhed/ and come agayne to her ſelfe/ when ſhe is delyuered from thy vyolence/ and that ſhe maye hope for the iudgement & mercy of hym that made her.

CAPI. XII.

A AND it happened when yͤ Lyon ſpake theſe wordes vnto yͤ Aegle, I ſawe/ & beholde/ the heade that afore had the vpper hande appeared nomore: nether dyd yͤ foure wynges appere any more/ yͭ came to hym & were ſet vp to raygne: and theyr kyngdome was ſmall & full of vproure. And I ſawe, & beholde, they appered nomore, & the whole body of yͤ Aegle was brent, & the earth was in greate feare. Then awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, & from greate feare, and ſayde vnto my ſpirite: Lo, this haſt thou geuen me in yͭ thou ſearcheſt out the wayes of the Hyeſt: lo, yet am I werye in my mynde, and very weake in my ſpirite, & lytle ſtrēgth is there in me, for yͤ great feare yͭ I receaued this nyght. Therfore wyll I nowe beſeche the Hyeſt yͭ he wil cōforte me vnto the ende: And I ſayde/ Lorde Lorde, yf I haue fōde grace before thy ſyght, & yf I am iuſtyfyed with the before many other/ & yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, cōforte me then, and ſhewe me thy ſeruaunte the interpretacyon and playne difference of this horrible ſyght/ that thou mayſt perfectly cōforte my ſoule: for thou haſte iudged me worthy, to ſhewe me the laſt of tymes.

And he ſayde vnto me: this is the interpretacyon of this ſyght. The Aegle whom thou ſaweſt come vp frō the ſee, is the kyngdome
Dani. 7. a. which was ſene in the vyſyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto
B hym/ for nowe I declare it vnto yͤ. Beholde the dayes come, yͭ there ſhal ryſe vp a kyngdome vpon earth/ yͭ it ſhalbe feared aboue all the kyngdomes yͭ were before it. In the ſame kyngdome ſhall .xii. kynges raygne, one after another. For the ſeconde ſhall begynne to raygne/ and ſhall haue more tyme then the other twelue: & this do the twelue wynges ſignifie/ which thou ſaweſt. As for the voyce that ſpake/ & that thou ſaweſt go out from the heades/ but not frō the body/ it betokeneth/ yͭ after the tyme of that kyngdome there ſhall aryſe greate ſtryuynges/ & it ſhall ſtande in parell of fallynge: neuertheles it ſhall nat yet fall/ but ſhalbe ſet into his begynnynge. And the eyght vnderwynges which yͧ ſaweſt hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken/ yͭ in hym there ſhall aryſe eyght kynges, whoſe tyme ſhalbe but ſmal, and theyr yeares ſwyfte/ & two of them ſhall peare. But when the myddeſt tyme cōmeth, there ſhalbe foure kepte in the tyme/ when his tyme begynneth to come that it maye be ended, but two ſhalbe kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou ſaweſt thre heades reſtynge/ this is the interpretacyō: C In his laſt ſhall the Hyeſt rayſe vp thre kyngdomes, & cal many agayne into thē/ & they ſhall haue the domynyon of yͤ earth/ & of thoſe yͭ dwell therin, wt much labour aboue all thoſe that were before thē. Therfore are they called the heades of yͤ Aegle: for it is they yͭ ſhal bryng forth his wyckednes agayne/ and that ſhal perfourme & fynyſh his laſt. And where as thou ſaweſt/ yͭ the greate heade appered nomore/ it ſignifieth/ yͭ one of thē ſhal dye vpō his bed, and yet with payne/ for the two that remayne/ ſhalbe ſlayne wt the ſwerde. For yͤ ſwerde of yͤ one ſhall deuoure the other but at the laſt ſhal he fall thorowe yͤ ſwerde him ſelfe. And where as yͧ ſaweſt two vnderwynges vpō the heade yͭ is on yͤ ryght ſyde, it ſygnyfyeth that it is they/ whom yͤ Hyeſt hathe kepte vnto theyr ende: this is a ſmall kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyon whom yͧ ſaweſt ryſinge vp out of the wod, and roarynge/ & ſpeakyng vnto the Aegle, & rebukynge him for his vnryghteouſneſſe, is the wynde, which yͤ Hyeſt hathe kepte for them & for theyr wyckedneſſe vnto the ende: he ſhall reproue them, & rente them aſunder before them. For he ſhal ſet thē lyuynge be- D fore the iudgemente: and ſhal rebuke them: for the reſydue of my people ſhal he delyuer with trouble/ thoſe yͭ be preſerued ouer mine endes: and he ſhall make them ioyful vntyl the commynge of the daye of iudgemēt, wherof I haue ſpoke vnto the frō yͤ begynnynge. This is the dreame that thou ſaweſt & this is the interpretacion. Thou onely haſt bene mete to knowe the ſecrete of the Hyeſt.

Therfore wryte all theſe thynges ỹ thou haſt ſene in a boke, and hyde thē / and teach thē the wyſe in ỹ people, whoſe hartes thou knoweſt maye comprehende and kepe theſe ſecretes. But wayte thou here thy ſelf yet ſeuene dayes mo, that it maye be ſhewed the, whatſoeuer it pleaſeth the Hyeſt to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his waye.

And when all the people perceaued / that the ſeuen dayes were paſt / and I nat come agayne into the cytie / they gathered thē all together from ỹ leaſt vnto the moſt, ⁊ came vnto me, and ſayde: what haue we offended the? ⁊ what euell haue we done agaynſt the, that thou forſakeſt vs / ⁊ ſytteſt here in thys place? For of all people thou onely art lefte vs / as a grape of the vyne, ⁊ as a candel in a darke place / ⁊ as an hauen and ſhyppe preſerued frō the tempeſt. Haue we nat els aduerſite ynough, but thou muſte forſake vs? C were it nat better for vs / that we had bene brent with Syon? For we are nat better, thē they that dyed there: ⁊ they wepte wᵗ loude voyce. Then anſwered I them ⁊ ſayde: Be of good comforte O Iſraell / ⁊ be nat heuy thou houſe of Iacob: for the Hyeſt hath you in remembraūce, ⁊ the Myghtie hathe not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me / I haue not forſaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come into thys place to praye, for the deſolacyon of Syon, that I myght ſeke mercy for the lowe eſtate of youre Sāctuary. And nowe go youre waye home euery man, and after theſe dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went theyr waye into the cytie / lyke as I cōmaunded them, but I remayned ſtyl in the felde ſeuen dayes / as the Angell bad me / and dyd eate onely of the floures of the felde / and had my meate of the herbes in thoſe dayes.

CAPI. XIII.

A AND it happened after ỹ ſeuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there aroſe a wynde frō the ſee, that it moued all the floude therof. And I loked / ⁊ beholde, the man was ſtronge and increaſed with the cloudes of heauen. And when he turned his countenaunce to D conſyder, all the thynges trembled that were ſene vnder hym, and when the voyce went out of hys mouth, all they brent that herde hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After theſe I ſawe / ⁊ beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heauen / to fyghte agaynſt the man / that came oute from the ſee. And I loked / and beholde, he graued hym ſelfe a great mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wolde haue ſene the border or place, wherout the hyll was grauen / and I coulde not.

I ſawe after theſe, that all they which came to fyght agaynſt hym, were ſore afrayed and yet durſt they fyght. Neuertheles, whē he ſawe the fearſneſſe and violēce of the people / he neyther lyfte vp hys hande nor helde ſwerde, nor any weapē: but only (As I ſawe) he ſent out of hys mouth / as it had bene a blaſt of fyre, ⁊ out of hys lyppes the wynde of the flamme: and out of hys tonge he caſt out ſparkes and ſtormes, and they were all myxte together: the blaſt of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, ⁊ the greate ſtorme, and fell with a ruſſhe vpon the people, whiche was prepared to fyght and brent them vp euerychone: ſo that of the innumerable multitude there was nothyng ſene / but onely duſt and ſmoke. When I ſawe this: I was afrayed. B

Afterwarde ſawe I the ſame man come downe from the moūtayne, ⁊ callynge vnto hym another peaceable people: ⁊ there came muche people vnto hym: ſome were glad ſome were ſory / ſome of them were bounde, ſo that they were caryed and brought forth.

Then was I ſycke thorowe great feare, and I awaked, and ſayde: thou haſt ſhewed thy ſeruaunte all thy wonders from the begynnynge / and haſte counted me worthy, that thou myghteſt receaue my prayer, ſhew me nowe yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I conſydre in my vnderſtandynge: Wo vnto them that ſhal be lefte in thoſe dayes and muche more wo vnto thē that are nat left behynde: for they that were not lefte / were in heuynes.

Nowe vnderſtāde I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which ſhal happen vnto them / ⁊ to thoſe that are lefte behynde. Therfore are they, come into greate parelles / ⁊ many neceſſities / lyke as theſe dreames declare. Yet is it eaſier, ỹ he which ſuffred hurte / come in theſe, then to paſſe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde, ⁊ nowe to ſe the thynges that ſhall happē in the las

Then anſwered he me / ⁊ ſayde: The interpretacion of the ſyght ſhall I ſhewe the, and I wyl open vnto the, the thynge ỹ thou haſt required. For thou haſt ſpoken of them that are left behynde / and thys is the interpretacyon. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hath kepte hym ſelf. They that be fallen into harme, are ſuch as haue workes ⁊ fayth vnto the Moſt myghtie. Know thys therfore / that they which be lefte be-kynde, are more bleſſed, thē they that be ded. This is the meanynge of the viſyon. where as thou ſaweſt a man commynge vp from yͤ depe of the ſee, the ſame is he whom God the Hyeſt hathe kepte a great ſeaſon, whiche by his owne ſelfe ſhal delyuer his creature, and he ſhall ordre thē that are left behynde. And where as yͧ ſaweſt, that oute of his mouth there came a blaſt of wynde, fyre ⁊ ſtorme, and howe that he lyft vp nether ſwerde nor weapen/but that the ruſhynge in of him deſtroyed the whole multitude, that came to fyght agaynſt him: it ſignifieth, that yͤ dayes C come, whā God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynde ſhall he come vpon them/that dwell in the earth. And one ſhall vndertake to fyght agaynſte another, one cyte agaynſt another, one place Mat.24.a. agaynſt another * one people agaynſt another, and one realme agaynſt another. when this commeth to paſſe/then ſhall the tokens come, that I ſhewed the before: and thē ſhall my ſonne be declared, whom yͧ ſaweſt clyme vp as a man. And when al the people, heare his voyce, euery mā ſhal in theyr owne lande leaue the battayll yͭ they haue one agaynſte another/⁊ an innumerable multitude ſhalbe gathered together/as they that be wyllynge to come/ ⁊ to ouercome hym by fyghtynge. But he ſhall ſtande vpō the toppe of the mount Syō. Neuertheleſſe Syon ſhall come, ⁊ ſhalbe ſhewed, beynge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou ſaweſt the hyll grauen forth without any handes. But my ſōne ſhall rebuke the people yͭ are come, for theyr wyckednes, with the tempeſt, ⁊ for theyr euell ymagynacyons: ⁊ theyr paynes wherwith they ſhalbe punyſhed, are lykened vnto the flamme: and with out any laboure/ſhall he deſtroye them / euen by the lawe/whiche is compared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou ſaweſt, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hī: thoſe are the ten tribes which were caryed awaye 4.Re.17.a. preſoners out of theyr owne lande, * in the tyme of Oſeas the kynge / whom Salmanaſar the kynge of Aſſyria toke preſoner, and caryed them ouer the water, ⁊ ſo came they into another lande.

But they gaue them this councell, that they ſhulde leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to go forth into a farther countre where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe theyr ſtatutes, which they neuer kepte in theyr owne lande. And ſo they entred in at the narowe paſſages of the water of Euphrates/ ⁊ God ſhewed tokens for them, * and helde ſtyll the floude tyll they were paſſed ouer: for thorow yͤ countre there Ex.1 Joſ was a greate waye, namely of a yeare and a halfe iourney, for the ſame regyon is called Aſareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: ⁊ whē they come forth agayne, the Hyeſt ſhall holde ſtyl the ſprynges of the ſtreame agayne, that they may go thorowe, therfore ſaweſt thou the multytude with peace. And they that be lefte behynde of thy people, are thoſe that be founde within my border. Nowe when he deſtroyeth the multytude that is gathered together, he ſhall defende his people that remayne, and then ſhall he ſhewe them greate wonders.

Then ſayde I O Lorde, Lorde, ſhewe me this, wherfore haue I ſene the man cōmyng vp from the depe of the ſee? And he ſayde vnto me: Lyke as thou cāſt nether ſeke out nor knowe theſe thynges that are in the depe of the ſee, euen ſo mayeſt thou not ſe my ſonne, or thoſe that be with hym/but in the tyme of the daye. at.24. ohn.2. This is the interpretacyon of the dreame which yͧ ſaweſt, therfore thou onely arte here lyghtened: for thou haſte forſaken thyne owne lawe, ⁊ applyed thy dylygence vnto myne, and ſought it. * Thy lyke haſt thou ordred in wyſdome, and ⁊ haſte called 1.Re Pro vnderſtandyng thy mother, ⁊ therfore haue I ſhewed the, the treaſure of the Hyeſt. After thre dayes I wyll ſhew the more, ⁊ talke with the at more large / yee heuy and wonderous thynges wyll I declare vnto the.

Then wēt I forth into the felde, geuyng prayſe ⁊ thankes greatly vnto God, becauſe of hys wonders whiche he dyd in tyme/and becauſe he gouerneth the ſame/and ſuch as is in tyme/and there I ſat thre dayes.

¶ God appeareth vnto Eſdras in the buſh, and ſheweth him what he ſhall do.

CAPI. XIIII.

VPON the thyrde daye I ſat vnder an oke tree/then came there a voyce A vnto me out of the buſh/and ſayde: Eſdras, Eſdras? And I ſayde: here am I Lorde, and ſtode vp vpon my fete. Then ſpake he vnto me: * In the buſh dyd I appere Exo vnto Moſes / and talked with hym / when my people ſerued in Egypte / and I ſente hym/and led my people out of Egypt/ and brought hym vpō the mount Syon/ where I helde him by me a longe ſeaſon, and tolde hym my wonderous workes/ and ſhewed hym the ſecretes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded hym, ſayinge: Theſe wordes ſhalt thou declare, ⁊ not hyde them. And nowe I ſaye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thyne herte the dreames that thou haſt ſene/ ⁊ the interpretacions whiche I haue ſhewed the: for thou ſhalte be receyued of all, thou ſhalt be turned and remayne with my counſell, and with ſuch as be lyke the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath loſt his youth, and the tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuided into twelue partes/ and ten partes of it are gone all redye / and halfe of the tenth parte: yet remayneth there yͭ which is after the half of the tenth parte.

B Therfore, prepare and ordre thy houſe / and refourme thy people; comforte ſuche of them as be in trouble: and tel nowe of the deſtruccion: let go from the mortall thoughtes caſt awaye the burthens of man; put of the weake nature; laye vp in ſome places the thoughtes that are moſt heuy vnto the, and haſte the to flyt from theſe tymes: for ſuche euyl and wyckedneſſe as thou haſt now ſene happen, ſhal they do yet muche worſſe. *For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is/ the more ſhal ſynne and wyckednes increaſe in them that dwel vpon earth. For the truth is fled farre away, ⁊ leſyng is harde at hāde. For nowe haſteth the vyſion to come / that thou haſt ſene.

2.c

Then anſwered I before the, ⁊ ſayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyl go as yͧ haſt cōmaunded me, ⁊ refourme the people which are preſent But they yͭ ſhall be borne afterwarde, who wyl exhorte or rebuke thē? Thus the worlde is ſet in darknes: ⁊ they that dwel therin, are wͭout lyght: for thy lawe is kyndled, becauſe no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or yͭ ſhall be done. If I haue founde grace before the, ſēde the holy ghoſt into me, ⁊ I ſhall wryte al that hath bene done in the worlde ſens the begynnyng/ which was wrytten in thy lawe, that mē may fynde the path, and that they whiche wyll lyue in the latter dayes, may lyue.

And he anſwered me, ſayeng: Go thy way gather the people together, ⁊ ſay vnto them that they ſeke the not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather the many boxe trees / and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Ecanus and Aſiel / theſe fyue / which are redy to wryte ſwyftely / and come hyther / and I ſhall lyght a candle of vnderſtandynge in thyne herte, whiche ſhall not be put out / tyl the thinges be perfourmed which thou ſhalt begynne to wryt. And then ſhalt thou declare ſome thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and ſome thynges ſhalt thou ſhewe ſecretly vnto the wyſe. To morowe this houre ſhalte thou begynne to wryte.

C Then went I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered al the people together, and ſayde: Heare theſe wordes O Iſraell: Oure fathers at the begynnynge were ſtraungers in Egypte, from whence they were delyuered and receyued the lawe of lyfe *which they kepte not/ whiche ye alſo haue tranſgreſſed after them. Then was thys lande and the lande of Syon parted amonge you by lot to poſſeſſe. But your fathers and ye your ſelues alſo haue done vnryghtuouſnes, and haue not kepte the wayes whiche the Hyeſt commaunded you. And for ſo muche as he is a righteuous iudge, he toke from you in time the thyng that he had geuen you. And nowe are ye here and your brethren amonge you. Therfore yf ſo be that ye wyll ſubdue youre owne vnderſtandynge, and refourme youre herte, ye ſhalbe kepte alyue, and after death ſhall ye optayne mercy. For after death ſhal the iudgemente come/ when we ſhall lyue agayne: and then ſhal the names of the ryghtuous be manifeſt, ⁊ the workes of the vngodly ſhalbe declared. Let no man therfore come now vnto me, nor aſke any queſtion at me theſe fourtye dayes.

D So I toke the fyue men (as he commaūded me) and we wente into the felde, and remayned there. The nexte day a voyce called me ſayinge: Eſdras *open thy mouth, and drynke that I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, ⁊ beholde, he reached me a ful cuppe which was ful as it were wͭ water/ but yͤ couler of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had droncke it / my herte had vnderſtandyng, ⁊ wyſdome grew in my breſt: for my ſprete was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened ⁊ ſhut nomore. The hyeſt gaue vnderſtandyng vnto the fyue men/ that they wrote the hye thinges of the nyght/ which they vnderſtode not But in the nyght they dyd eate breade: as for me/ I ſpake in the day and helde my tong by nyght. In .xl. dayes, they wrote two hundreth and foure bokes.

Ezech.3.a.
Apoca.8.b

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfilled/ that the Hyeſt ſpake, ſayinge: The fyrſte that thou haſt wrytten/ ſpeake openly, the worthy ⁊ vnworthy maye rede it. But kepe the .lxx. laſt/ that thou mayſt ſhewe it onely to ſuche as be wyſe among thy people. For in them is the ſprynge of vnderſtandynge, the fountayne of wyſdome, and the ſtreame of knowledge. And I dyd ſo.

¶ The punyſhment that euyl people ſhal haue, which God commaundeth Eſdras to ſhewe vnto them.

CAPI. XV.

A Beholde, ſpeake thou in the eares of my people ẏ wordes of prophecy, whiche I wyll put in thy mouth, ſaieth the Lorde: and cauſe thē to be wrytten in a letter, for it is the treuth. Feare not the ymaginaciōs agaynſt the. Let not the vnfaithfulnes of thē trouble the, that ſpeake againſt the. For all the vnfaythful ſhall dye in their vnfaythfulnes.

Beholde ſayeth the Lorde/ I wyl bryng plages vpon the worlde, the ſwearde/ hongre/ death and deſtruccion; for wyckednes hath the vpper hande in all the earthe, and theyr ſhamefull workes are fulfylled.

Therfore ſayeth the Lorde: I wyll holde my tonge nomore vnto theyr wyckednesſe/ whiche they do ſo vngodly: nether wyl I ſuffre thē in the thynges/ that they deale wyth all ſo wyckedly. Beholde * the innocente bloude of the troubled cryeth vnto me, and ẏ ſoules of the ryghtuous complayne continually: and therfore (ſayeth the Lorde) I wyl ſurely auenge, & receyue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

Apoc. vi. b. and. xix. a.

Psal. 44. c. Roma. 8. f. 1. Cor. 4. b.

* Beholde/ my people/ is led as a flocke of ſhepe to be ſlayne. I wyll not ſuffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte/ but wyll brynge thē out with a myghtye hāde and a ſtretched out arme, and ſmyte it with plages as afore, and wyll deſtroye all the lande of it. Egypte ſhall mourne, and the foundacions of it ſhal be ſmytten with the plage and punyſhment, that God ſhall brynge vpon it.

B They that tyll the ground*, ſhal mourne: for theyr ſedes ſhall be deſtroyed thorow the blaſtynge and hayle/ and an horryble ſtarre. Wo worth the worlde and them that dwell therin/ for the ſwearde and theyr deſtrucyon draweth nye/ and one people ſhall ſtande vp to fyght agaynſt another/ & ſwerdes in their hādes. For men ſhalbe vnſtedfaſt, and ſome ſhal do vyolence vnto other: they ſhal not regarde theyr kyng and prynces/ the wayes of theyr doynges and hādlinges in theyr power. A man ſhall deſyre to go into the cytie/ & ſhal not be able. For because of theyr pryde the cyties ſhalbe brought in feare/ the houſes ſhall ſhake/ and men ſhall be afrayed. A man ſhall haue no pytie vpon hys neyghboure/ but one ſhall prouoke another vnto batayle to ſpoyle theyr goodes because of the honger of bread, and because of the great trouble.

Beholde, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the C vprysyng, from the South, from the Eaſt & Lybanus to turne vnto thē, and reſtore the thynges that they haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my choſen, ſo wyl I do alſo, and recompenſe thē in theyr boſome. Thus ſayeth the Lorde God: My ryght hand ſhal not ſpare the ſynners, & my ſwerde ſhall not ceaſſe ouer them, that ſhed the innocent bloude vpon earth. The fyre is gone out from his wrath, and hath conſumed the foundacions of the earth, and the ſinners like the ſtrawe that is kyndled. Wo worth them that ſynne, & kepe not my commaundementes/ ſayeth the Lorde. I wyll not ſpare them. Go your way ye chyldren frome vyolence defyle not my Sanctuary: for the Lord knoweth all them that ſynne agaynſt him/ and therfore delyuereth he them vnto death & deſtrucyon. For nowe are the plages come vpon ẏ worlde, and ye ſhall remayne in them. For God ſhall not delyuer you, because ye haue ſynned agaynſt hym.

D Beholde, an horryble vyſyon commeth from the Eaſte, where generacions of Dragōs ſhal come out/ and the people of the Arabes with many charettes, and the multitude of them ſhall be as the wynde vpon earthe/ that all they whiche heare them ragynge in theyr wrath, may feare and be afrayed/ and as the wylde bores out of the wood, ſo ſhall they go out, and with great power ſhal they come & ſtande fyghtyng wᵗ them & ſhal waſt the porcyon of the lande of the Aſſyrians.

And then ſhall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembryng their byrth, and ſhall turne aboute ſwearynge together in greate power, to perſecute them. But theſe ſhalbe afrayed, & kepe ſilence at theyr power and ſhall fle: and one out of the lande of the Aſſirians ſhal beſege them, & conſume one of them/ and in theyr hoſte ſhalbe feare & drede, and ſtryfe among theyr kynges.

E Beholde cloudes from the Eaſte, & from the North vnto the South, and they are very horryble to loke vpon, full of wrath and ſtorme. They ſhall ſmyte one vpon another and they ſhal ſmyte at the great ſtarre vpon earth and theyr ſtarre, and the bloude ſhalbe from the ſwerde vnto the bely, and the ſmoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there ſhalbe great ferefulneſſe & tremblyng vpon earthe/ and they that ſe the wrath ſhall be afrayed/ and a tremblynge ſhall come vpon them.

And then ſhall there come greate raynes from the South & from the Northe, & parte from the Weſt, and from the ſtormy wynde from the Eaſt, and ſhall ſhut thē vp agayne and the cloude which he rayſed vp in wrath, and the ſtarre to cauſe feare towarde ẏ Eaſt

& weſt wynde, ſhalbe deſtroyed: & the greate cloudes ſhalbe lyfte vp, & the myghtie cloudes full of wrathe/ and the ſtarre/ that they maye make all the earth afrayed and them that dwell therin. and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horryble ſtarre / fyre and hayle and flyenge ſweardes/ and many waters: that all feldes may be full, and al ryuers/ and they ſhal breake downe the cytyes and walles, mouñtaines and hylles/ al trees, wood/ and the graſſe of the medowes / and al their frute. And they ſhal go ſtedfaſt vnto Babylon/ and make her afrayed / they ſhall come to her and beſege her / the ſtarre & all wrath ſhall they poure out vpon her.

G Then ſhall the duſt & ſmoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, ſhal bewayle her: and they that remayne vnder her, ſhal do ſeruice vnto them that haue put her in feare? And thou Aſia ẏ comforteſt thy ſelfe alſo vpõ the hope of Babylon/ and art a worſhip of her perſonne: Wo be vnto the thou wretch/ becauſe thou haſt made thy ſelfe lyke vnto her, & haſt deckte thy daughters in whoredome/ that they might triũphe and pleaſe thy louers, whiche haue alwaye deſired to cõmitte whordome with the: thou haſt folowed the abhominable cite in all her workes and inuencions.

Therfore ſayth God: I wyl ſende plages vpõ the/ wyddowhode, pouerte/ hõgre, warres/ and peſtylence/ to waſt thy houſes with deſtruccion and death, and the glorye of thy power ſhalbe dryed vp as a floure, whẽ the heate riſeth ẏ is ſent ouer the: Thou ſhalt be ſycke as a pore wyfe that is plaged & beaten of wemẽ: ſo that the myghtie and louer ſhal not be able to receyue the. Wolde I ſo hate the ſayeth the Lorde? If thou haddeſt not alwaye ſlayne my choſen, exaltynge the ſtroke of thy handes/ and ſayde ouer theyr death / whẽ thou waſt dronken: ſet forth the beautie of thy countenaunce.

The reward of thy whoredome ſhalbe recompenſed the in thy boſome/ therfore ſhalt thou receyue rewarde.

H Lyke as thou haſt done vnto my choſen (ſayeth the Lorde) euẽ ſo ſhall God do vnto the/ and ſhal deliuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren ſhall dye of honger/ and thou ſhalt fall thorowe the ſwerde. Thy cytyes ſhalbe broken downe, & all thyne ſhall periſhe with the ſwerde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes ſhall dye of hongre / and eate their owne fleſh, & drynke their owne bloud for very hongre of bred and thyrſt of water. Thou vnhappy ſhalt come thorowe the ſee, and receyue plages agayne.

In the paſſage they ſhall caſt downe the ſlayne cytie, & ſhall rote out one parte of thy lande, & conſume the porcyon of glory. They ſhall treade the downe lyke ſtubble, & they ſhalbe thy fyre & ſhal conſume the: thy cities & thy lande, thy woode & thy frutefull trees ſhal they burne vp wt the fyre. Thy chyldren ſhal they cary awaye captiue, & loke what ẏ haſt, they ſhall ſpoyle it, & marre the bewtye of thy face.

¶ The Heathen ſhalbe punyſhed.

CAPI. XVI.

WO be vnto the Babylon & Aſia, wo be vnto the Egypt & Syria: gyrde your A ſelues wt clothes of ſack & hearte/ & mourne your chyldren/ be ſory / for your deſtruccyon is at hande. A ſwerde is ſente vpon you, and who wyll turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled among you, and who wyl quench it? Plages are ſet vnto you & what is he that wyl driue them awaye? May any man dryue awaye an hongrye lion in the wode? Or maye any man quẽch the fyre in ſtubble, whã it hath begõne to burne? May one turne agayne the arowe that is ſhot of a ſtrõg archer? The myghtye Lorde ſendeth the plages, & what is he that wyl driue them awaye? The fyre is kindled & gone forth in his wrath, & what is he ẏ wyll quenche it? He ſhal caſt lyghtnynges, & who ſhal not fere? He ſhal thõdre, & who ſhall not be afrayed? The Lorde ſhal threaten, & who ſhall not vtterly be beaten to poulder at his preſence? The earth quaketh, & the foundacions therof: the ſee aryſeth vp wt waues from the depe, & the floudes of it are vnquyete & the fyſhes therof alſo before the Lord/ & before the glory of his power. For ſtrong is his ryght hande ẏ holdeth the bowe, his arowes that he ſhoteth, are ſharpe, & ſhal not myſſe / when they begynne to be ſhot into the endes of the worlde.

Beholde the plages are ſente, & ſhall not turne agayne/ tyl they come vpon earth. The B fyre is kyndled, and ſhal not be put out/ tyll it cõſume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe whiche is ſhot of a myghtye archer, returneth not backewarde: euen ſo the plages that ſhal be ſent vpon earth/ ſhal not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me/ who wil delyuer me in thoſe dayes? The begynnyng of ſorowes and great mournyng: the begynnyng of darth and greate death/ the begynnyng of warres/ and the powers ſhal ſtande in feare: the begynnynge of euyls/ and they ſhal tremble euery one. What ſhal I do in theſe thynges/ when the plages come? Beholde/ honger, and plage/ trouble and anguyſh are ſent, as ſcourges for amendemēt. But for all theſe thinges they ſhal not turne from theyr wyckedneſſe, nor be alway myndefull of the ſcourges.

C Beholde, vitailes ſhalbe ſo good cheape vpon earth, that they ſhall thinke thē ſelues to be in good caſe: & euen then ſhall myſchefe growe vpon earth, warres, darth and great diſquietnes. For many of them ỳ dwel vpon earth ſhal periſh of honger, & the other that eſcape the hongre, ſhall the ſwerde deſtroy: & the deed ſhalbe caſt out as dong, & there ſhal be no mā to cōfort them. For the earth ſhalbe waſted, & the cities ſhalbe caſt downe: there ſhalbe no mā left to tyl the earth & to ſowe it. The trees ſhal geue frute, & who ſhal plucke them of & gather them? The grapes ſhall be rype, & who ſhall treade thē? For all places ſhalbe deſolate of men, ſo ỳ one man ſhal deſyre to ſe another, or to here his voyce. For of one whole cytie there ſhalbe ten left, & two in the felde, which ſhall hyde them ſelues in the thycke buſhes, and in the clyffes of ſtones: lyke as whē there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneyard is gathered, there are left ſome grapes, of them that diligently ſought thorowe the vyneyarde.

D Euen ſo in thoſe dayes there ſhalbe thre or foure left, for thē that ſearch theyr houſes with the ſwerde. And the earth ſhalbe left waſte, and the feldes therof ſhall waxe olde: and her wayes and al her pathes ſhall grow full of thornes, becauſe no man ſhal trauaile there thorowe. The daughters ſhal mourne, hauynge no brydegromes: the wemen ſhall make lamentacion, hauyng no huſbandes / their daughters ſhal mourne, hauīg no help of theyr brydgrome. In the warres ſhal they be deſtroyed, and theyr huſbādes ſhal periſh of hongre. O ye ſeruauntes of the Lord, here theſe thynges/and marke thē. Beholde/the worde of the Lorde, O receyue it: beleue not the Goddes of whom the Lord ſpeaketh. Beholde/the plages drawe nye, & are not ſlacke in tarieng. Lyke as a trauaylynge woman / which after the .ix. moneth bryngeth forth a ſonne, when the houre of the byrthe is come, an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chylde cōmeth to the byrth, they tary not the twynckelynge of an eye: Euen ſo ſhall not the plages be ſlacke to come vpon earth, and the worlde ſhall mourne, & ſorowes ſhall come vpon it on euery ſyde.

O my people, heare my worde/ make you redy to the batayle: and in all euyll be euen as pylgrems vpon earth. * He that ſelleth / let him be as he that flyeth his waye: and he that byeth as one that wyl leſe. Whoſo occupyeth marchaundyes / as he that wynneth not: & he that buyldeth / as he that ſhall not dwell therin: he that ſoweth, as one that ſhal not reape: he that twyſteth the vineyarde, as he that ſhall not gather the grapes: they that mary/as they that ſhal get no chyldren: and they that mary not: as the wyddowes: and therfore * they that labour, labour in vayne For ſtraungers ſhall reape their frutes, and ſpoyle their goodes, ouerthrow their houſes, & take their chyldren captiue, for in captiuite and hongre ſhal they get chyldren. And they that occupye their marchaundies with robbery, howe longe decke they theyr cytyes / theyr houſes/theyr poſſeſſyons/and perſonnes: the more wyll I punyſhe them for theyr ſynnes, ſayeth the Lorde. Lyke as an whore enuyeth an honeſt woman / ſo ſhall ryghteouſnes hate iniquite, when ſhe decketh her ſelfe/and ſhall accuſe her to her face, when he cōmeth that defendeth/whiche ſhal make inquiſicion for all ſynne vpon earthe. And therfore be not ye lyke therevnto, nor to the workes therof: for or euer it be long, iniquite ſhalbe taken away out of the earth/& ryghteouſnes ſhall raygne amonge you.

F Let not the ſynner ſaye/ that he hathe not ſynned: for coles of fyre ſhall burne vpon his head, which ſayeth before the Lord God and his glory: I haue not ſynned. Beholde/the Lord knoweth all the worckes of men/their ymaginacions, their thoughtes and theyr hertes. * For he ſpake but the worde: let the earth be made/and it was made: let the heauen be made, and it was made. In his worde were the ſtarres made/& he knoweth the nōbre of them. He ſearcheth the groūde of the depe, & the treaſures therof: he hathe meaſured the ſee, and what it conteyneth. He hath ſhut the ſee in the myddeſt of the waters, and with his worde hath he hāged the earth vpō the waters. He ſpredeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpō the waters hath he founded it. In the deſerte and drye wyldernes hathe he made ſprynges of water/and poles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes / that the floudes myght poure downe frome the ſtony rockes to water the earth. He made man/ & put hys herte in the myddeſt of the bodye/ and gaue hym breth/lyfe and vnderſtandyng, yee and the ſprete of the Almyghty God, which made al thynges, and hath ſerched the grounde of all the ſecretes of the earth.

He

G He knoweth your ymagynacyons and inuencions/and what ye thynke when ye ſinne/ and wolde hyde your ſynnes. Therfore hath the Lorde ſearched and ſought out all youre workes/and he ſhall bewraye you all. And when your ſynnes are brought forth/ye ſhal be aſhamed before men, & your owne ſynnes ſhalbe your owne accuſers ī that day. What wyll ye do? Or howe wyll ye hyde youre ſynnes before God and his Aungels? Beholde/ God him ſelfe is the iudge, feare him/leue of from your ſynnes, and forget your vnryghtuouſnes, & medle nomore with them: ſo ſhal God leade you forthe, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde/the heate of a great multitude is kyndled ouer you, & they ſhall take awaye certayne of you / and fede the ſlayne with Idols: & they that conſent vnto thē, ſhalbe had in deriſion, laughed to ſcorne and troden vnder fote.

For vnto the places there ſhalbe a place/ H and in the nexte cytyes a great inſurreccyon vpon thoſe that feare the Lorde. They ſhall be lyke mad mē/they ſhall ſpare no mā: they ſhal ſpoyle & waſte ſuche as fere the Lorde / theyr goodes ſhall they take from them, and ſhutte them out of theyr houſes. Then ſhal it be knowen who are my choſen, & they ſhalbe tryed as the golde in the fyre. Here O ye my beloued/ſayeth the Lorde: beholde/ the dayes of trouble are at hāde/but I wyll delyuer you frō the ſame. Be not ye afrayed, diſpayre not/for God is your captayne.

Who ſo kepeth my commaundementes and preceptes (ſayeth the Lorde God) let not youre ſynnes weye you downe/ and let not youre vnryghtuouſneſſe be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are ſubdued vnto theyr ſynnes / and tangled in theyr wyckedneſſe: lyke as a felde is hedged in with buſhes/and the path therof couered with thornes, that no mā may trauayle thorow: and ſo is he taken/ and caſte in the fyre/and brent.

¶ The ende of the .iiij. Boke of Eſdras.

Here beginneth the Booke of Tobias.

¶ Tobias beynge taken pryſoner, forſaketh not the lawe of trueth. The mercy and charyte of Tobias and the maners of him in his youth. He taketh Hannah to wyfe, by whome he hath a ſonne named Tobias. He ſuccoureth Gabel with money. He and his are fayne to flye, but after the death of Sennaherib they returne agayne.

CAPI. I.

Tobias was of the trybe & cite of Nepthali, which lieth A in ẏ hye coūtres of Galile aboue Naaſon the way towarde ẏ weſt, hauīg the cytie of Sephet vpon the lefte ſyde.

Though he was taken preſoner in the dayes of Salmanaſar kyng of the Aſſyryās neuertheleſſe beyng in captiuite, he forſoke not the waye of trueth: In ſo muche ẏ whatſoeuer he myght get/he parted it dayly with his felowes preſoners & brethren / that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger then all in the tribe of Nepthali, yet dyd not he behaue him ſelfe childeſhly in his workes And when al the other went to ẏ golden calues, which Jeroboā the kyng of Iſrael had made he him ſelf alone fled al their cōpanies & gat him to Jeruſalem vnto ẏ temple of the Lorde, & there worſhypped ẏ Lorde God of Iſraell, faythfully offerynge of all his fyrſte frutes & tythes, ſo that in the thyrde yeare he miniſtred al the tythes vnto the ſtraungers & conuertes. Theſe & ſuche lyke thinges dyd he obſerue accordyng to the law of God, whē he was yet but yonge.

B But when he was a mā, he toke out of his owne tribe a wife called Anna, & of her he begat a ſōne, whom he called after his owne name, & taught hī from his youth vp / to feare God, & to refrayne from all ſynne.

Nowe when he with his wyfe, hys ſonne and with all his kynred was come in captiuite vnto the cytie of Niniue/ what tyme as they al dyd eate of the meates of the Heathē/ he kept his his ſoule/and was neuer defyled in theyr meates. And for ſo muche as he was myndeful of the Lorde in al his herte. God gaue him fauoure in the ſyght of Salmanaſar the kynge/whiche gaue him power to go where he wolde, and ſo had he lybertie to do whatſoeuer him lyſt.

C So wente Tobias vnto all them ẏ were in preſon, and comforted them and, gaue thē wholſome exortacions. And whan he came to Rages a citie of the Medes, hauynge ten talentes of ſyluer (of the thynges where with the kyng had honoured him) ⁊ ſawe among a greate company of people of his kynred / one Gabelus (which was of his owne tribe) beyng in neceſſite, he gaue hī the ſaid weight of ſyluer vnder an hand wrytyng.

After a longe ſeaſon when Salmanaſar the kynge was deed, and Sennaherib hys ſonne reigned in his ſteade, which hated the chyldren of Iſrael, Tobias went dayly thorowe out al his kynred / and comforted thē, ⁊ gaue of hys goodes to euery one of them / as much as he myght: he fed the hongrie, clothed the naked, ⁊ buried the dead and ſlayne and that diligently.

D And when Sennaherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Iewry (what tyme as God punyſſhed him for his blaſphemy) and in his wrath ſlew many of the chyldren of Iſrael. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was tolde the kyng, he cōmaunded to ſleye him / and toke awaye all his goodes. Neuertheles, Tobias with hys ſonne and with hys wyfe fled hys way and was hyd naked / for there were many that loued hym. But after .xlv. dayes the kynge was ſlayne of his owne ſonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his houſe, ⁊ all his goodes were reſtored vnto hym.

¶ Tobias byddeth ſuche of hys frendes as feare God, to a Banckett or Feaſte. he is reproued of hys frendes he feareth God more then the kyng. He becommeth blynde by the permyſſyon and ſufferaunce of God, hys kynſfolckes mocke hym.

CAPI. II.

A After theſe thynges vpon a ſolempne day of the Lorde Tobias made a good feaſt in his houſe / and ſayde vnto his ſonne: Go thy way ⁊ bryng hither ſome of our tribe ſuche as feare God, that they may make mery with vs. And when he was gone / he came agayne / and tolde his father / that one of the chyldren of Iſrael lay ſlayne vpon the ſtrete. And immediately he leapte from his table / left the feaſt: came faſting to the deed coarſe, toke him ⁊ bare him preuely into his houſe / that when the Sunne was downe / he might ſafely burye hym. And when he had hyd the coarſe / he dyd eate hys meate with mournyng and feare / remembrynge the wordes / that the Lord ſayde by the Prophete Amos: your hye feaſtes ſhalbe turned to ſorow and heuyneſſe.

B But when the Sunne was downe, he wente his waye and buryed him: Thē al his neyghbours reproued him ſayeng: It is not longe / ſens it was commaunded to ſleye the because of this matter, and haſt ſcarce eſcaped the daunger of death / and burieſt thou the deed agayne? Neuertheles Tobias fearynge God more then the kyng / toke the bodyes of the ſlayne / and hyd thē in his houſe / and buried them at mydnyght.

C It happened vpon a day, that he had buried yͤ deed, ⁊ was wery, came home, ⁊ layed him downe by the wall ⁊ ſlepte. And whyle he was a ſlepe / there fell downe vpon his eyes warme dong out of the ſwalowes neſt / ſo that he was blinde. This temptacion dyd God ſuffre to happen vnto hym / that they whiche came after, myght haue an exāple of his pacience, lyke as of holy Iob. For in ſo muche as he euer fered God from hys youth vp / ⁊ kepte his commaundementes, he grudged not agaynſt God, that yͤ plage of blyndnes chaunſed vnto him / but remayned ſtedfaſt in the feare of God, ⁊ thāked God, al the dayes of his lyfe.

D For lyke as bleſſed Iob was had in deryſion of kynges, euen ſo was he laughed to ſcorne of his elders and kynſfolckes, whiche ſayde vnto him: where is thy hope / for the which thou haſt done almes and buryed the deed? But Tobias rebuked them / ⁊ ſpake: Saye not ſo / for we are the chyldren of holy men / and loke for the lyfe, whiche God ſhall geue vnto them / that neuer turne theyr beleue from him. Anna hys wyfe wente dayly to the weeuynge worcke: ⁊ loke what lyuynge ſhe coulde get with the labour of her hādes / ſhe brought it. And it happened yͭ ſhe toke a kyd and brought it home.

And when her huſbande herde it crye / he ſayd: loke yͭ it be not ſtollē / reſtore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawful for vs / to eate or to touch any thynge of theft. Then was his wyfe angrie, and ſayde: Now is thy hope become vayne openly / and thy almes dedes are manyfeſt. With theſe ⁊ ſuche lyke wordes dyd ſhe caſt him in the tethe.

¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Raguel is ſclaundred of her fathers ſeruaunt. The prayer and faſtyng of Sara. And alſo the innocēcy and chaſtyte of her. The prayers of Tobias and of Sara are harde.

CAPI. III.

A Then Tobias toke it heuely / and with teares beganne to make his prayer, ſayenge: O Lorde thou arte ryghtuous, and all thy iudgementes are true, yee all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgement. And nowe O Lorde be myndeful of me, and take no vengeaunce of my ſynnes, nether remēbre my myſdedes, nether the myſdedes of my elders. For we haue nat bene obedient vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we ſpoyled brought into captiuite, into death/ into deriſion ⁊ ſhame vnto al naciõs, among whom thou haſt ſcatred vs. And nowe O Lord, thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundemẽtes, nether haue we walcked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordyng to thy wyll/ and commaunde my ſprete to be receyued in peace, for more expedyente were it for me to dye/ then to lyue.

B At the ſame tyme it happened/ that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Rages a cytie of the Medes was ſclaundred of one of her fathers handmaydes, namely/ that ſhe ſhulde haue had ſeuen huſbandes, whiche as ſone as they were gone in vnto her, were ſlayne of ỹ deuyll called Aſmodeus. Therfore, whẽ ſhe reproued the maydẽ for her faute/ ſhe anſwered her/ ſaying: God let vs neuer ſe ſone nor daughter of the more vpon earthe/ thou kyller of thy huſbandes. Wylt thou ſleye me alſo, as thou haſt ſlayne ſeuen men? At thys voyce wente Sara into an hye chambre of her houſe, and thre dayes and thre nyghtes ſhe neither eate nor dranke, but cõtinued in prayer, and beſought God with teares/ that he wolde delyuer her from thys rebuke.

C Upon the thyrde day it chaunced, ỹ when ſhe had made an ende of her prayer, ſhe prayſed the Lord ſaying: Bleſſed be thy name O God of our fathers/ whiche when thou arte wrothe, ſheweſt mercy, ⁊ in tyme of trouble thou forgeueſt the ſynnes of them, that call vpon the. Unto the O Lorde turne I my face/ vnto the lyft I vp myne eyes. I beſeche the O Lorde / loſe me out of the bondes of thys rebuke / or els take me vtterly awaye from of the earthe. Thou knoweſt Lorde/ ỹ I neuer had deſyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my ſoule cleane from al vnclenly luſt. I haue not kepte company with thoſe that paſſe theyr tyme in ſporte, neyther haue I made my ſelf partaker with thẽ that walke in lyght behauour. Neuertheles an huſbãde haue I cõſented to take/ not for my pleaſure but in thy feare.

D Now peraduenture eyther I haue bene vnworthy of them/ or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happly haſt kept me to another huſbande. For why? thy councel is not in the power of man. But whoſoeuer loueth the ⁊ leueth the a ryght/ is ſure of thys / that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued / it ſtandeth in the tryeng/ and yf he endure in pacyence/ he ſhall haue a rewarde and be hyghly crowned: and yf he be in trouble / that God (no doute) ſhall delyuer hym: and yf his lyfe be in chaſtenyng, that he ſhal haue leue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou haſt no pleaſure in our dampnacyon: and why? after a ſtorme thou makeſt the wether fayre and ſtyll: after wepyng and heuynes thou geueſt greate ioye. Thy name O God of Iſrael be prayſed for euer. At the ſame tyme were both their prayers herde in the ſight of the maieſty of the hyeſt god. And Raphael the holy Angell of the Lorde was ſent to helpe them both, whoſe prayers came at one tyme together before God.

CAPI. IIII.

A SO when Tobias thought hys prayer to be herde/ that he myght dye/ he called vnto hym his ſonne Tobias and ſayde vnto him: My ſõne, heare the wordes of my mouth and lay them in thyne herte as a foundacion When God taketh awaye my ſoule, burye thou my bodye and holde thy mother in honour al the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughteſt to remẽbre, what and howe great parels ſhe ſuffered for the in her wombe. And when ſhe alſo hathe fulfylled the tyme of her lyfe/ bury her beſide me. Haue god in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and beware/ leaſt at any tyme thou conſente vnto ſynne, and leſt thou let ſlyppe the cõmaundementes of the Lorde our God.

B Geue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: ⁊ ſo ſhal it come to paſſe, that ỹ face of the Lorde ſhall not be turned awaye from the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou haſt much, geue plentuouſly: yf thou haſt lytle/ do thy diligẽce, gladly to geue of that litle. For ſo gathereſt ỹ thy ſelfe a good rewarde in the day of neceſſyte. For mercy delyuereth from all ſynne ⁊ from death, ⁊ ſuffreth not the ſoule to come in darkenes. A great cõfort is mercy before the hie God/ vnto all them that ſhewe it.

C My ſonne/ kepe the well from all whoredome, and (beſyde thy wyfe) ſe that no faute be knowne of ỹ. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde / for in pryde beganne all deſtruccyon.

Whoſoeuer worketh any thinge for the/ immediatly geue him his hire, and loke that thy hired ſeruauntes wages remayne not by the ouer nyght. Take that thou neuer do vnto another man / the thynge that thou woldeſt not another man ſhulde do vnto ỹ. Eate thy bred with the hongrye ⁊ poore / ⁊ couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bredde and wyne vpon the burial of the ryghteous, and do not thou eate & drynke therof wt the ſynners. Aſke euer councel at the wyſe.

Be alwaye thanckefull vnto God / and beſeche hym/that he wyll ordre thy wayes/ & yͭ whatſoeuer yͧ deuyſeſt or takeſt in hand/it may remayne in him. I certyfie the alſo my ſone,yͭ (when thou waſt yet, but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of ſyluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytie of the Medes, & hys hande wrytynge haue I by me. And therfore ſeke ſome meanes,how yͧ mayeſt come by hym/& receyue of him the ſayde weyght of ſyluer/& geue him his handwrytyng agayne.

My ſonne, be not afrayed:treuth it is we leade here a poore lyfe:but greate good ſhal we haue,yf we feare God, and departe from all ſynne,and do well.

¶ The obedyence of yonge Tobias to his father, which is ſent vnto Rages. An Angell accompanyeth with hym in his iourney.

CAPI. V.

A THEN anſwered Tobias his father / and ſayde: father/all that thou haſt cõmaunded me, wyl I do/and that diligently But howe I ſhall requyre this money I can not tell. Neyther dothe he knowe me, nor I him. What token ſhall I geue him? And as for the way thyther/ I neuer knewe it. Then his father anſwerd hym,and ſayde: I haue his hande wrytyng by me, which when thou ſheweſt hym, immediately he ſhall paye the. But go thy way now/and get the ſome faithful man to go with the for an hyre/that thou mayeſt receyue the money / whyle I am yet lyuynge. Then went Tobias out, and vpon the ſtrete he founde a fayre yonge man ſtandyng, gyrded vp/ and as it were one readye to take his iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Angell of God, but ſaluted hym / and ſayde: From whēce art thou/thou good yonge man? He aunſwered: Of the chyldren of Iſrael.

B And Tobias ſayde vnto hym: knoweſt yͧ the waye, that ledeth vnto the countre of the Medes? He anſwered: I knowe it well/and all thoſe ſtretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus / that dwelleth in Rages a cytye of the Medes / which lyeth vpon the mounte Egbathanis. Tobias ſayd vnto him: I praye the/tary for me,tyl I haue tolde my father theſe thynges. Then went Tobias in,& tolde his father al. At the which his father marueiled,& prayed that he wolde come in vnto him.

C Nowe whē the Angel came in,he ſaluted him, and ſayd: Ioye be wyth the for euermore. And than Tobias ſayd: what ioye can I haue that ſit here in darkenes, & ſe not the light of heauē? The yonge man ſayde vnto him: Be of good cheare/God ſhall helpe the ſhortly. And Tobias ſayd vnto him: Canſt yͧ brynge my ſonne to Gabelus/ vnto the cytie of Rages in Medea? And when yͧ cōmeſt agayne/ I ſhall paye the thy hyre. And the Aungell ſayde vnto him: I ſhall leade thy ſonne/and brynge him to the agayne. Thē Tobias anſwered him,tell me I praye yͤ/of what houſe or of what trybe arte thou? The Angell Raphael ſayde vnto him: Askeſt thou after the kynred of an hyrelyng/or ſekeſt thou a gyde for thy ſonne to go with hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias yͤ ſone of great Hananias. And Tobias anſwered: thou art come of a great kynred: but I praye the be not diſpleſed/that I deſyred to know thy kynred. The Angel ſayde vnto him: thy ſonne ſhall I leade forth ſafely, & brynge him whole to the agayne.

D Then anſwered Tobias, and ſayde: wel, go on your way, & God be in your iourney,& his angel beare you company. So whē they had prepared all thynges, yͭ they wolde take wt them in theyr iourney: Tobias bad his father & his mother fare wel, and they wēte on theyr way both together. Nowe when they were gone: his mother beganne to wepe, & ſayde: The ſtaffe of our age haſt thou taken away, & ſent hym from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the whiche thou haſt ſent hym awaye. If we had bene content with our pouertie, thys had bene great ryches vnto vs/that we ſaw our ſone here. Then ſayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure ſone ſhall come to vs agayne ſafe & ſounde, & thine eyes ſhal ſe him. For I truſt, that the good Angel of God ſhal beare him cōpany, & ordre wel all the thynges that he dothe: ſo yͭ he ſhall come to vs agayne wt ioye. At theſe wordes his mother left of from wepyng, and helde her tonge.

¶ Yonge Tobias is delyuered from the fyſhe, by the angell. The Angell counſayleth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

CAPI. VI.

A SO Tobias went on hys way / & a dogge folowed hym/ and the fyrſte nyght they abode by the water of Tygris. Then wente he out to waſh his fete/& behold/ there came forth an horrible fyſhe to deuoure hym. Of whom Tobias was afrayed,& cryed with a loude voyce/ſayenge: Lorde/he commeth vpon me. And the Angell ſayde vnto him: Take hym by the gyll/ and drawe hym to the. And he dyd ſo/and drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fyſhe begane to leape at hys fete.

B Then ſayde the Aungell vnto hym: take out the bowels of thys fyſhe/ and as for the herte/ the gall & the leuer/ kepe them by the. For theſe thīges are neceſſary and good for medecyne. Tobias dyd ſo/ and roſted the fyſh/ and they toke hym with them in theyr iourney: the reſydue they ſalted, as much as was ſuffycyent for them/ tyll they came to Rages a cytye of the Medes. Then Tobias aſked the aungell/ & ſayde vnto hym: I praye the brother Azaria, tell me, wherto are theſe thynges good of the fyſh that thou haſt bydden me kepe?

The Aungell anſwered him and ſayde: If thou layeſte a pece of the herte vpon the coales/ the ſmoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euyll ſpretes/ whether it be from man or from woman, ſo that from thence forth the ſame ſhall come nomore vnto thē. The gall is good to anoynte or to ſtryke the eyes withall/ where as there is any blemiſh in them, ſo that they ſhalbe whole.

C And Tobias ſayde vnto hym: where wylt thou that we remayne? The Aungel anſwered & ſayd: Here is a nye kynſman of thyne, one Raguell by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, and hath nether ſonne nor daughter but her. All hys good belongeth vnto the, and thou muſt mary her, and therfore deſyre her of her father, & he ſhall geue her the to wyfe. Then anſwered Tobias and ſayde: As I vnderſtande, ſhe hath bene maryed vnto ſeuen huſbandes, and they al are deed: and I haue herde ſaye, that the deuell ſlewe them. I am afrayed therfore, leſte ſuche thynges happen vnto me alſo: whiche yf it came to paſſe (ſeynge I am the onely ſonne of my father and my mother) I ſhulde brynge them in theyr age with ſorowe to theyr graues.

D Then ſayde yͤ Aungel Raphael vnto him: Heare me, & I wyll tell the what they be, of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of ſuch a faſhion, that they ſhut God out from thē & frō theyr hert. & geue thē ſelues to theyr owne luſt, euen as it were an horſe & Mule, which haue no vnderſtãdyng: vpõ ſuch hath the deuel power. But when thou takeſte her, and arte come into the chamber, wytholde thy ſelfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy diligence vnto nothyng but vnto prayer with her.

And in the firſt nyght, roſt the liuer of the fyſh, & the deuel ſhalbe dryuen awaye. The ſecõde nyght ſhalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarkes. The thyrde nyght ſhalt thou optayne yͤ blyſſyng of God ſo that whole chyldren ſhalbe borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the deſyre of chyldren, then for any fleſhly luſt: that in the ſede of of Abraham thou mayeſt optaine the bleſſynge in chyldren.

¶ Yonge [illegible] and the Aungell come to the houſe of Raguell. He [illegible] Raguels daughter to wyfe and ob-tayneth her.

CAPI. VII.

A Then wente they into Raguell, whiche receaued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he ſayde vnto Anna hys wyfe: Howe lyke is thys yong man vnto my ſyſters ſonne? And when he had ſpoken thys, he ſayde: whence be ye good brethren? They ſayde: Of the trybe of Nephthaly, out of the captyuyte of Nyniue. Then ſayde Raguel vnto them know ye my brother Tobias? They ſayde: yee, we knowe hym well. And when he had ſpoken muche good of hym/ the Aungell: ſayde vnto Raguell. Tobias of whome thou aſkeſt,, is thys yonge mans father. Then Raguell bowed him ſelfe downe and wepte, toke hym aboute the necke, and kyſſed hym, and ſayde: Gods bleſſynge haue thou my ſonne, for thou arte the ſonne of a good verteous man. And Anna his wyfe & Sara hys daughter wepte alſo.

B Now whē they had talked together, Raguel bad kyll a wether, and to make a feſte. And when he prayed them to ſyt downe to dynner, Tobias ſayd: I will nether eat nor drynke here thys daye, excepte thou fyrſte graũt me my peticion, & promiſe me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguel herd thys, he was aſtonied, for he knew, what had happened vnto the other ſeuen men, yͭ wēte in vnto her: and he beganne to feare, that it ſhulde chaũce vnto him alſo in lyke maner.

And whyle he ſtode ſo in doute and gaue the yonge man no anſwere, the aungel ſayd vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belõgeth thy daughter to wife, therfore might none other haue her.

C Then ſayde Raguell: I doute not/ but God hathe accepted my prayers and teares in his ſight: & I truſt he cauſed you to come vnto me for yͤ ſame intent, that thys daughter of myne myght be maryed in her owne kinred/ accordynge to the lawe of Moſes. And now dowte thou not/ but I wyll geue her vnto the: So he toke the ryght hande of hys daughter / and gaue her into the ryght hand of Tobias, and ſaide: The God of Abraham / the God of Iſaac / and the God of Iacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfyll hys bleſſyng in you. And they toke a letter, and made a wrytyng of the mariage. And thē made they mery, and prayſed God. And Raguell called Anna hys wyfe vnto hym / and bad her prepare another chamber and thether he brought Sara hys daughter and ſhe wepte. Then ſayde he vnto her: Be of good chere my daughter / the Lord of heauen geue the ioye, for the heuynes that thou haſt ſuffred.

¶ The Angel byndeth the deuyl. Tobias exhorteth hys wife to prayer, ⁊ they pray thre dayes before they lye together.

CAPI. VIII.

A NOwe after that they had ſupped / they brought the yong man into her. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the Aungell / and toke out of hys bagge a pece of the lyuer of the fyſhe / and layed it vpon the hote coales. So the Aungell Raphaell toke holde of the deuell / and ſente hym awaye / and bounde hym in the wyldernes of the vper Egypt. Then ſpake Tobias vnto the vyrgyn / and ſayde: Up Sara / let vs make oure prayer vnto God to day / to morowe / and ouermorowe: for theſe thre nyghtes wyll we reconcyle our ſelues with God: and whan the thyrde nyght is paſt / we ſhal ioyne together in dutye of maryage. For we are the chyldren of holy men and we maye not come together as the Heathen / that knowe not God.

B Then ſtode they vp both together / and beſought God earneſtly / that he wolde preſerue them. And Tobias ſayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers / prayſed be thou of heauen and earth / of the ſee / welles / ⁊ floudes / and of all thy creatures ÿ be therin. Thou madeſt Adam of the ˟moulde of the earthe / and gaueſt him Eua for an helper And now Lord thou knoweſt that it is not becauſe of voluptuouſnes / ÿ I take thy ſyſter of myne to wyfe, but only for the loue of chyldren / in whō thy name be bleſſed for euer. And Sara ſayde: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercy vpō vs / and let vs both come whole and ſounde together to a good age.

Gene. ii. a.

C And aboute ÿ cocke crowynge it happened / that Raguel called his ſeruaūtes / and they wente with hym, to make a graue. For he ſayde: it is chaunced now vnto hym peraduenture / as it did vnto the other ſeuē mē, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made ÿ graue / Raguel came agayne to hys wyfe, and ſayde vnto her: ſende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deed, that I maye burye hym afore it be lyght daye. So ſhe ſet a mayden to ſe, which when ſhe came into ÿ chāber, founde them whole and ſounde, ſlepyng together. And ſo ſhe came agayne, and brought good tydinges. Then Raguel and Anna hys wyfe prayſed the Lord and ſayd: Prayſed be ÿ, O Lorde God of Iſraell, for it is not happened vnto vs as we thought.

D For thou haſte dealte mercyfully with vs, and put awaye frō vs the enemye that perſecuted vs. and haſt ſhewed mercy vnto yō her two beloued. O Lorde, cauſe them to magnify the more perfectly, and to offre the ſacryfyce of thy prayſe, and of theyr health: that all people may knowe / that thou only arte God in all the earthe.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded hys ſeruauntes / to fyll the graue / that they had made / with earth / ⁊ fore it was lyght / and bade hys wyfe prepare a feaſte / and to make redy all thynges that were neceſſary for meate / to ſuch as wente by the waye. He cauſed two fat kyne alſo / and foure wethers to be ſlayne, and meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remaine with hi two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, ⁊ made thys wrytynge, that the halfe whiche remayned, ſhulde fall vnto Tobias after theyr death.

¶ The Aungel goeth to Gabelus, at the deſyre of Tobias which delyuereth the letter, and receaueth the moneye.

CAPI. IX.

A THEN Tobias called vnto hym the Aungell / whome he thought to haue bene a man / and ſayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias / I praye the herken vnto my wordes: yf I ſhulde geue my ſelfe to be thy ſeruaunte / I ſhal not deſerue thy prouidence. Neuertheleſſe I beſeche the / that thou wylt take the beaſtes and the ſeruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in rages the cyte of Medes / and deliuer hym his hand wrytyng / and receaue the money of him / and praye hym to come to my mariage.

B For thou knoweſt thy ſelfe, that my father wyll nombre the dayes: and if I tary one day to long, he wylbe ſory in his mynd. Nowe ſeiſt thou how earneſtly Raguell hathe requyred me / ſo that I cannot ſaye hym nay.

Then toke Raphaell foure of Raguels ſeruauntes, and two Camels, and were vnto Rages the cyte of the Medes: and when he had foūd Gabelus he gaue him his hādwrytyng, ⁊ receaued all the money. He tolde hym

C him alſo of Tobias the ſonne of Tobi, how all thynges had happened/ and cauſed him to come wͭ hym to the mariage. Now when he came into the houſe of Raguel/ he founde Tobias ſyttyng at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyſſed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayſed God, and ſayde: the bleſſyng of the God of Iſrael haue thou for thou art the ſonne of a ryght vertuous and iuſt man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth great almes. And bleſſyng haue thy wife, & your elders, that ye may ſe your chyldren & your childers chyldrē, vnto the thyrd & fourth generaciō, & your ſede be bleſſed of the god of Iſraell, which reygneth worlde without ende. And when they all had ſayde D Amē, they wēt to yͤ feaſt, but with yͤ feare of the Lord helde they the feaſt of the mariage.

¶ Tobias and hys wyfe are ſadde for the taryaūce of their ſonne. Raguel ſendeth agayne Tobias with hys wyfe.

CAPI. X.

A NOw whyle yonge Tobias made long taryeng/ by reaſon of the mariage, his father was full of care and heuyneſſe/ and thought: what ſhulde be the cauſe/ that my ſonne taryeth ſo longe? Or why ſhulde he be kept ſo long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is deade/ and no man wyll geue hym the money. Thus begāne he to be very ſorowfull, he and Anna hys wyfe with him, & beganne to wepe both together/ becauſe their ſōne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother/ ſhe wepte with diſcomfortable teares/ and B ſayd: Wo is me, my ſonne: Oh what ayled vs to ſende the awaye into a ſtraūge cōtre yͤ lyght of our eyes, thou ſtaffe of our age/ thou comforte of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generacyon? Seynge all the thynges yͭ we haue are onely ī the/ we ſhuld not haue ſent the away from vs. Then Tobias comforted her, and ſayd: holde thy tonge and be not dyſcomforted, oure ſonne is whole and ſounde: the man that we ſent hym withall, is faythful ynough. Neuertheles ſhe might in no wiſe be comforted: but dayly went out loked aboute, and wente about all the ſtretes, wherby ſhe thought he ſhulde come agayne: that (yf it were poſſyble) ſhe myght ſe hym commynge a farre of.

But Raguell ſayde vnto hys ſonne in C lawe: O tary here, and I ſhall ſende a meſſaunger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel him that thou art in good health. Tobias ſayde vnto hym: I am ſure, that my father & my mother counte euery day, and that their hertes are ſory.

So when Raguell prayed Tobias with many wordes, and wolde in no wyſe heare hym/ he delyuered Sara vnto him, and the halfe part of all his good: in ſeruauntes and handmaydens, in ſhepe, in Camels, and in kyne, and much money, & ſo ſent him away from hym with peace and ioye, and ſayde: The holy aungell of the Lorde be with you D in your iourney, and bringe you forth ſafe & ſounde, that ye may finde al thinges ī good caſe with your elders, & that myne eyes may ſe your children afore I dye. So the parens embraced their daughter, kiſſed her, and let her go, exhortyng her to honour her father & mother in law, to loue her huſbande, to rule well her huſholde, to kepe her houſe in good order, and to ſhewe her ſelfe fautleſſe.

¶ Yonge Tobias leuing his wyfe & houſhold in the myddle waye/ commeth before with the Aungel. The dreame of his mother loking after her ſōne. He is ioyfully receaued of his father and mother, Sara commeth ſeuen dayes after.

CAPI. XI.

AS they nowe were goyng home ward A agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Niniue. And the Aungell ſayde. Brother Tobias, thou knoweſt howe thou haſte left thy father: therfore yf it pleaſe the, we two wyl go before, and let the houſholde with thy wyfe and the catell come ſofte and fayrly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they ſhulde go before, Raphael ſayde vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fyſh with the, for it ſhalbe neceſſary. So Tobias toke of the gal, & they wēt their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias ſat dayly B by the waye ſyde vpon the toppe of an hyll/ from whence ſhe myght ſe farre aboute her. And whyle ſhe was waytynge there for hys commynge/ ſhe loked a farre of, and anone ſhe perceaued her ſonne commynge/ and ranne and tolde her huſbande/ ſaying: Beholde, thy ſonne commeth. And Raphael ſayde vnto Tobias: As ſoone as thou commeſt into the houſe, immediatly worſhyppe the Lorde thy God, and geue thankes vnto hym: then go to thy father: and kyſſe hym, & ſtryke his eyes ouer with the gal of the fiſh, that thou haſt brought with yͤ. For be ſure, that his eyes ſhal ſtraight waye be opened/ and thy father ſhal ſe the lyght of heauen, & ſhal reioyce at the ſyght of the. Then yͤ dog that had bene with them in their iourneye, ranne before, and came as a meſſenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladneſſe.

So the blynde father aroſe and beganne C to runne, and ſtombled with hys fete/ and gaue a ſeruaunt his hand, came to mete his ſonne, receaued hym, and kyſſed him, he and his wyfe/ and they begāne to wepe for ioye.

Nowe when they had worſhypped and thanked God/they ſat downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyſhes gall / and anoynted hys fathers eyes: and taried whyle an houre and than beganne the blemyſh to go out of his eyes lyke as it had bene the whyte ſkine of an egge: which Tobias toke /and drew from hys eyes, and immediatly he receaued hys ſyght.

D Then they prayſed God, he and his wyfe, and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias ſayde: O Lorde God of Iſraell/ I geue the prayſe and thanckes for thou haſt chaſtened me, and made me whole. And lo, nowe do I ſe my ſōne Tobias. After ſeuen dayes came Sara his ſōnes wyfe alſo whole and ſoūde with all the houſholde & catell, with camels and much money of hys wyues, and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelꝰ: and he tolde his father and hys mother al ỹ benefytes which God had done for hym/ by the man that led hym. Achior alſo and Nabath Tobias ſiſter ſōnes came, & were glad and reioyſed with hym/ by reaſon of all the good that God had ſhewed vnto hym. And ſo for the ſpace of ſeuē dayes they made mery/and were ryght ioyfull euerychone.

¶ Yonge Tobias rehearſeth vp vnto hys father the pleaſures that the aungell dyd hym. He offreth vnto the aungell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

CAPI. XII.

A THen Tobyas called his ſonne vnto hym, and ſayde: What may we geue thys holy man / that wente with the? Tobias anſwered hys father/ and ſayde: Father/what rewarde ſhall we geue hym? Or what thynge can deſerue his benefytes? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me ſafe agayne: he receaued the money frō Gabelus he cauſed me to get my wyfe / he droue the euyll ſpyrte from her/ he hath bene an occaſyon of gladneſſe to her father and mother: he delyuered me / that I was not deuoured of the fyſhe, he hath made the to ſe the lyght of heauen, yee we all haue receaued greate good of him. Howe ſhulde we worthely deſerue theſe thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylt deſyre him/ yf happly he wyll vouch ſafe/ to take w hym the halfe of all that we haue brought.

B So the father and the ſonne called hym/ toke him aſyde/and beganne to praye hym, ỹ he wolde be cōtent to take in good worth/ the halfe parte of al that they had brought. Then ſayde he ſecretly vnto them. Prayſe ye the god of heauen, and geue thankes vnto hym before all men lyuynge/for he hathe ſhewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges ſecrete, but to ſhew & to prayſe ỹ workes of god, it is an honorable thyng. Prayer is good with faſtinge, and mercy is better, then to horde vp treaſures of gold. For mercy delyuereth from death/ clenſeth ſynne, and cauſeth to fynde euerlaſting lyfe. But they that do ſynne & vnrighteouſnes, are the enemyes of theyr owne ſoule.

C Wherfore I tell you the truth, and wyll hyde nothinge from you. When thou prayedſt with teares, and buryedſt the dead, and lefteſt thy dyner, and hiddeſt the deed in thy houſe vpon the day tyme/that thou myghteſt burye them in the nyghte/ I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And becauſe thou waſt accept and beloued of God, it was neceſſary that temtacyon ſhulde trye the. And now hath the Lord ſent me to heale the, and to delyuer Sara thy ſonnes wyfe from the euyll ſpryte. For I am Raphael an aungel, one of the ſeuen that ſtande before God.

C When they hearde thys / they were ſore afrayed / and trembled / and fell downe vpon theyr faces vnto the grounde. Then ſayde the Aungel: Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene with you/ it is the wyll of God: geue prayſe and thanckes vnto hym.

You thought that I dyd eat and drynke with you / but I vſe meate that is inuyſyble/and drincke that cannot be ſene of men.

Nowe therfore is the tyme that I muſte turne agayne, vnto him that ſent me: but be ye thanckfull vnto God, and tel out all hys wonderous workes.

And when he had ſpoken theſe wordes/ he was taken awaye out of theyr ſyghte/ ſo that they ſawe hym nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces by the ſpaces of thre houres, & prayſed God: when they roſe vp, they tolde all hys wonderous workes.

CAPI. XIII.

A THen olde Tobias opened his mouthe and prayſed the Lorde/and ſayde: Great art thou O Lorde for euermore /and thy kigdome worlde without ende: for thou ſcourgeſt and healeſt: thou ledeſt vnto hell, and bryngeſt out agayne /and there is none that may eſcape thyne hande. O geue thankes vnto the Lorde, ye chyldren of Iſraell, and prayſe hym in the ſyght of the heathen.

For amonge the Heathen whiche knowe

hym not hathe he ſcatered you, to the intent that ye ſhulde ſhewe forth hys maruelous worckes: and cauſe them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghtye but he. He hathe chaſtened vs for our myſdedes/⁊ for hys owne mercye ſake ſhall he ſaue vs.

Conſydre then, howe he hath dealt with you/and prayſe hym with feare ⁊ drede, and magnyfye the euerlaſtynge kynge in youre
B worckes. I wyll prayſe him euen in the lande of my captiuyte/for he hath ſhewed his maieſtye vnto ſynful people. Turne you therfore O ye ſynners, and do ryghteouſnes before God/and be ye ſure, that he wyll ſhewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, ⁊ my ſoule, we wyll reioyſe in God. O prayſe the Lorde all ye his choſen, holde ẏ dayes of gladneſſe, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jeruſalem thou cytie of God/the Lorde hath punyſhed the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O prayſe the Lorde in thy good thynges/and geue thankes to the euerlaſtynge God, that he may buylde vp his tabernacle agayne in the/that he maye call agayne vnto the, all ſuche as be in captiuyte/⁊ that thou mayeſt haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre lyght ſhalte thou ſhyne / and all the endes of the worlde ſhall honoure the. The people ſhall come vnto the from farre/ they ſhall brynge gyftes, ⁊ worſhip the Lorde in the/and thy lande ſhall they haue for a Sanctuary/for C they ſhall call vpon the greate name in the.

Curſed ſhall they be that deſpyſe the/⁊ all that blaſpheme the/ſhalbe condempned: but bleſſed ſhall they be that buylde the vp. As for the/thou ſhalt reioyſe in thy chyldren, for they all ſhalbe bleſſed / and gathered together vnto the Lorde. Bleſſed are they all that loue the/and that be glad of thy peace. Prayſe thou the Lorde, O my ſoule, for the Lorde our God hathe delyuered hys cytie Jeruſalem from all her troubles. I wyll counte my ſelfe happye/yf my ſede remayne to ſe the clearnes of Jeruſalem.

The gates of Jeruſalem ſhalbe buylded with Saphyre and Smarage / and all the compaſſe of her walles with precyous ſtones. All her ſtretes ſhalbe paued with white marble ſtone/and in al ſtretes ſhal Alleluya be ſonge. Prayſed be the Lorde/ whiche hath exalted her / that his kyngdome maye be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And ſo Tobias made an ende of hys talkynge.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the deſtruccion of Niniue. His ſõne returned to Raguel, after the deceaſſe of hys father ⁊ mother.

CAPI. XIIII.

AND after that Tobias had gottẽ his
A ſight agayne, he lyued .xlii. yeares, ⁊ ſawe his chylders chyldren Now when he was .C. and .ii. yeare olde, he dyed: and was buryed honorably in Niniue. For when he was ſixe and fyftye yeares of age he loſt the ſyght of his eyes, and whẽ he was thre ſcore yeare olde he gat his ſyght agayne. The reſidue of his lyfe led he in ioye/and increaſed well in ẏ feare of God / ⁊ departed in peace.

B But in the houre of hys death he called vnto hym hys ſonne Tobias / and ſeuen yonge ſpringaldes hys ſõnes chyldren, and ſayde vnto thẽ: The deſtruccyon of Niniue is at hande, for the worde of the Lorde can not fayle, and oure brethren that are ſcatred out of the lande of Iſrael/ſhal come thyther agayne. And the whole lande of it that hathe bene waſte/ ſhalbe fylled: ⁊ the huoſe of God that was brent in it / ſhalbe buylded agayne: and all ſuche as feare God / ſhall returne thyther: the Heathen alſo ſhall forſake theyr Idols, and come to Jeruſalem, and dwel there, ⁊ al the kynges of the earth ſhalbe glad of her, and worſhyp the Lorde God of Iſrael.

C And therfore my chyldren, heare your father: Serue the Lorde in the trueth, ſeke al his wyll / and do the thynge that pleaſeth hym. Commaunde youre chyldren that they do ryght/geue almes/be myndeful of God, and euer to be thankful vnto hym in trueth and with all theyr power. Heare me nowe therfore my chyldren/⁊ abyde not here: but in what daye ſoeuer ye haue buryed youre mother beſyde me/get you from hence. For I ſe, that the wyckednes of it ſhall brynge it to deſtruccyon and ende.

After the death of his mother, Tobyas D departed awaye frõ Niniue, with his wyfe and chyldren, and with his childers childrẽ, and came agayne to hys father ⁊ mother in lawe, and founde them whole and in a good age, and toke the care of them. And he cloſed theyr eyes, and was heyre vnto al Raguels goodes, and ſawe the fyfth generacyon, and his chylders childrẽ. And whẽ he was .xcix. yeare of age, he dyed in ẏ feare the Lorde, and his kynſfolkes buryed him. And all his poſterytye continued in a good lyfe, and holy conuerſacyon: ſo that they were loued and accepted bothe of God and men / and of all the people of the lande.

¶ The ende of the booke of Tobias.

The booke of Judith.

¶ The buyldynge of Egbathanis. The vyctory of Nabuchodonoſor agaynſt Arpharat. The meſſengers of Nabuchodonoſor are deſpyſed.

CAPI. I.

Arpharat the Kyng of A the Medes ſubdued many people vnto his dominyon, & buylded a noble ſtronge cytie, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre ſtone, foure ſquared, ſeventye cubytes hye / and thyrtye cubytes brode. He made towres there vpon an hundreth cubites hye. But vpon the foure corners euery ſyde was twentye fote brode. He made the portes in the heygth, lyke as the towres. This kynge truſted in his myghtye hoſt / and in his glorious charettes.

B So in the twelfth yeare of his raygne it happened, yͭ Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of yͤ Aſſirians (which raygned in yͤ great cytye of Niniue) fought agaynſte Arpharat, and ouercame hym in the great felde called Ragau, beſide Euphrates & Tigris & Jadaſon in yͤ felde of Erioth yͤ kynge of the Elykes.

Then was yͤ kyngdome of Nabuchodonoſor exalted, & his herte was lyfte vp: & he ſente vnto all them yͭ dwelt in Celicea, in Damaſcus, in Libanus, & vnto yͤ Heathen that dwelt in Carmel & Cedar, & to ſuch as dwelt in Galile in yͤ great felde of Eſdrelon, C to all them yͭ were in Samaria, & beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jeruſalem and the whole lande of Jeſſe vnto yͤ moũtaynes of Ethiopia. Unto all theſe dyd Nabuchodonoſor the kynge of the Aſſirians ſende meſſaungers. But they all with one conſent wolde nat agre vnto him, & ſent yͤ meſſaungers agayne empty, & put them awaye without honour. Thẽ Nabuchodonoſor yͤ kynge toke indignacyon at thoſe landes, & ſware by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all thoſe countres.

¶ Holofernes is ſent of Nabuchodonoſor, to ſubdue al the worlde. The preparacyon and purſute of Holofernes.

CAPI. II.

A IN the thyrtenth yeare of kynge Nabuchodonoſor, vpon the .xxij. daye of the fyrſt moneth, it was deuyſed in the courte of Nabuchodonoſor yͤ kynge of the Aſſirians, that he wolde defende hym ſelfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders / all his captaynes / and mẽ of warre, and ſhewed them hys ſecrete coũſel, & tolde them that his purpoſe was / to brynge the whole earth vnder his domynyon. Nowe when they were all content with this ſayenge, Nabuchodonoſor the kynge called Holofernes the chefe captayne of his warres, & ſayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynſte all the kyngdomes of the weſt, and ſpecially agaynſt thoſe that haue deſpiſed my cõmaundemẽt. Thou ſhalt ſpare no realme, all ſtrõge cyties ſhalt thou brynge in ſubieccyon vnto me.

Then Holofernes called together al the captaynes & rulers of all the power in Aſſiria, B & muſtred the ſoudyers vnto the hoſte (lyke as yͤ kyng commaunded him) namely an hundred & twentye thouſande fyghtynge men vpon fote, & twelue thouſande archers vpon horſebacke. All his ordinaũce ſent he before wͭ an innumerable multytude of camels, ſo that yͤ hooſt was well prouyded for wyth oxen: and ſmal catell, & that wythout nombre. He cauſed corne to be prepared out of al Syria for his hoſt. Much gold & ſiluer alſo toke he out of the kynges houſe. So C he toke his iourneye / he and all his hooſt, with charettes / horſmen, & archers: of whõ there were ſo many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the greſhopers.

And when he was gone paſt the borders of the Aſſyrians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, which lye vpon yͤ left ſyde of Celicia: & ſo he went vp into al theyr caſtels, and wanne euery ſtronge holde. As for the welthy cytie of Melothus, he brake it downe / & ſpoyled all the chyldren of Tharſis and the Iſmaelites, which laye towarde the wyldernes, & vpon the South ſyde of yͤ lande of Chelon. He wente ouer Euphrates alſo, & came into Meſopotamia and brake downe all the hye cytyes that were there, frõ D the broke of Mambre tyl a man come to the ſee: and he toke the borders in from Celicia vnto yͤ coaſtes of Japhet towarde yͤ South.
He caryed awaye all the Madiates, & ſpoyled all theyr goddes, & whoſoeuer withſtode hym / he ſlewe them with the ſwerde. After thys he wente downe into the felde of Damaſcus in the tyme of harueſt / & brente vp all the corne & all the trees / and cauſed the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt in the earth.

¶ Kynges become wyllyngly ſubiect to Holofernes. The tyrannye and crueltye. of hym.

CAPI. III.

SO the kynges and Prynces of al cyties A and landes ſent theyr Embaſſytoures:
namely, they of Syria and Meſopotamia, Syria Sobal, and Lybia, & Celicia, which came

came to Holofernes, & ſayde: Let thy wrath ceaſſe towarde vs: It is better for vs to ſerue ÿ great kyng Nabuchodonoſor with oure lyues, and to be ſubiecte vnto the, then ÿ we ſhulde dye, & be ſlayne, and receaue greater hurte. All oure cyties & poſſeſſions, al mountaynes & hylles, all feldes, great & ſmall cattel, ſhepe, goates, horſes & camels, all oure goodes & houſholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy ſubieccyon be it al together. We oure ſelues alſo and oure chyldren wylbe thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lorde, and vſe oure ſeruyce at thy pleaſure. B

Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with horſmen & great power, and conquered all ſtronge fenſed cities, and all that dwelt in the lande. And out of all cyties he toke ſtronge men, & ſuche as were mete for ÿ warre, to helpe hym. There came ſuch a feare alſo vpon thoſe countrees, that the indwellers of all the cyties, the Princes and rulers/and the people together/wente forth to mete hym as he came/and receaued hym honorably with garlādes and torches, with daunſes/tabrettes and pypes. C

Neuertheleſſe, though they dyd this, yet myght they nat ſwage his rigorious ſtomach: but he deſtroyed their cyties, & hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonoſor the kynge had cōmaunded hym ÿ he ſhulde roote out all the Goddes of the lande: to the intent ÿ he only myght be called & taken for God, of ÿ nacyons whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So went he thorowe Syria Sobal, and thorow all Apamia, and all Meſopotamia, and came to the Idumeans/in the lande of Gabaa and Scytopoly/and toke theyr cyties/ and remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he cauſed all the whole multytude of hys Hoſte to be gathered together. D ¶ Iſrael requyred helpe of God, agaynſt Holofernes. They faſt and praye.

CAPI. IIII.

A When the chyldren of Iſrael ÿ dwelt in Iewry hearde thys/ they were ſore afrayed of hym. There came trēblynge and feare vpon thē/leaſt he ſhulde do that vnto the cytie of Ieruſalem/and the temple of the Lorde, ÿ he had done to other cyties & theyr temples. So they ſent into al Samaria rounde about vnto Iericho, toke in & occupyed al the toppes of the mountaynes, made faſt the townes wyth walles/& prepared corne for them agaynſte the battayll.

Eliachim alſo the Preſte wrote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Eſdrelon (which lyeth ouer agaynſt ÿ great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all thoſe by whom men myght haue paſſage vnto them, that they ſhulde take in the wayes of ÿ mountaynes/ wherby there might be any waye & paſſage to Ieruſalē/and that they ſhulde holde dilygent watch where any ſtrayte was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Iſrael dyd, as Eliachim the Preſt of the Lorde had commaunded thē. And all the people cryed vnto the Lorde earneſtly/& humbled theyr ſoules wyth faſtynges & prayers, they and theyr wyues. The preſtes put on heary clothes, & layed the yong babes before the temple of the Lorde, & couered the aulter of the Lorde with an hearye cloth. And wyth one accorde they cryed vnto the Lorde God of Iſrael, ÿ theyr chyldren ſhulde not be geuen into a praye, & theyr wyues into a ſpoyle/ÿ theyr cyties ſhulde not be layed waſt, & that theyr Sanctuary ſhulde not be vnhalowed/& ſo they to be a ſhame & rebuke vnto ÿ Heathē. B

Then Eliachim the hye Preſt of ÿ Lorde went rounde about all Iſrael, & ſpake vnto them ſayinge: Be ye ſure/ that the Lorde wyll heare youre peticyons/yf ye contynue ſtedfaſt in faſtynges & prayers in the ſyght of the Lorde. Remēbre Moyſes the ſeruaūt of the Lorde/which ouerthrewe the Amalechites (that truſted in theyr might & power, in theyr hooſt/in theyr ſhyldes/in theyr charettes & horſmen) not wyth weapens, but with holy prayers. Euen ſo ſhal all the enemyes of Iſraell be/yf ye continue in this worke/ that ye haue begonne. So vpon thys exhortacyon they contynued in prayer before the Lorde. In ſo much ÿ they whiche offred brēt ſacrifyces vnto the Lorde/offred the offringes vnto the Lorde/beynge arayed in hearye clothes & had aſhes vpō theyr heades. And they all beſought God frō theyr whole hert/ÿ he wolde vyſet hys people of Iſrael.

¶ Holofernes is diſcontent with the Iewes, Achior ſheweth vnto Holofernes the meruailes of God done vnto the Iewes, for which thynge the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with him.

CAPI V.

AND worde came to Holofernes the Prynce of ÿ warres of the Aſſyryans, A that the chyldren of Iſrael prepared thē ſelues to make reſiſtaūce, & how they had ſtopped ÿ wayes betwixte ÿ mountaynes. Then was he excedynge wroth, & called all the Prynces of Moab, & the Captaynes of Ammon, & ſayde vnto thē: Tell me, what people is thys, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what & howe great are theyr cyties? What is theyr power? Or what maner of hooſte haue they? who is theyr Captayne? And why do they deſpyſe vs (more then all thoſe that dwel in the Eaſt) and come nat forth to mete vs, that they myght receaue vs with peace? Then Achior the Captayne of all the Ammonites anſwered, & ſayd: Syr, yf it pleaſe the to heare, I wyll tell the trueth before the cōcernynge this people yͭ dwel in the mountaynes, and there ſhall no lye go out of my mouth. This people is of the generacyō B of the Caldees, they dwelt fyrſt in Meſopotamia, for they wolde not folowe yͤ goddes of theyr fathers that were in the lande of the Caldees, & ſo forſoke they the cuſtomes of theyr forefathers (which had many goddes) and worſhipped one God, that made heauē and earth: whiche alſo cōmaunded thē, that they ſhulde go frō thence, & dwel at Haran. Nowe when there came a dearth into the whole lande, they wente downe to Egypte, & there they dwelt * foure hundreth yeares, in the which they multiplied ſo greatly, that theyr hooſt myght nat be nombred. And when the kynge of Egypte oppreſſed them, and ſubdued thē in buyldynge of his cyties with makynge of claye & brycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lorde, which puniſhed the whole lande of Egypt with diuerſe plages.

Gene.xv.c.
Actes.vii.a
Exod.xii.f.
Gala.iii.c.

C Nowe when the kynge of Egypte let thē go theyr waye, and the plage ceaſſed, & then folowed after them, to take them, & to brynge them agayne into his ſeruice, whyle they were flyenge awaye, the God of heauen opened the ſee/ſo that the waters ſtode faſt vpō bothe the ſydes as a wall, and theſe wente thorowe the botome of the ſee drye ſhod. In the which place when an innumerable people of the Egypcyans folowed vpon them, they were ſo ouer whelmed with yͤ waters: that there remayned nat one/to tell them yͭ came after/howe it happened. So when thys people was paſſed thorow the reed ſee, they came into the wildernes of the mounte Sinai/where neuer mā myght dwel afore, and where the ſonne of mā had neuer reſted. There were the bytter waters made ſwete for them/that they myght drynke, and fourty yeares had they meate from heauen. Whereſoeuer they wente (without bowe & arowe, without buckler or ſwerde) theyr God fought D for them/and cauſed them to haue the vyctory. Yea, no man was able to hurte thys people/excepte it were ſo, that they departed vnfaythfully from the worſhyppynge of the Lorde theyr God. But as ofte as they worſhypped any other beſyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be ſpoyled / to be ſlayne/ and to be put to confuſion. Neuertheleſſe, as oft as they were ſory for departyng from the worſhyppe of theyr God / the ſame God of heauen gaue them power and ſtrength to withſtande theyr enemyes.

Moreouer / they ſlewe the kynge of the Canamites/Jebuſites/Phereſites/Hethites/Euites/and Amorites/& all yͤ myghtye in Heſebon/& toke theyr landes and cyties in poſſeſſion: & ſo longe as they ſynned nat in the ſyght of theyr God/it wente wel with thē/for theyr God hateth vnrighteouſneſſe. For in tymes paſte when they wente out of E the waye/ which God had geuen them/that they ſhulde walke in it, they were deſtroyed in dyuerſe bataylles of many nacyons: and many of them were caryed awaye preſoners vnto a ſtraunge countre. But nowe lately they haue turned them ſelues agayne vnto the Lorde theyr God / and are come together agayne out of the countres where they were ſcaterd abrode: & thus haue they cōquered theſe mountaynes/& dwel therin: and as for Jeruſalem where theyr Sanctuary is/they haue it agayne in poſſeſſyon.

And therfore my Lorde, make dilygent inquyſyon/yf thys people haue done wyckedneſſe in the ſyght of their God, then let vs go vp agaynſt them/for douteles theyr F God ſhall delyuer them into thy handes/ and ſubdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not diſpleaſed theyr God, we ſhall nat be able to withſtande them, for theyr God ſhall defende them, and ſo ſhall we be a ſhame to all the worlde.

Nowe when Achior had ſpoken out theſe wordes, all the greate men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to ſleye hym/and ſayde one to another: what is he this/which darre ſaye, that the chyldren of Iſraell are able to withſtande Nabuchodonoſor the kynge and his hooſt? where as they are an vnwepened people/without ſtrength or vnderſtandynge of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe that he hathe diſceaued vs/we wyll go vp into the mountaynes: and when the myghty men of them are taken, that he alſo ſhalbe ſtyckte with the ſwerde, that al people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonoſor is the God of the earth, & that there is none other without hym.

¶ Achior is commytted into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tree, but is lowſed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

CAPI. VI.

A So when they had left of ſpeakyng, Holofernes toke ſore indignacyon/ and ſayde vnto Achior: For ſo muche as thou haſt prophecyed vnto vs/ſayeng: that the people of Iſrael ſhalbe defended of theyr God, I wyll ſhewe the/that there is no God but Nabuchodonoſor, Yee when we ſley them al as one man/ thou alſo ſhalt peryſh with the thorow the ſwerde of the Aſſirians, & all Iſrael ſhal be deſtroyed with the / and then ſhalte thou fele/that Nabuchodonoſor is the Lorde of the whole earth. Then ſhal the ſwerde of my knyghthode go thorowe thy ſydes/and thou ſhalt fal downe ſtycke among the wounded of Iſrael / and ſhalt not come to thy ſelfe agayne/but be vtterly deſtroyed with them. But yf thou thinkeſt thy prophecy to be true, why doeſt thou then chaunge thy coloure? why arte thou afrayed? Thynkeſt thou that B my wordes are not able to be perfourmed? But that thou mayeſt know, that thou ſhalt fele theſe thynges with them/beholde, from this houre forth wyll I ſende the vnto yonder people/that when the punyſhment of my ſwerde (which they haue worthely deſerued) falleth vpon them, thou mayeſt be punyſhed with them.

So Holofernes cōmaunded his ſeruauntes to take Achior, & to cary hym vnto Bethulia, & to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Iſrael. Then Holofernes ſeruauntes toke hym, & went thorow the plaine felde. But when they drew nye vnto the mountaynes, the ſlynge caſters came out agaynſt them: Neuertheleſſe they gat them away by the ſyde of the mountayne/& bounde Achior hande and fote to a tree/& ſo lefte him boūde with wythes/and turned agayne vnto their Lorde.

Notwithſtandynge yͤ chyldren of Iſraell wente downe frō Bethulia/came vnto him/ lowſed him/brought him into Bethulia/ſet hym in the myddeſt of the people, and aſked him what the matter was, that yͤ Aſſirians had lefte him bounde?

C Oſias the ſonne of Micha of the tribe of Symeon/and Charmim (which is alſo called Gothoniel) were the principall rulers at the ſame tyme. Nowe when Achior ſtode in the myddeſt of the Senatours, and before them al he tolde them/what anſwere he gaue Holofernes/to the thyng that he aſked him/ and howe Holofernes people wolde haue ſlayne him for ſo ſayinge/and howe Holofernes hym ſelfe was wroth, and commaunded hym for the ſame cauſe to be delyuered vnto the Iſraelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Iſraell, he myght cōmaunde Achior alſo to be put to death with diuers tormentes/becauſe he ſayde: the God of heauen is theyr defēder. And whē Achior had plainely tolde out al theſe thinges, al the people fel downe vpon their faces, praiſyng the Lord/ & poured out theyr praiers together vnto the Lorde, wᵗ a general cōplaynt & wepyng, and ſayde: O Lorde God of heauē & of earth, beholde their pryde/& loke vpon our lowlynes and cōſyder how it ſtandeth wᵗ thy ſayntes/ and make it to be knowē/that thou forſakeſt nat thoſe/whiche holde them faſt by the, and howe yͭ thou bryngeſt the lowe/that preſume of them ſelues, and make theyr boſte in theyr owne ſtrength. D So when the wepynge and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the whole daye longe) was ended/ they comforted Achior, ſayenge: The God of oure fathers / whoſe power and ſtrength thou haſt prayſed/ſhal ſo rewarde the/that thou ſhalt rather ſe theyr deſtruccyon. When the Lorde oure God then ſhall geue his ſeruauntes thys lybertye/God be alſo with the among vs: ſo that yf it pleaſe the, thou wᵗ all thyne mayeſt dwell with vs.

Nowe when Oſeas had ended the coūcel he toke him into his houſe, and made a great ſupper, called the elders to it/ and ſo they refreſhed them ſelues after the faſtynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together/which made their prayers al the nyght longe in the congregacion/and beſought the God of Iſrael for helpe.

¶ Bethulia is beſeged of Holofernes. The people requyreth helpe of God. They of Bethulia wolde gyue ouer the cytye for wante of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentacyon.

CAPI. VII.

A The nexte daye/Holofernes commaunded hys hoſte / to go vp agaynſte Bethulia. There were an hundred and twentye thouſande fyghtynge men on fote and two and twentye thouſande horſſemen / beſyde the preparyng of them that were wōne: and came to them on euery ſyde out of the countrees and cityes whiche he had taken. All theſe prepared them ſelues vnto the battayl agaynſt the Iſraelites/and came on by the hyl ſyde/vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynſte Dothaim/ from the place which is called Belma/vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Eſdrelon. B

Nowe when the chyldrē of Iſrael ſaw ſo great a multitude of the Aſſirians/ they fell downe flat vpon the groūde/ſtrawed aſhes vpon theyr heades, and prayed with one accorde, that the God of Iſrael wolde ſhew his mercy vpō his people. And ſo they toke their weapens, and ſat betwixte the mountaynes in the narowe place, and kepte the waye day and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute / he founde the water ſprynge / whiche from the Southſyde was conueyed into ỹ cytie by a cōdite: this cōmaunded he to be directe another waye / & to cut their cōdite in ſunder. There were welles alſo not farre from the walles / whiche they vſed ſecretely / more for pleaſure then for neceſſytie.

C Then wente the Ammonites & ỹ Moabytes vnto Holofernes, & ſayd: The chyldren of Iſraell truſt neyther in ſpeare nor arowe / but kepe and defende the mountaynes and hylles. That thou mayeſt ouercome thē therfore without ỹ ſtrykynge of any batayle / ſet men to kepe the welles that they drawe no water out of them: ſo ſhalt thou deſtroy them without ſwearde, or at the leaſt they ſhall be ſo feble, that they muſt be fayne to geue ouer the cytye: whiche they thynke not able to be wonne, for ſo muche as it lyeth in the mountaynes. Theſe wordes pleaſed Holofernes well & all his mē of warre, and he ſet an hundreth at euery well rounde aboute.

D And when this watch had endured twentye dayes / the Ciſternes & all that had water, fayled them that dwelt in the cytie of Bethulia, ſo that in the whole cytie they had not drynke ynough for one daye / for the people had water geuen them daylye in a meaſure. Then came the men and wemen, yonge perſonnes and chyldren all vnto Oſias, & ſayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwyxte vs and the, for thou haſt dealt euyl with vs: thou woldeſt not ſpeake peaceably with the kynge of the Aſſyrians, therfore hathe God ſolde vs in theyr handes / and there is no mā to helpe vs where as we are brought downe before theyr eyes in thirſt and great deſtruccyon. Therfore gather nowe together al the people that be in the cytie / that we maye all yelde our ſelues wyllyngely vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captyue and prayſe the Lorde with oure lyues / then to be ſlayne and peryſhe, and to be laughed to ſcorne & ſhamed of euery man / when we ſe our wyues and children dye before our eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde / and the God of oure fathers (whiche puniſhed vs accordynge to the deſeruyng of our ſynnes) and gaue you warnyng, that ye geue vp the cytie nowe into the power of Holofernes hoſte / that our ende maye be ſhorte with the ſwearde / whiche els ſhall endure long, for want of water and for thyrſte.

E When they had ſpoken out theſe wordes, there was a great wepyng & howlyng in the whole cōgregacion, and ỹ of euery man, and they cried an whole hour long vnto God wt one voyce, ſaying: we haue ſynned wt our fathers, we haue done amyſſe / we haue dealte wyckedly. Thou ỹ art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punyſh our vnryghtuouſnes with thyne owne ſcourge, & geue not thoſe ouer ỹ knowledge the / vnto a people which knowe the not / leaſt they ſay amonge the Heythen: where is their God.

And when they were ſo wery with thys cryenge and weppynge, that they helde theyr tonges / Oſias ſtode vp with waterye eyes / and ſayde: O take good hertes vnto you / (deare brethren) and be of good cheare / and let vs wayte yet theſe fyue dayes for mercye of the Lorde: peraduenture he ſhal cut awaye his indignacyon, and geue glorye vnto hys name. But yf he helpe vs not when theſe fyue dayes are paſte / we ſhall do as ye haue ſayde.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Iudith, whiche reproueth the auncient, because they tempted the Lorde. She alſo moueth them to encorage and herte the people, and ſheweth her councel agaynſt the enemyes of the Iewes.

CAPI. VIII.

A AND it happened when theſe wordes came to the eares of Iudith a wydow, whiche was the daughter of Merari, the ſonne of Idox, the ſonne of Ioſeph / the ſōne of Oſia / the ſonne of Elat / the ſonne of Iamnor, the ſonne of Iedeon / the ſonne of Raphoim / the ſonne of Achitob, the ſōne of Melchia / the ſonne of Enam / the ſonne of Nathania / the ſonne of Salathiel / the ſonne of Simeon, the ſonne of Ruben. And her huſband was called Manaſſes, whyche dyed in the dayes of the barlye harueſte. For whyle he was byndynge the ſheues together in the felde / the heate came vpon his heade, and he dyed at Bethulia his cytye / and there was he buryed beſyde his fathers. Nowe was Iudyth hys deſolate wyddowe thre yeares and ſyxe monethes. And in the hygher partes of her houſe ſhe made her ſelfe a preuye chambre, where ſhe dwelt / beynge cloſed in with her maydens. B She ware a ſmocke of hearre / and faſted al the dayes of her lyfe / excepte the Sabbathes / and newe mones and the ſolempne dayes that the people of Iſrael kepte. She was a very fayre and beautifull perſone. Her huſband alſo had left her great ryches, a plentuous houſholde / great vnmouable poſſeſſiōs and many catell. This Iudith was a woman of a very good reporte with euery one, for ſhe feared yͤ Lorde greatly, and there was no body that ſpake an euel worde of her.

Whẽ this Judith herde, how Oſias had promyſed the people, yͭ after the fyfte day he wolde geue vp the cyte vnto the Aſſiriãs, ſhe ſent for the elders Chãbri ⁊ Charmy, ⁊ when they came to her, ſhe ſayde: what thynge is this, wherin Oſias hath cõſented that if god helpe not wͭin fyue dayes, he wyll geue ouer the cytie to the Aſſirians? what are ye, yͭ ye tempte the Lorde? This deuice optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hĩ vnto wrath and diſpleaſure. wyll ye ſet the mercy of the Lorde a tyme and appoynte hym a day after your wyll?

C Neuertheleſſe, for ſo muche as the Lord is pacyente/ let vs rather repent, pouryng out teares, and beſechyng hym of grace. For God threateneth not as a man: neyther wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therfore let vs hertely fall downe before hym/ and ſerue hym with a meke ſprete and with wepynge eyes ſay vnto the Lorde/ that he deale with vs accordyng to his owne wyll and mercy: that lyke as our hert is now vexed/ and brought lowe thorowe the pryde of them/ it maye ſo be conforted thorowe hys grace: in ſo muche as we folowe not the ſynnes of our fathers, which forſoke theyr God, and worſhypped other Goddes: for the whiche ſynne they peryſhed with the ſwearde/ were ſpoyled ⁊ brought to ſhame of all theyr ennemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely hym, for whoſe comforte let vs tary with mekeneſſe. He ſhal requyre and make inquyſicion for our bloude/ frome the vexacions of our enemyes: he ſhall brynge downe all the Heythen/ that ryſe vp againſt vs, and put them to dyſhonoure/ euen the Lorde our God.

D Therfore deare brethren, ſeynge ye are the honorable ⁊ elders in the people of God/ vnto whom all the people haue reſpecte, and vpon whom the lyfe of the people ſtandeth/ lyft vp theyr hertes with your exhortacyon/ that they maye call to remembraunce/ howe oure fathers alſo in tymes paſt were tempted, that they myght be proued/ yf they worſhypped theyr God a ryght. They ought to remembre, howe * our father Abrahám beynge tempted, and tryed thorowe many trybulacyons/ was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Iſaac/ ſo was Jacob/ ſo was Moſes/ and al they that pleaſed God/ beyng tryed thorowe many troubles/ were founde ſtedfaſt in fayth. Agayne/ they that receyued not theyr tẽptacyons with the feare of God, but put them ſelues forth with vnpaciency and murmurynge agaynſte God/ peryſhed of the deſtroyer/ and were ſlayne of ſerpentes. And therfore ſhuld not we vndertake to be auenged/ for the thyng that is done vnto vs: but to conſydre/ that all theſe punyſhementes are farre leſſe then our ſynnes and myſdedes. Beleuinge alſo that this correccyon commeth vnto vs (as to the ſeruauntes of God) for amendemente/ and not for our deſtruccion.

Gen. xxii. a.

E Then ſayde Oſias ⁊ the elders vnto Judith: All that thou ſpekeſt/ is true/ and no man can reproue thy wordes. Pray thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman/ and feareſt God. And Judith ſayde vnto them: Seyng/ ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my councell and deuyſe, yf it be of God: ⁊ beſeche God/ yͭ he wyll brynge my councel to good ende.

Thus haue I deuiſed: ye ſhal ſtande this nyght before the porte/ and I wyll go forthe wͭ Abra my mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God/ that he wyl graciouſly remẽbre his people of Iſrael wͭin fiue dayes, as ye haue ſaid As for the thynge that I go in hande wͭal/ aſke ye no queſtions of it, tyl I open it vnto you my ſelfe: do ye nothĩg els but pray vnto the Lorde our God for me. Then Oſias the prince of the people of Juda ſayd vnto her: Go thy way ĩ peace, the Lorde be wͭ the/ that we may be auẽged of oure ennemyes. And ſo they wente from her agayne.

¶ The prayer of Judith for the vyctory.

CAPI. IX.

A NOwe when they were gone theyr way/ Judyth wente into her cloſet, put on an heartye ſmocke/ ſtrawed aſſhes vpon her heade/ fell downe before the Lord, and cryed vnto hym/ ſayinge: O Lorde God of my father * Symeon/ which gaueſt hym a ſwerde for a defence agaynſt the enemyes/ that vſed vyolence and wylfulnes and that rauiſhed the vyrgin and put her to dyſhoneſty. Thou that gaueſt theyr wyues into a pray/ ⁊ theyr daughters into captiuite/ and al theyr praye for a ſpoyle vnto thy ſeruauntes, whyche bare a zele vnto the, helpe me wyddowe, O Lorde my God/ I beſeche the. For thou haſt done all thynges from the begynnynge: and loke what thou haſt taken in hande and deuiſed, it came euer to paſſe. For all thy wayes are prepared/ and thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlaſtyng forknoweledge. O loke nowe vpon the armies of the Aſſyrians, lyke as it was thy pleaſure ſomtime to loke vpon the hoſt of ỹ Egipciãs, when they being weapened: perſecute thy ſeruaũtꝭ, ⁊ put theyꝛ truſt in their charettes, hoꝛſme͂/ ⁊ in the multitude of their men of warre. But ỹ lokedſt vpon their hoſt/ caſtyng a thycke darkenes befoꝛe them: ⁊ when they came into the depe/ the waters ouerwhelmed them.

B Euen ſo Loꝛde, let it go with theſe/ that truſte in the power ⁊ multitude of their men of warre in theyꝛ charettes, arowes/ ⁊ ſpeares/ and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, whiche deſtroyeſt warres from the begynnyng/ and that thou art the Loꝛd. O lift vp thyne arme nowe, lyke as euer frõ the begynning, ⁊ in thy power bꝛynge their power to naught/ cauſe theyꝛ myght to fall in thy wꝛathe. They make theyꝛ boſte, that they wyll vnhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuary/ and to wayſt the tabernacle of thy name, ⁊ to caſt downe the hoꝛne of thyne aulter with theyꝛ ſwerde. Bꝛyng to paſſe (O Loꝛde) that the pꝛyde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his owne ſwearde, that he maye be take͂ w̄ the ſnare of his eyes in me/ and that thou mayeſt ſmyte hi͂ with the lyppes of my loue. O geue me a ſtedfaſt minde/ that I maye deſpyſe him and his ſtrength, ⁊ that I may deſtroye hym.

Thys ſhall bꝛynge thy name an euerlaſtynge remembꝛaunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthꝛowe hym. Foꝛ thy power (O Loꝛd) ſtãdeth not in ỹ power of men, neyther haſt ỹ any pleaſure in the ſtrength of hoꝛſes. There was neuer pꝛoude perſone ỹ pleaſed the, but in the pꝛayer of ỹ humble and meke hath thy pleaſure bene euermoꝛe.

C O thou God of the heauens/ thou maker of the waters/ and Loꝛde of all creatures/ heare me pooꝛe woman, callynge vpon the, ⁊ puttynge my truſte in thy mercy. Remembꝛe thy couenaunt/ O Loꝛde, and mynyſter woꝛdes in my mouth, and ſtablyſh this deuice in my hert, that thy houſe maye contynue ſtyll in holynes/ and that all the Heythen maye knowe/ that thou art God/ and that there is none other but thou.

¶ Judith decketh her ſelfe to go to Holofernes. The bleſſynge that the Elders geue Judith. Holofernes is in loue with Judith.

CAPI. X.

A AND whẽ ſhe had left of cryeng vnto the Loꝛd/ ſhe roſe vp from the place, where ſhe had lyen flat befoꝛe the Loꝛd, ⁊ called her mayden/ wente downe into her houſe, layed the heayre clothe fro͂ her/ put of the garmentes of her wyddowhode/ waſhed her body/ anoynted her ſelfe with pꝛecyous thynges of ſwete ſauoure/ bꝛoyded and platted her hearre/ ſet an hoode vpon her head/ and put on ſuche apparell as belongeth vnto gladneſſe, ſlyppers vpon her fete/ armellettꝭ, ſpãges, earynges, fynger rynges, and deckt her ſelfe w̄ all her beſt aray.

The Loꝛde gaue her alſo a ſpecyall beautye and fayꝛenes (foꝛ all this deckyng of her ſelfe was not done foꝛ any voluptuouſneſſe and pleaſure of the fleſhe, but of a ryght diſcrecyon and vertue, therfoꝛe dyd the Loꝛde increaſe her bewtye) ſo that ſhe was excedyng amiable and welfauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue hyꝛ mayde alſo a botell of wyne/ a pot with oyle, pottage, cake bꝛead ⁊ cheſe/ and went her way.

B Nowe whan ſhe came to the poꝛte of the cytie/ ſhe founde Oſias and the elders of the cytie waytyng there. Whiche whã they ſawe her, they were aſtonnyed, ⁊ marueled greatly at her bewty. Neuertheleſſe/ they aſked no queſtiõ at her/ but let her go, ſaying: The god of our fathers geue the his grace, ⁊ with hys power perfourme al the deuyſe of thy herte: ỹ Jeruſalẽ maye reioyce ouer the, ⁊ that thy name may be in the nõbꝛe of the holy ⁊ ryghtuous. And al they ỹ were there, ſayde w̄ one voyce: ſo be it, ſo be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Loꝛd, ⁊ went out at the poꝛte, ſhe and her mayde.

And as ſhe was going downe the mountayne/ it happened that aboute ỹ ſpꝛynge of the day/ the ſpyes of the Aſſyꝛiãs met w̄ her/ ⁊ toke her, ſaying: whence cõmeſt ỹ? Oꝛ whither goeſt ỹ? She anſwered: I am a daughter of the Hebꝛues/ ⁊ am fled from them: foꝛ I knowe, ỹ they ſhal be geuẽ vnto you to be ſpoyled: becauſe they thought ſcoꝛne to yelde thẽ ſelues vnto you/ that they myght fynde mercy in your ſyght. Therfoꝛe/ haue I deuyſed by my ſelfe after this maner: I wyl go befoꝛe the pꝛince Holofernes, ⁊ tell him al their ſecretes, ⁊ wyl ſhewe him, how he may come by them, ⁊ wynne them, ſo that not one man of his hoſte ſhal peryſh.

C And whan theſe men had hearde her woꝛdes, and conſidered her fayꝛe face, they were aſtonnyed (foꝛ they wondꝛed at her excellent bewty) ⁊ ſaid vnto her: Thou haſt ſaued thy life by fyndynge out this deuyce, that ỹ woldeſt come downe to oure Loꝛde. And be thou ſure/ that whan thou commeſt vnto hym, he ſhall intreate the well/ and thou ſhalt pleaſe hym at the herte. So they bꝛought her into Holofernes pauylyon/ and tolde him of her. Nowe when ſhe came in befoꝛe him, immediatly he was ouercome and taken with her bewty. Then ſaid his ſeruaūtes to him: who wolde deſpyſe the people of the Jewes, that haue ſo fayre wemē? Shuld we not by reaſō fyght agaynſt thē for theſe? So whē Judith ſawe Holofernes ſyttynge in a canapy, that was wrought of purple ſylke/ golde, Smaradge, & precyous ſtones, ſhe loked faſt vpō hym, and fell downe vpon the earth. And Holofernes ſeruaūtes toke her vp agayne/ at theyr Lordes cōmaundement.

¶ Holofernes requyreth of Judith the cauſe of her cōming which geueth him a ſuttell anſwere.

CAPI. X.

A Then ſayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte man, that wolde ſerue Nabuchodonoſor the Kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not deſpyſed me/ I ſhulde not haue lyft vp my ſpeare agaynſt thē. But tell me nowe/ what is the cauſe that thou art departed from them/ and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs?

And Judith ſayde vnto hym: Syr, vnderſtande ỹ wordes of thy handmayden: for yf ỹ wylt do after the wordes of thy hādmayden/ the Lord ſhal bryng thy matter to a proſperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonoſor a Lord of the lande lyueth/ & as truely as his power lyueth, which is in the to the puniſhement of al men that go wrong, al mē ſhal not onely be ſubdued vnto him thorow the/ but all the beaſtes alſo of the felde obey him. For all people ſpeake of thy prudent acyute, & it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onely art good & myghty in al his kyngdome, & thy diſcrecion is cōmended in all landes.

B The thyng is manyfeſt alſo, that Achior ſpake, and it is well knowen, what thou cōmaundeſt to do vnto him. For this is playne and of a ſurety, that our God is ſo wroth wt vs (by reaſon of our ſynnes) ỹ he hath ſhewed by his Prophetes vnto the people, how that for theyr ſynnes he wyll delyuer them ouer vnto the enemy. And for ſo much as the chyldren of Iſrael know that they haue ſo diſpleſed theyr God, they are ſore afrayed of the.

They ſuffre greate hongre alſo, and for want of water they are deade nowe in a maner. Morouer, they are appoynted to ſlaye all theyr catell, that they maye drynke the bloude of them: and are purpoſed to ſpende al the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hathe forbydde them to touche) for corne, C wyne and oyle. Seynge nowe, that they do theſe thynges, it is a playne caſe, that they muſt nedes be deſtroyed. Which when I thy handmayden perceyued, I fled from them, and the Lord hath ſent me vnto the, to ſhew the theſe thynges. For I thy handmayden worſhyppe God euen here nowe beſyde the, and thy handemayden ſhall go forthe, and I wyll make my prayer vnto God, and he ſhal tell me, when he wyll rewarde them theyr ſynne, then ſhall I come and ſhewe the and brynge the thorowe the myddeſt of Jeruſalē, ſo that thou ſhalte haue all the people of Iſrael, as the ſhepe wythout a ſhepherde: there ſhal not ſo much as one dog barcke agaynſt the, for theſe thynges are ſhewed me by the prouydence of God: & for ſo much as God is diſpleaſed with them, he hath ſent me to tell the the ſame.

D These wordes pleaſed Holofernes & all his ſeruauntes, which marueled at the wyſdome of her, and ſayde one to another: there is not ſuche a woman vpon earth, in bewtye and diſcrecyon of wordes. And Holofernes ſayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath ſent the hyther before thy people, that ỹ mayeſt geue them into our handes. And for ſo muche as thy promyſe is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he ſhalbe my god alſo and thou ſhalt be excellente and great in the court of Nabuchodonoſor, & thy name ſhalbe ſpoken of in all the lande.

Holofernes cōmaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She deſyreth lycence to go out in the nyght ceaſō to pray, & obtayneth it. Vagao is ſent vnto her to moue her to come into Holofernes to a Banket, & ſhe cometh. Holofernes is dronken.

CAPI. XI.

A Then cōmaunded he her to go in, where his treaſure laye/ and charged that ſhe ſhulde haue her dwellynge there) and appoynted what ſhulde be gyuen her frome hys table. Judith anſwered hym, and ſayd: As for the meate that thou haſte commaunded to geue me/ I may not eate of it as now (leaſt I dyſpleaſe my God) but wyll eate of ſuche as I haue brought with me. Then ſayde Holofernes vnto her: If theſe thynges that thou haſte brought wyth the fayle/ what ſhal we do vnto the? And Judith ſaid: As truely as thou lyueſt my Lorde/ thy hādmayden ſhall not ſpende all thys/ tyll God haue brought to paſſe in my hande/ the thinges that I haue deuyſed.

B So hys ſeruauntes brought her into the tent, where as he had appointed. And as ſhe was goyng in, ſhe deſyred ỹ ſhe myght haue leue to go forth by nyght & before day, to her prayer & to make interceſſyon vnto the Lord. Then cōmaūded Holofernes his Chāberlaynes, ỹ ſhe ſhulde go out & in at her pleaſure/ to pray vnto God thoſe thre dayes.

And ſo in the nyght ſeaſon ſhe went forth into the valley of Bethulia, and waſſhed her ſelfe in the well water. Then wente ſhe vp / and beſought the Lorde God of Iſraell that he wolde proſpere her waye, for the delyueraunce of hys people. And ſo ſhe wente in / & remayned clene in her tente, tyll ſhe toke her meate in the euenyng.

C Vpon the fourth daye it happened / that Holofernes made a ſupper vnto hys ſeruauntes, and ſayd vnto Vagao his chāberlayne: Go thy waye / and councell thys Hebrueſſe / that ſhe may be wyllynge to conſent to kepe company with me. For it were a ſhame vnto all the Aſſyryans, that a woman ſhulde ſo laugh a man to ſcorne, that ſhe were come frō hym vnmedled withall.

Then went Vagao vnto Iudith, & ſayd: Let not ye good daughter be afrayed, to come into my Lorde, that ſhe may be honoured before him / that ſhe may eate and drincke wine and be mery with him. Vnto whome Iudith anſwered: Who am I / that I ſhulde ſaye my Lorde naye / whatſoeuer is good before his eyes / I ſhall do it: and loke what is hys pleaſure, that ſhall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So ſhe ſtode vp / and deckte her ſelf with her apparell / and wente in / and ſtode before him. And Holofernes herte was whole moued / ſo that he brent in deſyre towarde her. And Holofernes ſayd vnto her dryncke now and ſyt downe / and be mery / for thou haſte founde fauoure before me. Then ſayde Iudith: Syr / I wyll dryncke / for my mynde is meryer to daye / then euer it was in all my lyfe. And ſhe toke, and dyd eate / and dranke before him, ye thinges ye her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery wt her / and drancke more wine, then euer he did afore in his lyfe.

C Holofernes ſlepeth for very dronckēnes, and Iudith cutteth of his heade, and goeth therwith to her owne people of whome ſhe is receyued with ioy. They geue thākes vnto God for theyr delyueraunce. Iudith ſpeaketh vnto Achior, which marueyleth at that ſhe hath done to Holofernes.

CAPI. XIII.

A Now when it was late in the nyght, his ſeruauntes made haſte euery man to his lodgynge. And Vagao ſhut the Chamber dores / and wente his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Iudith alone in the chambre. As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed all dronckē, and of verye dronckēnes fel a ſlepe.

Then commaunded Iudith her mayden, to ſtande without before the dore, & to waite. And Iudith ſtode beſyde the bed / makynge her prayer with teares, & moued her lyppes ſecretely, & ſayde: Strengthen me / O Lorde God of Iſrael, & haue reſpecte vnto the workes of my hādes in this houre, ye thou mayeſt ſet vp thy cyte of Ieruſalem, lyke as ye haſte promyſed: O graūte that by the I may perfourme ye thyng, which I haue deuyſed thorowe the beleue that I haue in the.

B And when ſhe had ſpokē thys, ſhe went to the bedſteade, & lowſed the ſwerde that hanged vpon it, & drew it out. Thē toke ſhe holde of the heerye lockes of hys heade, and ſayd: Strengthen me, O Lorde God in this houre & with that, ſhe gaue him two ſtrokes vpon the necke, and ſmote of his head. Then toke ſhe the canapy away, & rolled the deed body aſyde. Immediatly ſhe gat her forth, & delyuered ye head of Holofernes vnto her maidē, & bad her put it in her wallet.

And ſo theſe two wente forth together after theyr cuſtome, as though they wolde pray & ſo paſſed by the hoſt, & came thorow the valley vnto the porte of the cytye. And Iudyth cryed a farre of vnto the watchemē vpon the walles: Opē the gates (ſayde ſhe) for God is wt vs, which hath ſhewed his power i Iſrael And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cite together. And they came al to mete her, lytle & great, yonge & olde, for they thoughte not ye ſhe ſhulde haue come ſo ſone. So they lyghted candels, & gathered aboute her euerychone: but ſhe wente vp into an hye place, and cauſed ſylence to be proclamed.

C When euery man now helde hys tonge / Iudith ſayde: O prayſe the Lord our God / for he hath not deſpyſed, nor forſaken them, that put their truſt in him / & in me his handmaidē he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promyſed vnto the houſe of Iſrael: yee in my hand thys ſame nyght hath he ſlayne the enemye of hys people.

And with that ſhe toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet / and ſhewed it them / ſayinge. Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Aſſyryans, and thys is the canapy, wherin he laye in his dronckēnes: where the Lord our God hath ſlayne hī by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the Lorde liueth / his Angell hath kepte me, goynge thyther / remaynyng there, & cōmynge hyther agayne fromthence. And the Lord hath not ſuffred me his handmayden to be defyled / but without any fylthines of ſyne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: & that with great victorye, ſo ye I am eſcaam eſcaped, and ye delyuered/ O geue thankes vnto him euerychone, for he is gracious and his mercy endureth for euer.

D So they prayſed the Lorde al together, & gaue thãkes vnto him. And to her they ſaid: The Lorde hath bleſſed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought our enemyes to naught. And Ozias the chefe ruler of ỹ people of Iſrael, ſaid vnto her: Bleſſed art thou daughter of the Lord the hye God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Bleſſed be ỹ Lord, the maker of heauen & earth, which hath gyded ỹ a ryght to wounde and to ſmyte of the head of the Captayne of oure enemyes. For this daye he hath made thy name ſo honourable, ỹ thy prayſe ſhal neuer come out of the mouth of mẽ/ which ſhal alwaye remembre the power of the Lorde/ ſeyng: thou haſt not ſpared thyne owne ſelf, but put the in ieopardy, conſideryng the anguyſh and trouble of thy people, and ſo haſt helped theyr fall before God our Lorde. And all the people ſayd. Amen. Amen.

Achior alſo was called, & he came. Then E ſayde Judith vnto hym: The God of Iſrael vnto whõ ỹ gaueſt witnes, ỹ he wolde be auẽged of his enemyes, euen he hath this nyght thorow my hand ſmytten of ỹ head of all the vnfaythfull. And that ỹ mayeſt ſe ỹ it ſo is/ beholde this is ỹ head of Holofernes, which in his preſumptuous pryde deſpyſed ỹ God of the people of Iſraell, & threatened the w deſtruccyõ, ſaying: whẽ ỹ people of Iſrael is taken/ I ſhall cauſe ỹ alſo to be ſtycked wyth the ſwerde. When Achior ſawe Holofernes head/ he fell downe vpõ his face to ỹ grounde for very anguyſhe & feare, ſo ỹ he ſowned w all. But after ỹ he was come agayne to hym ſelf, he fel downe before her, and prayſed her ſaying: Bleſſed art thou of thy God in al the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that here of thy name/ ſhall prayſe the God of Iſrael becauſe of the.

¶ The councel of Judith. Achior beynge an Heathen man, turneth to God. The Aſſirians are afrayed of the Jewes.

CAPI. XIIII.

A IUdith ſayde vnto all the people: Brethrẽ, heare me. Styck vp this heade vpon our walles, & when the Sũne ariſeth, take euery man his weapẽ/ & fall out vyolently: not as though ye wolde go beſyde thẽ, but to rẽne vpon thẽ/ with vyolẽce. When the ſpyes ĩ the tentes ſe thys/ they ſhall of neceſſyte be compelled to fle backward, and to rayſe vp their captayne to the batayle. So when their captaynes come into Holofernes pauylyon/ and fynde ỹ dead body wrapped in ỹ bloude, fearfulnes ſhall fall vpon them: and whẽ ye perceyue that they flye, folow thẽ without al care, for God ſhal delyuer them vnto you/ to be deſtroyed.

Then Achior ſeying ỹ power of God whiche he had ſhewed vnto ỹ peple of Iſrael, fel of from hys Heatheniſh beleſe, & put his truſt in God, & let hym ſelfe be circũciſed, & ſo was he nõbred amõg the people of Iſrael, he & all his poſterite vnto this daye.

B Nowe as ſone as it was daye, they ſtyckt vp Holofernes heade vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapen, & ſo they wente out with an horryble cry. When the ſpyes ſawe that, they came vnto Holofernes tente. And they that were within the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greate ruſhing to wake him vp, becauſe they thought with the noyſe to haue rayſed him. For there durſt not one of the Aſſyrians knocke, go in or open.

But when the captaynes & princes & al the chefe in the kyng of the Aſſyriãs hoſt came together, they ſayde vnto the Chãberlaynes, Go your way in & wake him vp, for the myſe are crept out of theyr holes, & darre prouoke vs vnto batayle.

C Then wente Vagao into his chambre/ ſtode before the bed, and clapped with hys handes, for he thought he had bene ſlepynge with Judith.

But whẽ he had herkened perfectly with his eares/ and coulde perceyue no ſterynge, he wente nyer to the bed/ and lyfte it vp, and thẽ ſawe he ỹ deed body of Holofernes lyẽge there without a heade/ weltred in his bloud vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce/ and with wepynge rente his clothes/ and went into Judithes tent, and found her not: And ſo he leapt out vnto the people and ſayd: one woman of ỹ Jewes, hath broughte all Nabuchodonoſors people to ſhame. For lo/ Holofernes lyeth vpon the grounde and hath no heade.

When ỹ chefe of the Aſſyrians hoſte herde that, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and tremblynge vpon thẽ, ſo that their myndes were ſore afrayed. And there was an exceedynge greate crye in the whole hoſte.

¶ The flyght of the Aſſyrians. The purſute of Iſrael after them. Iſrael becommeth ryche, by the ſpoyles of the Aſſyriãs. Judith is prayſed of Joacim and of the people.

CAPI. XV.

A NOw when al ỹ hoſt herd ỹ Holofernes was headed, their mynde and councell fell from them: and ſuch a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende thẽ ſelues by flyng awaye: one ſpake not to another but hanged downe theyr heades, lefte all behynde them/ ⁊ made haſte to eſcape from the Hebrues: for they herde / that they were haſtyng to come after with theyr weapens, and ſo they fled by the wayes of the feldes / and thorow al the fote pathes of the vales.

And when the chyldren of Iſraell ſawe that they fled/ they folowed vpon them/ and went downe with trompettes/ blowyng and makynge a greate crye after them. As for the Aſſirians, they had no order and kepte not thẽ ſelues together, but fled theyr waye. Neuertheleſſe, the chyldren of Iſrael fel vpõ them with one company and order/ and diſcomfited as many as they myght get. And Oſias ſent meſſaungers vnto all the cytyes and countrees of Iſrael.

B So all the regyons and euery cytie ſente out their beſt men after them in harnes, and ſmote them with the ſwearde/ tyll they came to the vttemoſt parte of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came in to the tentes of the Aſſiriãs, ⁊ toke al yͭ they whiche were fled had left behynde them, ⁊ ſo they founde great good. And they yͭ came agayne to Bethulia frome the batayle, toke wͭ them ſuche thinges as had bene theyrs: there was no nõbre of the catel/ ⁊ of al coſtly Jewels, ſo that from the loweſt vnto yͤ hyeſt/ they were al made riche of the ſpoiles of thẽ. And Joachim the hye prieſt at Jeruſalẽ, came to Bethulia with all the elders / that they myght ſe Judith.

C Now when ſhe came out vnto them/ they begãne al to prayſe her wͭ one voyce, ſaying: yͤ worſhyp of the cytie of Jeruſalẽ, thou ioy of Iſraell, yͤ honoure of our people, yͧ haſt done manly, ⁊ thy herte is cõforted, becauſe yͧ haſt loued clenlynes ⁊ chaſtite, ⁊ haſt knowen no man but thyne owne huſband: therfore hath the hande of the Lorde cõforted the, ⁊ bleſſed ſhalt yͧ be for euer. And al the people ſayd: ſo be it, ſo be it.

In thyrty dayes coulde the people of Iſrael ſcarſe gather vp the ſpoyles of the Aſſirians. But al that belongeth vnto Holofernes/ and had bene his ſpecyally(whether it were of gold/ of ſyluer, precious ſtones/ clothyng, and al ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And al the people reioyſed/ bothe women/ maydens/ and yonge people / with pypes and harpes.

¶ The ſonge of Judith for the victory. After the victorye obtayned, the people commeth to Jeruſalem, to worſhyppe and prayſe God.

CAPI. XVI.

A THen ſonge Judith thys ſonge vnto the Lorde: Begynne vnto the Lorde vpon the Tabrettes, ſynge vnto the Lorde vpon the cymbales. O ſyng vnto hym a new ſong of thankeſgeuyng, be ioyful ⁊ cal vpon hys name. It is the Lord that deſtroyeth warres euẽ the Lorde in his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the myddeſt of his people/ that he myght delyuer vs from the hande of our enemyes. Aſſur came out of the mountaynes of the North in the multytude of his ſtrength. His people ſtopped the water brokes/ and theyr horſſes couered yͤ valleys. He purpoſed to haue brent vp my lande, ⁊ to ſley my yong men wͭ the ſwearde.

B He wolde haue caryed awaye my chyldren and vyrgins into captiuyte, but yͤ almyghtye Lorde hyndred hym/ and delyuered hym into yͤ handes of a woman / whiche brought hym to confuſion. For theyr myghtye was not deſtroyed of the yonge men. It was not yͤ ſonnes of Tytan that ſlewe hym / neyther haue the greate gyauntes ſet them ſelues agaynſt hym: but Judith yͤ daughter of Merari with her fayre beautye hath diſcomfited hym/ and brought hym to naught. For ſhe layed awaye her wyddowes garmente/ and put on the apparel of gladneſſe to the reioyſynge of the chyldren of Iſrael. She anoynted her face, and bounde vp her hearre in an hoode/ to begyle him. Her ſlyppers rauiſhed hys eyes, her bewtie captyuated his mynde, with the ſwerde ſmote ſhe of his necke. The Perſians were aſtonnyed at her ſtedfaſtnes C and the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Aſſyrians / when my ſymple appeared, drye of thyrſt. The ſonnes of the daughters haue pearſed thẽ thorowe and ſlayne them as fugytyue chyldren: they peryſhed in the batayle, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs ſynge a ſonge of thankeſgeuyng vnto the Lorde, a new ſong of prayſe wyll we ſynge vnto oure God: Lorde, Lord, thou arte a greate God, myghtye in power, whom no man may ouercome. All thy creatures ſhulde ſerue the: for thou ſpakeſt but the worde, and they were made: thou ſenteſt thy ſpirete, and they were created/ and no man can withſtande thy voyce. The mountaynes ſhall moue from the foundacyons with the waters/ the ſtony Rockes ſhall melt before the lyke waxe. But they yͭ feare the: ſhalbe great with the in al thynges. Wo vnto the people that riſe vp agaynſt my generacyon, for the Almyghtye Lorde wyll auenge hym ſelfe of them, and in the daye of day of Judgement wyl he vyſet thẽ. For he ſhal geue fire & wormes into their fleſh, that they may burne and fele it for euermore.

D After thys it happened / that after the victory, al the people came to Jeruſalem, to geue prayſe and thanckes vnto the Lorde. And when they were puryfyed / they offred all theyr brentſacryfyces and theyr promyſed offryuges. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapẽs, and al the Jewels / that the people had geuen her / and the canapy that ſhe toke from hys bed, and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyful, as the vſe is: and thys ioye by reaſon of the victory, with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after theſe dayes / euery man wente home agayne, and Judith was in great reputacyon at Bethulia / and ryght honorably taken in al the land of Iſrael. Unto her vertue alſo was chaſtyte ioyned / ſo that after her huſbande Manaſſes dyed / ſhe neuer knew man all the dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hye ſolempne dayes ſhe wente out with greate worſhyppe. She dwelt in her huſbãdes houſe an hundred and fyue yeare, & left her handmaiden fre, and dyed, and was buryed beſyde her huſband in Bethulia. And al the people mourned for her ſeuen dayes. So long as ſhe lyued / there was none that troubled Iſraell / & many yeares alſo after her death. The daye wherin this vyctory was gotten / was ſolemply holden, and rekened of the Jewes in the nõber of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of ẏ Jewes euer ſence / vnto thys day.

The .xi. Chapter after the Latyn.

The dreame of Mardocheus.

A Mardocheus the ſonne of Jair, the ſõne Semei, the ſõne of Ciſei of ẏ tribe of Bẽiamin, a Jew: which had his dwellĩge ĩ the cite of Suſis, a mã of great reputacion, & excellent amõge al them ẏ were in the kynges court. (Neuertheles, he was one of the preſoners / whõ Nabuchodonoſor ẏ kyng of Babilõ had caried away frõ Jeruſalẽ vnto Babilon wᵗ Jechonias the king of Juda.) In the ſecõde yeare of ẏ raigne of great Artaxerxes in the fyrſt daye of the moneth Niſan, had this Mardocheus ſuch a dreme: He thought he herde a greate tempeſt / horrible thõderclappes, erthquakes, & great vproure in the land, and that he ſawe two great dragons / ready to fyght one agaynſt another. Theyr crye was greate. At the whiche roaryng and crye all Heathen were vp, to fight againſt the righteous people. And the ſame B day was ful of darcknes and very vncleare full of trouble and anguyſhe / yet a greate fearfulnes was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amaſed / for they feared the plage and euyl that was deuiſed ouer them, and were at a pointe with thẽ ſelues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: and whyle they were criẽge, ẏ lytle wel grewe into a great ryuer & into many waters. And with that it was day / & the ſũne roſe vp againe. And the lowly were exalted / & deuoured the gloryous & proude. Now when Mardocheus had ſene thys dreame / he awoke / & muſed ſtedfaſtly in his hert, what God wolde do: and ſo he deſyred to knowe al the matter / & his mynde was therupon vntyll the night.

Mardocheus vttereth the treaſon deuyſed agaynſt the kyng, and is therfore rewarded of hym.

CAPI. XII.

At the ſame tyme dwelt Mardocheus A with Bagatha and Tares in the kynges courte the kynges Chãberlaines & porters of the palace. But when he hearde their deuyce / & had dylygently conſydered theyr ymaginaciõs, he perceaued ẏ they wente about, to lay their cruel hãdes vpõ the kyng Artaxerxes: and ſo he certifyed ẏ king therof. Then cauſed the kynge to examen the two gelded with tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to death.

This the kinge cauſed to be put in ẏ Cronicles for an euerlaſting remẽbraunce / and Mardocheus wrote vp ẏ ſame matter. So B the kynge commaunded that Mardocheus ſhulde remaine in the court, & for this faithfulnes of hys, he gaue him a rewarde. But Amã the ſonne of Amadathu the Agagite / which was holden in great honour & reputacion ĩ the kinges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people / becauſe of the two Chãberlaines that were put to death.

CAPI. XIII.

A THe great kyng Artaxerſes which raigneth frō Juda vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and ſeuen & twentye lādes, ſendeth hys frendly ſalutacyon vnto all the Prynces and debites of the countreys/ which be ſubiecte vnto hys domynion. When I was made lord ouer many people, & had ſubdued the whole earthe vnto my domynyon/ my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte my ſelf by the reaſon of my power: but purpoſed with equyte alwaye and gentylnes/ to gouerne thoſe that be vnder my iuriſdiccyon/ and wholy to ſet them in a peceable lyfe, and therby to brynge my kyngdome vnto tranquilyte, that men might ſafely go thorowe on euery ſyde/ and to renue peace agayne/ which al men deſyre. B Nowe when I aſked my cōūcelers how theſe thinges might be brough to a good ende/ there was one by vs/ excellēt in wyſdome, whoſe good wyl/ trueth/ and faythfulnes hath oft bene ſhewed and proued (whiche was alſo yͤ pryncypall and next vnto the kynge) Aman by name: which certifyed vs, how that in al lādes there was ſcatred abrode a rebellious folke, that made ſtatutes & lawes agaynſte all other people/ and haue alwaye deſpyſed the proclamed commaundementes of kynges: and how that for thys cauſe it were not to be ſuffred, that ſuch rule ſhulde contynue C by you and not to be put downe. Seynge: now we perceaue the ſame, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man/ vſyng ſtraūge and other maner of lawes/ & withſtande oure ſtatutes and thinges, and go aboute to ſtablyſh ſhrewed matters, that our kingdome ſhuld neuer come to good eſtate, and ſtedfaſtnes: Therfore haue we commaunded/ that all they that are appoynted in wrytynge and ſhewed vnto you by Amā (whiche is ordeyned and ſet ouer all oure landes) and the moſt pryncypall nexte vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father) that wt theyr wyues and chyldren be deſtroyed and roted oute with the ſwerde of theyre enemyes and aduerſaryes: & that there ſhall be no mercy ſhewed/ and no man ſpared. And this ſhalbe done the .xiiij. day of the moneth (called Adar) of thys yeare, that they which of olde (and now alſo) haue euer bene rebellious/ maye in one daye with vyolence be thruſt downe into the hell, to the intent that after thys maner/ oure empyre maye haue peace and tranquilite.

D But Mardocheus thought vpon all the workes and noble actes of the Lorde, and made his prayer vnto him, ſaying: O Lord Lorde, thou valeaunt and almyghty kynge (for al thinges are in thy power, and if thou wilt helpe & delyuer Iſrael, there is no man that can withſtāde nor let the: for thou haſt made heauen and earth/ and what wonderous thing ſo euer is vnder the heauē: thou art Lorde of all thinges, and there is no mā that can reſiſt thy maieſtye (O Lord) Thou knoweſt all thynges/ thou woteſt Lorde yͭ it was nether of malice/ nor preſūpcion/ nor for any deſyre of glory, yͭ I wolde not bowe downe my ſelfe nor worſhyp yonder proude preſumpteous Amā (for I wolde haue bene contente/ & that with good wyl/ yf it myght haue done Iſrael any good, to haue kiſt euē his fotſteppes) but that I dyd it, becauſe I wolde not ſet the honour of a man in the ſteade of the glorye of God/ and becauſe I wolde worſhip none but onely yͤ my Lorde. And thys haue I done in no pryde nor preſūpcyon. And therfore O Lord thou God E & kyng, haue mercy vpō thy people for they ymagin how they may bring vs to naught, yee their minde & deſyre is to deſtroy and to ouerthrowe the people/ that hath euer bene thyne enheritaūce of olde. O deſpiſe not thy porciō, which thou haſt delyuered & brought oute of Egypte for thyne owne ſelfe. Heare my prayer/ and be mercyfull vnto the people, whom yͧ haſt choſen for an herytage vnto thy ſelfe. Turne oure complaynte and ſorowe into ioye, that we may lyue O Lorde/ & prayſe thy name. O Lorde/ ſuffre not the mouthes of thē yͭ prayſe the, to be deſtroyed.

All the people of Iſraell in lyke maner cryed as earneſtly as they coulde vnto the Lord, for theyr death and deſtruccyon ſtode before theyr eyes.

¶ The prayer of Eſther for the delyueraunce of her and her people.

CAPI. XIIII.

A QUene Eſther alſo being ī the battayl of death, reſorted vnto the lorde, layed awaye her gloryous apparell/ and put on the garmentes that ſerued for ſighthynge and mournynge. In the ſteade of precyous oyntment/ ſhe ſcatred aſſhes and dong vpō her head: and as for her body, ſhe humbled it with faſtynge/ and broughte it very lowe. All the places where ſhe was wont to haue ioy afore, thoſe filled ſhe with the heare/ that ſhe plucte out her ſelfe. She prayed alſo vnto the Lorde God of Iſraell with theſe wordes./.

O my Lorde, thou onely art oure kynge/ helpe me deſolate woman/ whiche haue no helper but the, for my myſery & deſtruccyon is harde at my hande. Fro my youth vp I haue herde out of the kinred of my father ỹ thou tokeſt Iſrael from amonge all people (& ſo haue oure fathers of theyr fore elders) ỹ they ſhulde be thy perpetual inherytaũce/ and loke what thou dideſt promiſe thẽ, thou haſt made it good vnto them.

B Now wel Lord, we haue ſynned before the/ therfore haſt thou geuen vs into the handes of oure enemyes / becauſe we worſhypped theyr goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous. Neuertheles it ſatiſfieth them not/ that we are in bitter and heuy captiuite and oppreſſed amonge them, but thou haſt layed theyr handes vpõ the handes of theyr goddes: ſo that they begynne to take awaye/ ỹ thynge that thou with thy mouth haſt ordened and appoynted to deſtroye thyne inheritaunce/ to ſhut and to ſtoppe the mouthe of thẽ that prayſe the, to quench the glory & worſhippe of thy houſe and thine aulter, and to open ỹ mouthes of the Heathen, ỹ they may prayſe the power and vertue of the goddes, and to magnifye the fleſhly kynge for euer.

C O Lorde, geue not thy ſcepter vnto them that be nothing, leſt they laugh vs to ſcorne in oure myſery & fall: but turne theyr deuice vpõ them ſelues, and puniſh him, that hath begonne the ſame ouer vs and ſet him to an example. Thyncke vpon vs O Lorde/ and ſhewe thy ſelfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure diſtres and of our trouble. Strength me O thou kynge of Goddes / thou Lorde of all power, geue me an eloquẽt & pleaſaũt ſpech in my mouth before the Lyon. Turne hys hert in to ỹ hate of oure enemye/ to deſtroye him, and all ſuch as conſent vnto hym. But deliuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me thy hand mayde, which haue no defence nor helper but onely the: Lorde/ thou knoweſt all thynges, thou woteſt ỹ I loue not the glory and worſhyp of the vnryghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcyſed and of all Heathen.

Thou knoweſt my neceſſite/ that I hate the token of my preemynence and worſhyp, which I beare vpõ my head/ what tyme as I muſt ſhewe my ſelfe and be ſene, & that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weare it not when I am quyete and alone by my ſelfe. Thou knoweſt alſo that I thy hande mayden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleaſure nor delyte in the kynges feaſte/ that I haue not droncke the wyne of the drinckoffringes, and that I thy hande maiden haue no ioy ſence the daye that I was brought hyther/ vnto this day/ but onely in the O Lorde. O thou God of Abrahã, O thou mighty God aboue all, heare the voyce of them, that haue none other hope, & delyuer vs out of the hand of the wicked/ and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Heſter to go into the kynge/ and make interceſſion for her people/ and ſhe performeth hys requeſt.

CAPI. XV.

A MArdocheus alſo bad Heſter go in vnto the kyng, and praye for her people and for her countre. Remembre (ſayeth he) the dayes of thy lowe eſtate, howe thou waſte noriſhed vnder my hand: For Aman which is next vnto the kynge, hath geuen ſentence of death agaynſt vs. Cal thou therfore vpõ the Lorde, & ſpeake for vs vnto the kynge/ & deliuer vs from death And vpõ the thyrde daye it happened/ that Heſter layed awaye the mournynge garmentes/ and put on her gloryous apparel/ & deckte her ſelfe goodly (after that ſhe had called vpon God, which is ỹ beholder and Sauioure of al thinges) toke two maydes with her: vpõ the one ſhe leaned her ſelfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her/ and bare ỹ trayne of her veſture. The ſhyne of her bewtye made her face roſe colored. The ſimilitude of her face was chearfull & amiable/ but her hert was ſorowful for greate feare. She wẽte in thorow al the dores, and ſtode before the kyng. The kynge ſat vpon the trone of hys kingdome, and was clothed in his goodly aray/ all of golde, and ſet with precyous ſtones, & he was very terryble. He lyfte vp hys face/ that ſhone in the clearnes, and loked grily vpon her. Then fel the Quene downe/ was pale & faynt, leaned her ſelfe vpon the head of the mayde that went with her.

B Neuertheles, God turned ỹ kinges mynde that he was gentle/ ỹ he leaped oute of hys ſeate for feare, and gat her ĩ hys armes, and held her vp tyll ſhe came to her ſelfe agayne He gaue her louing wordes alſo, and ſayde vnto her: Heſter/ what is the matter? I am thy brother/ be of good chere, thou ſhalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the comõs & not ỹ. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden rod/ and layde it vpon her neck, and embraced her frendly/ & ſayd: talke with me. Then ſayd ſhe: I ſawe ỹ (O Lorde) as an Angell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy mageſty and clearneſſe: For excellent and wonderful art thou (O Lorde) and thy face is ful of amite. But as ſhe was thus ſpeakyng vnto him, ſhe fel downe agayne for fayntnes: for the whiche cauſe the kyng was afraied, and all his ſeruauntes comforted her.

¶ The Copye of the letters of Arthaxerſes, wherby he reuoketh thoſe which he fyrſt ſente forth.

CAPI. XVI.

A The greate kynge Artaxerſes / whiche rayneth from India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundreth and .xxvij. landes / ſendeth vnto the Prynces and rulers of the ſame landes / ſuche as loue him / hys frendly ſalutacion. There be many yͭ for the ſondry frendſhippes ⁊ benefytes which are diuerſly done vnto them for theyr worſhyppe / be euer the more proude and hye mynded / ⁊ vndertake not onely to hurte oure ſubiectes (for plenteous benefytes maye they not ſuffre / and begine to ymagin ſome thing againſt thoſe that do them good / and take not onely all vnthākfulnes awaye frō men) but in pryde and preſumpcion (as they that be vnmyndfull and vnthankefull for the good dedes) they go aboute to eſcape the iudgemente of God, that ſeyth all thinges / whiche (iudgement) hateth ⁊ puniſheth al wyckednes.

It happeneth ofte alſo, that they whiche be ſet in office by the hyer power, ⁊ vnto whom the buſynes and cauſes of the ſubiectes are committed to be handled, ware proude, and defyle them ſelues with ſheddynge of innocēt bloude / which bryngeth them to intollerable hurt. Which alſo with falſe ⁊ diſceatfull wordes and with lyeng tales, diſceaue ⁊ betray the innocent goodnes of Prynces.

B Nowe is it profitable and good / that we take hede, make ſearch therafter / and conſider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde: but the ſhamefull, vnhoneſt / ⁊ noyſome thinges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before our eyes / and therby to beware in tyme to come / that we may make the kyngdome quyete and peaceable for al men, and that we myghte ſome tyme drawe it to chaunge: and as for the thynge that nowe is preſente before oure eyes / to withſtande it, and to put it downe, after the moſt frendly maner.

What tyme nowe as Aman the ſonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a ſtrāger verely of the perſians bloude / and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt, and had optained the frendſhip that we beare towarde all people / ſo that he was called oure father / and had in hye honoure of euery man / as the next and principal vnto yͤ kyng, he coulde not forbeare him ſelf frō his pryde, hath vndertakē not onely to rob vs of the kyngdome / but of our lyfe.

C With manyfolde diſceate alſo hath he deſired to deſtroye Mardocheus our helper ⁊ preſeruer / whiche hath done vs good in all thinges: and innocēt Heſter the lyke partaker of oure kyngdome / with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken thē oute of the waye / and robbed vs of thē) by this meanes to trāſlate the kingdome of the Perſians vnto thē of Macedonia. But we fynde / that the Jewes (which were accuſed of the wicked, that they might be deſtroyed) are no euyll doers / but vſe reaſonable and right lawes: and that they be the chyldren of the moſt hye lyuynge God / by whome the kyngdome of vs ⁊ oure progenitours hath bene wel ordred hytherto. Wherfore, as for the letters and cōmaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the ſonne of Amadathu ye ſhall do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that ſet them vp and inuented thē, hangeth at Suſis before the port, with all his kynred, ⁊ God (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after hys deſeruynge.

D And vpon thys ye ſhall publyſh and ſet vp the copy of thys letter in all places / that the Jewes may frely and without hinderaunce holde them ſelues after theyr owne ſtatutes / and that they maye be helped / and that vpon the .xiij. day of the .xij. moneth. Adar / they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of theyr anguyſhe and trouble / wolde haue oppreſſed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges, hath turned to ioye the day, where in the choſen people ſhulde haue peryſhed.

Moreouer, among the hye ſolēpne dayes yͭ ye haue ye ſhall holde thys daye alſo with al gladneſſe: that now and in tyme to come, thys daye maye be a remembraūce to good / for al ſuch as loue the proſperite of the Perſians: but a remembraunce of deſtruccyon to thoſe that be ſedycious vnto vs.

All cyties ⁊ landes that do not thys, ſhal horribly peryſhe and be deſtroyed with the ſwerde and fyre / and ſhall not onely be nomore inhabyted of men / but be abhorred alſo of the wylde beaſtes and foules.

The ende of the reaſt of the boke of Eſther.

The booke of wyſdome.

¶ Howe we ought to ſearche and enquyre after God, and who be thoſe that fynde hym. Of the holy gooſt, we ought to kepe from backbytynge and murmurynge. &c.

CAPI. I.

A O Sette your affeccion vpon ryghteouſneſſe, ye that be iudges of the earth. Haue a good opiniō of the Lorde, and ſeke hym in the ſynglenesſe of herte. For he wyll be founde of them that tempte hym nat, and appereth vnto ſuche as put theyr truſte in hym. As for frowarde thoughtes / they ſeparate from God / but vertue (yf it be alowed) reformeth yͤ vnwyſe. And why? wyſdome ſhall nat entre into a frowarde ſoule, nor dwel in the body that is ſubdued vnto ſynne. For the holy gooſt abhorreth fayned nurtoure / and withdraweth hym ſelfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderſtandinge: and where wyckednes hathe the vpper hande, he flyeth frō thence. For the ſprete of wyſdome is louynge, gentle and gracyous / & wyll haue no pleaſure in hym that ſpeaketh euell with his lyppes. For God is a wytneſſe of hys raynes, a true ſearcher out of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the ſprete of the Lorde fylleth the rounde compaſſe of the worlde: and the ſame that vpholdeth all thynges / hathe knowledge alſo of the voyce:

B Therfore, he that ſpeaketh vnryghteous thynges, can not be hyd, nether maye he eſcape the iudgemēt of reproſe. And why? inquiſicion ſhalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of hys wordes ſhal come vnto God, ſo that his wickednes ſhalbe puniſhed, for the eare of gelouſy heareth all thynges, and the noyſe of the grudginges ſhall not be hyd. Therfore, beware of murmurynge, which is nothynge worth, and refrayne youre tonge from ſclaunder. For there is no worde ſo darcke and ſecrete, that it ſhall goo for naught: and the mouth that ſpeaketh lyes, ſleyeth the ſoule.

C O ſeke nat your owne death in yͤ errour of youre lyfe, deſtroye not youre ſelues thorow the workes of youre awne hādes. For God hath not made death, nether hath he pleaſure in the deſtruccyon of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myght haue theyr beynge: yee all the people of the earth hathe he made that they ſhulde haue health, that there ſhulde be no deſtruccyō in them, and that the kyngdome of hell ſhulde not be vpō earth (for ryghteouſneſſe is euerlaſtinge & immortall, but vnryghteouſnes bryngeth death.) Neuertheleſſe, yͤ vngodly call her vnto them bothe with wordes and workes: and whyle they thynke to haue a frende of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

¶ The ymaginacyons and deſyres of the wycked, and their councell agaynſt the ryghtfull.

CAPI. II.

A FOR the vngodly talke and ymagin thus amonge thē ſelues (but not right:) The tyme of our lyfe is but ſhort & tedious, and when a man is once gone, he hathe no more ioye nor pleaſure, neyther knowe we any man that turneth agayne frō death: for we are borne of naught, & we ſhal be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure breth is as a ſmoke in oure noſetrels, & the wordes as a ſparke to moue oure herte. As for oure body / it ſhalbe very aſhes that are quenched, and oure ſoule ſhall vaniſh as the ſofte ayre. Oure lyfe ſhal paſſe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to naught as the myſt that is dryuen awaye with yͤ beames of the Sonne, and put downe with the heate therof. Oure name alſo ſhalbe forgotten by lytle and lytle, and no man ſhal haue oure workes in remembraunce.

B For oure tyme is a very ſhadowe yͭ paſſeth awaye / & after oure ende there is no returnynge, for it is faſt ſealed, ſo that no man cōmeth agayne: Come on therfore / let vs enioye the pleaſures that there are, and let vs ſoone vſe the creature lyke as in youth. Let vs fyll oure ſelues with good wyne & oyntement, and let there no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our ſelues with roſes afore they be withered. Let there be no fayre medowe / but our luſt go thorowe it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptuouſnes. Let vs leaue ſome token of oure pleaſure in euery place, for that is oure porcyon, els get we nothynge. Let vs oppreſſe the poore ryghteous / let vs nat ſpare the wyddowe nor olde man: let vs nat regarde the heades yͭ are graye for age. Let yͤ lawe of vnryghteouſneſſe be oure auctoritie, for the thing yͭ is feble is nothing worth. Therfore C let vs defraude the ryghteous, & why? he is not for oure profet / yee he is cleane contrarye to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendynge agaynſt the lawe / & ſclaundreth vs as tranſgreſſoures of al nurtoure. He maketh his boaſt to haue the knowledge of God, yee he calleth him ſelfe Goddes ſonne. He is the bewrayer of our thoughtes. It greueth vs alſo to loke vpō him, for his life is not like other mens, his wayes are of another faſhyō. He counteth vs but vayne perſonnes, he withdraweth hym ſelfe from our wayes as from fylthyneſſe: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iuſt, and maketh hys boaſt that God is his father. Let vs ſe then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what ſhall come vpon hym: ſo ſhall we knowe what ende he ſhall haue. For yf he be ẏ true ſonne of God, D he wyl receaue hym, and delyuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examen hym with deſpytefull rebuke and tormentynge, that we may knowe hys dignite, and proue his pacyence. Let vs condemne hym with the moſt ſhameful death: for lyke as he hathe ſpoken, ſo ſhall he be rewarded.

Suche thynges do the vngodly ymagin, and go aſtraye, for their owne wyckednes hath blynded them. As for the myſteries of God, they vnderſtande the not: they neyther hope for the rewarde of ryghteouſneſſe, nor regarde the worſhyp that holy ſoules ſhall haue. For God created mā to be vndeſtroyed: Gene. i. d. yee after ẏ ymage of hys owne lykeneſſe made he hym. Neuertheleſſe thorowe enuye of the deuell came death in to the worlde: & they that holde of hys ſyde, do as he dothe.

¶ The conſeruacyon and aſſuraunce of the ryghteous. The rewarde of the faythfull.

CAPI. III.

BVT the ſoules of the ryghteous are A in the hande of God, and the payne of death ſhall not touch them. In the ſyght of the vnwyſe they appeared to dye, and their ende is taken for very deſtruccyon. The waye of the ryghteous is iudged to be vtter deſtruccyon, but they are in reſt. And though they ſuffre payne before men, yet is their hope full of immortalyte. They are punyſhed in fewe thynges, neuertheleſſe in many thynges ſhall they be well rewarded: For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hymſelfe, yee as the golde in the fornace doeth he trye thē, and receaueth them as a brent offrynge, and when the tyme commeth, they ſhalbe loked vpon.

B The ryghteous ſhall ſhyne as ẏ ſparkes that runne thorow the red buſſhe. They ſhall iudge the nacions, and haue dominion ouer the people, and their Lorde ſhall raygne for euer. They that put their truſt in him/ſhall vnderſtande the trueth, & ſuche as be faythfull, wyl agre vnto him in loue: for his choſen ſhall haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodly ſhalbe punyſhed accordyng to their owne ymaginacions, for they haue deſpiſed the ryghteous, and forſaken the Lorde.

Who ſo deſpyſeth wyſdome & nurtoure, C he is vnhappye, & as for the hope of ſuche, it is but vayne, their labours vnfrutefull, and their workes vnprofytable. Their wyues are vndiſcrete, and their chyldren moſt vngodly. Their creature is curſed. Bleſſed is rather the baren and vndefyled, which hath nat knowne the ſynfull bed: ſhe ſhall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy ſoules. And bleſſed is the gelded, which with his hādes hathe wrought no vnryghteouſneſſe, nor ymagined wycked thynges agaynſte God. For vnto him ſhall be geuen ẏ ſpeciall gyfte of fayth/& the moſt acceptable porcion in ẏ temple of God. D For glorious is the frute of good labour/& the rote of wyſdome ſhal neuer fade awaye. As for the chyldren of aduouterers/they ſhall come to an ende/& the ſede of an vnryghteous bed ſhall be roted out. And though they lyue longe/yet ſhall they be nothynge regarded/& their laſt age ſhalbe without honoure. Yf they dye haſtely they haue no hope, nether ſhal they be ſpokē to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnryghteous.

¶ Of the chaſt generacyon of the faythfull, and of their felicite. Of the death of the ryghteous, and of the condemnacyon of the vnfaythfull.

CAPI. IIII.

O Howe fayre is a chaſt generacyō with vertue. The memoriall therof is im- A mortal/for it is knowen with God and with men. When it is preſent/men take example therat: & yf it go awaye/yet they deſyre it. It is all waye crowned & holden in honour, and wynneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayll. But the multitude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofitable/and the thynges that are planted with whoredome/ſhal take no depe rote, nor laye any faſt foundacyon. Though they be grene in the braūches, for a tyme, yet ſhal they be ſhaken with ẏ wynde, for they ſtande not faſt/and thorowe the vehemencye of the wynde they ſhalbe roted out. For the vnparfecte braunches ſhalbe broken, their frute ſhalbe vnprofitable & ſowre to eate, ye mete for nothynge. And why? al ẏ chyldren that are borne of the wicked, muſte beare recorde of the wyckedneſſe agaynſte their fathers & mothers, whē they be aſked. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken with death/yet ſhall he be in reſt.

B Age is an honorable thynge: neuertheles it ſtandeth not onely in the lenght of tyme,

noꝛ in the multytude of yeares: but a mans wyſdome is the graye hearte, and an vndefyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleaſed God, & was beloued of him: C ſo that where as he lyued amõge ſinners, he tranſlated him * Yee ſodenly was he taken awaye, to the intente that wyckedneſſe ſhulde not alter hys vnderſtandyng, & that ypocryſie ſhulde nat begyle his ſoule. For the craftye bewitchynge of lyes make good thynges darck, the vnſtedfaſtneſſe alſo and wyckednes of voluptuous deſyre turne aſyde the vnderſtandyng of the ſymple. Though he was ſoone deed, yet fulfylled he moch tyme: For hys ſoule pleaſeth God: therfore haſted he to take him awaye from amonge the wycked. Thys the people ſe, and vnderſtande it not: they laye not vp ſuche thynges in theyr hertes, howe D that the louynge fauoure and mercy of God is vpon hys ſaynctes/ and that he hathe reſpecte vnto hys choſen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deed, condẽ- C neth the vngodly which are lyuynge: & the youth that is ſoone brought to an ende/ the long lyfe of the vnrighteous. For they ſe the ende of the wyſe, but they vnderſtande not what God hath deuyſed for him, and wherfore the Lorde hathe taken him awaye. And why? they ſe him & deſpiſe him, therfore ſhal God alſo laugh thẽ to ſcorne: So that they thẽſelues ſhall dye here after (but without honour) yee in ſhame amonge the deed for euermore. For without any voyce ſhall he burſt thoſe yͭ be pufte vp, & remoue them frõ A the fõdacyons, ſo yͭ they ſhalbe layed waſt vnto the hyeſt. They ſhall mourne, & theyr memoryall ſhall peryſhe. So they beynge afrayed ſhal remẽbre theyr ſynnes / & theyr owne wyckedneſſe ſhall bewraye them.

¶ The conſtantnes of the ryghteous before theyr perſecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vndurable and vayne. The bleſſednes of the ſayntes and godly.

CAPI. V.

THEN ſhall the ryghteous ſtande in A greate ſtedfaſtneſſe agaynſte ſuche as haue dealt extremely with them/ and taken awaye theyr laboures. When they ſe it, they ſhalbe vexed with horrible feare, and ſhall wonder at the haſtyneſſe of the ſodayne health: gronyng for very dyſtreſſe of mynd, and ſhall ſaye wythin them ſelues, hauynge inwarde ſorowe, and mournynge for very anguyſh of mynde.

These are they, whom we ſomtyme had in deriſyõ, & ieſted vpon. We fooles thought B theyr lyfe very madneſſe, and theyr ende to be with out honoure. But lo/ how they are counted amonge the chyldren of God, and theyr porcyõ is amonge the ſayntes. Therfore we haue erred from the waye of trueth, the lyght of ryghteouſneſſe hath not ſhyned vnto vs, & the ſunne of vnderſtandyng roſe nat vp vpõ vs. We haue weried our ſelues in yͤ waye of wickedneſſe & deſtruccion. Tedyous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it.

What good hathe our pryde done vnto B vs? Or, what profyt hathe the pompe of ryches brought vs? All thoſe thynges are paſſed awaye lyke a ſhadow, and as a meſſaunger rennyng before: as a ſhyppe that paſſeth ouer the waues of the water, which when it is gone by, the trace therof cannat be founde nether the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flyeth thorowe in the ayre, and no man can ſe any token where ſhe is flowen, but onely heareth the noyſe of her wynges, beatynge the lyght wynde, partynge yͤ ayre, thorowe the vehemencye of her goynge, and flyeth on ſhakynge her winges, where as afterwarde no token of her way can be foũde. Or lyke as when an arowe is ſhotte at a marck, it parteth yͤ ayre/ which ymmediatly commeth together agayne, ſo that a mã can not knowe where it wẽte thorow. Euẽ ſo we in lyke maner as ſoone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende/ & haue ſhewed no token of vertue, but are cõ- C ſumed in oure owne wyckedneſſe.

Such wordes ſhal they that haue ſynned ſpeake in the hell, for yͤ hope of the vngodly is lyke a drye thyſtell floure (or duſte) that is blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke a thynne ſome that is ſcatred abrode with the ſtorme: lyke as the ſmoke which is diſperſed here & there with the wynde, & as the remembraunce of a ſtraunger yͭ taryeth for a daye, and then departeth. But the ryghteous ſhal lyue for euermore: theyr reward alſo is with the Lorde: & theyr remembraunce with the hyeſt. Therfore, ſhal they receaue a glorious kyngdome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for wͭ his ryght hande ſhall he couer thẽ, and with hys owne holy arme ſhall he defende them. His gelouſy alſo ſhal take awaye the harneſſe/ & he ſhall weapen the creature to be auenged of yͤ enemyes. He ſhall put on ryghteouſnes for a breaſt plate, and take ſure iudgement in ſteade of an helmet. The inuincible ſhylde of equite ſhal he take, hys cruell wrath ſhall he ſharpen for a ſpeare, & the whole compaſe of the worlde ſhall fyght with hym agaynſte the vnwyſe.

D Then ſhall the thonder boltes go out of the lyghtenynges/ ⁊ come out of the raynebowe of the cloudes to the place appoynted: out of ỹ harde ſtony indignacion there, ſhal fall thycke hayles, and the water of the ſee ſhalbe wroth agaynſt them, and the floudes ſhal ronne roughly together. Yee a myghty wynde ſhall ſtande vp agaynſt them, and a ſtorme ſhal ſcater them abrode. Thus ỹ vnryghteous dealynge of thē ſhall brynge all the lande to a wyldernes, ⁊ wyckednes ſhall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of the myghty.

¶ The callynge of kynges, Prynces, and Iudges: whiche are alſo exhorted to ſearche wyſdome.

CAPI. VI.

A Wyſdome is better then ſtrength, ⁊ a man of vnderſtandyng is more worthe then one that is ſtronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) ⁊ vnderſtāde: O lerne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye ỹ rule the multitudes, ⁊ delyte in much people. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the ſtrength frō ỹ hyeſt: which ſhall trye youre workes and ſearch out youre ymaginacions: Howe that ye beyng officers of his kyngdome, haue nat executed true iudgemēt/ haue nat kepte the B lawe of ryghteouſnes, nor walked after the wyll of God. Horryble and that ryght ſoone ſhall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgemēt ſhal they haue ỹ beare rule. Mercy is graunted vnto the ſimple, but they that be in auctoryte ſhalbe ſore puniſhed. For God which is lorde ouer al, ſhal excepte no mans perſonne, nether ſhall he ſtāde in awe of any mans greatneſſe. For he hathe made the ſmal ⁊ great, ⁊ careth for all a lyke. But the myghty ſhall haue the ſorer puniſhmente.

Unto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I ſpeake/ that ye may lerne wyſdome and not go amyſſe. For they ỹ kepe his ryghteouſnes ſhalbe ryghteouſly iudged/ ⁊ they that are lerned in ryghteous thynges, ſhal fynde to make anſwere. Wherfore, ſet youre luſte vpon my wordes, and loue them, ſo ſhall ye come by nurtour. Wyſdome is a noble thing ſene ⁊ neuer fadeth awaye: yee ſhe is eaſely of them that loue her, and founde of ſuche C as ſeke her. She preuenteth them that deſyre her, ỹ ſhe maye fyrſte ſhewe her ſelfe vnto thē. Who ſo awaketh vnto her by tymes, ſhall haue no greate trauayle/ for he ſhall fynde her ſyttynge readye at hys dores. To thynke vpon her, is parfecte vnderſtādyng: and who ſo watcheth for her, ſhalbe ſafe, ⁊ that ſoone. For ſhe goeth about, ſekyng ſuche as are mete for her, ſheweth her ſelfe cherefully vnto them in theyr goinges, and meteth thē with al diligence. For ỹ vnfayned deſyre of refourmaciō is her begynnyng: to care for nurtour is loue/ ⁊ loue is the kepynge of her lawes. Now the kepyng of the lawes is perfeccion and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupt lyfe maketh a man familier wyth God. And ſo ỹ deſyre of wyſdome ledeth to the kyngdome euerlaſtynge. D Yf youre deſyre be then in royall ſeates ⁊ cepters (O ye kynges of the people) ſet youre luſt vpō wyſdome, that ye maye raygne for euer more. O loue the lyght of wyſdome/ all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wyſdome what ſhe is, and howe ſhe came vp, I I wyl tel you, ⁊ wyl not hyde the myſteryes of God from you: but wyl ſeke her out from the begynnynge of the natiuite, ⁊ brynge ỹ knowledge of her into lyght, ⁊ wyl not kepe backe the trueth: Nether wyll I haue to do with cōſumynge enuye, for ſuch a man ſhall not be partaker of wyſdome. But the multytude of ỹ wyſe is the welfare of ỹ worlde, and a wyſe kynge is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thorowe my wordes/ and it ſhall do you good.

CAPI. VII.

A I My ſelfe alſo am a mortall man lyke as all other, ⁊ am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrſt made, and in my mothers wōbe was I faſhyoned to be fleſh: In ỹ tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude thorowe the ſede of man, and the cōmodyous appetyte of ſlepe. When I was borne, I receaued lyke ayre as other men/ ⁊ fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) cryenge ⁊ wepynge at the fyrſt, as all other do. I was wrapped in ſwadlynge clothes, ⁊ brought vp with greate cares. For there is no kynge ỹ hathe had any other begynnynge of byrth. All mē then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, ⁊ one goynge out in lyke maner. B Wherfore I deſyred, and vnderſtandinge was geuen me: I called, and the ſprete of wyſdome came in to me. I ſet more by her then by kyngdomes ⁊ royall ſeates, ⁊ counted ryches nothynge in comparyſon of her. As for precious ſtone, I cōpared it not vnto her: for all golde is but ſmall grauell vnto her, ⁊ ſyluer ſhalbe counted but claye before her ſight. I loued her aboue wellfare and beutye, and purpoſed to take her for my lyght, for her lyght cannat be quenched. All good thynges came to me wt her, ⁊ innumerable ryches thorow her hādes. I was glad in thē all, for this wyſdome went before me, and I knew not that ſhe is the mother of al good thynges. Nowe as I my ſelfe learned vnfaynedly, ſo do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches frō no man: for ſhe is an infynite treaſure vnto mē, which who ſo vſe, become partakers of the loue ⁊ frendſhyppe of God, ⁊ are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wyſdome.

C God hath graunted me to talke wyſely, and conueniently to handle the thinges that he hath gracyouſly lent me. For it is he/that ledeth vnto wyſdome / and teacheth to vſe wyſdome a ryght. In his hande are both we and our wordes: yee all our wyſdome/ oure vnderſtandynge and knowledge of all oure workes. For he hath geuen me the true ſcyence of theſe thynges: ſo that I knowe howe the worlde was made/ and the powers of the elementes: the begynnynge/ endynge and myddeſt of the tymes: howe the tymes alter/ how one goeth after another, and howe they are fulfylled, the courſe of the yeare, the ordinaũces of the ſtarres: the natures ⁊ kyndnes of beaſtes: the furiouſnes of beaſtes: the power of the wyndes: the ymagynacyons of men: the diuerſities of yong plantes: the vertues of rotes, and al ſuche thinges as are ſecrete and not loked for/ haue I learned. For the workmaſter of all thynges hath taught

D me wyſdome. In her is the ſprete of vnderſtandynge, whiche is holy / manyfolde/ one onely/ ſutell/ courteous, diſcrete/ quycke/ vndefyled/ playne/ ſwete/ louynge the thynge that is good, ſharpe/ which forbiddeth not to do well/ gentle/ kynde/ ſtedfaſt/ ſure/ free: hauynge all vertues, circumſpecte in all thynges: receyuynge all ſpretes of vnderſtandynge beynge cleane and ſharpe. For wyſdome is nymbler then all nymble thynges: ſhe goeth thorowe ⁊ attayneth to all thynges becauſe of her cleanes. For ſhe is the breth of the power of God, and a pure cleane expreſſynge of the cleartenes of Almyghtye God. Therfore can no vndefiled thyng come vnto her: for ſhe is the bryghteneſſe of the euerlaſtynge lyght/ the vndefyled myrroure of the mateſty of God, and the ymage of hys

E goodneſſe. And for ſo much as ſhe is one, ſhe maye do all thynges: and beyng ſtedfaſt her ſelfe ſhe renueth all/ and amonge the people conueyeth ſhe her ſelfe into the holy ſoules. She maketh Goddes frendes and prophetes: for God loueth no man/ but hym in whome wyſdome dwelleth. For ſhe is more beautyfull then the Sunne, and geueth more lyght then the ſtarres, and the daye is not to be cōpared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wyckedneſſe cannot ouercome wyſdome, and fooliſhnes maye not be wt her.

CAPI. VIII. A

Wyſdome teacheth from one ende to another myghtely, ⁊ louyngly doth ſhe order al thinges. I haue loued her, ⁊ laboure for her, euen fro my youth vp: I dyd my diligēce to mary my ſelfe with her, ſuch loue had I vnto her beuty. Who ſo hath the company of God, commendeth her nobilite, yee the Lorde of all thynges himſelfe loueth her. For ſhe is the ſcolemaystreſſe of the nurtoure of God / and the choſer out of hys workes. Yf a mā wolde deſyre ryches in this lyfe, what is rycher then wyſdome, that worketh all thynges? Thou wylte ſaye: vnderſtandynge worketh. What is it amonge all thynges/that worketh more then wyſdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghtuouſnes, let hym laboure for wyſdome, for ſhe hath great vertues. And why? ſhe teacheth ſoberneſſe ⁊ prudence, rightuouſnes and ſtrength, which are ſuch thynges as men can haue nothynge more profytable in their lyfe. If a man deſyre B muche knowledge, ſhe can tel ỹ thinges that are paſte/ and diſcerne thynges for to come: ſhe knoweth the ſoteltyes of wordes/ and cā expounde darke ſentences. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thīges, or euer they come to paſſe, and the endes of al tymes and ages. So I purpoſed after thys maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and comen louyngly with her: no doute ſhe ſhall gyue me good councell/ and ſpeake comfortablye vnto me in my carefulnes and grefe. For her ſake ſhall I be well and honeſtely taken amonge the comens and Lordes of the councell. Thoughe I be yonge, yet ſhall I haue ſharpe vnderſtandyng, ſo that I ſhalbe marueilous in the ſyght of greate men/ and the faces of Prynces ſhal wonder at me. When I holde my tonge, they ſhall byde my leaſure: when I ſpeake, they ſhall loke vpon me, and yf I talke muche, they ſhal lay their handes vpon theyr mouth. Moreouer/ by the meanes of her I ſhall optayne immortalite/ and leaue behynde me an euerlaſtynge memoryal amonge them that come after me. I ſhall ſet the people in order/ and the nacyons ſhall be ſubdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes ſhalbe afrayed, when they do but heare of me: amonge the multytude I ſhal be counted good/ and myghtie in battayle. When I come home/ I ſhal fynde reſte with her for her cōpany hath no bitternes, ⁊ her felowſhyp hath no tedyouſneſſe/ but myrth and ioye.

Nowe when I conſydered theſe thynges C

by my ſelfe/and pondered them in my herte, how that to be ioyned vnto wyſdome is immortalyte / and greate pleaſure to haue her frendſhyp: howe that in the workes of her handes are infynyte ryches, howe that, who ſo kepeth company with her ſhall be wyſe: and that he which talketh wt her, ſhall come to honoure: I went aboute ſekyng, together vnto me. For I was a lad of a ryte wytte/ and had a good vnderſtandynge.

But when I grewe to more vnderſtandyng, I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheleſſe when I perceyued that I coulde not kepe my ſelfe chaſte/excepte God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wyſdome alſo/ to know whoſe gyfte it was) I ſtepped vnto the Lorde/and beſought hym/ & with my whole herte I ſayde after this maner.

¶ A prayer of Salomon to optayne wyſdome.

CAPI. IX.

A O God of my fathers/and Lorde of mercyes (thou that haſte made all thynges with thy worde, and ordayned man thorowe thy wyſdome that he ſhulde haue * dominion ouer the creature whyche thou haſte made: that he ſhulde order the worlde accordynge to equyte and ryghtuouſnes/and execute iudgemēt with a true hert) geue me wyſdome, which is euer aboute thy ſeate, and put me not out from amonge thy chyldren: for I thy ſeruaunt and ſonne of thy handmayden, and a feble perſonne/of a ſhort tyme/and to yonge to the vnderſtandyng of iudgemente and the lawes. And though a man be neuer ſo perfecte among the chyldren of men/ yet if thy wyſdome be not with hym/he ſhalbe nothyng regarded. But thou haſt choſen me to be a kynge vnto thy people/and the iudge of thy ſonnes and daughters.

Gene.1.d

B Thou haſt commaunded me to buylde a tēple vpō thy holy mounte, & an aulter in the cytie wherin thou dwelleſt: a lickeneſſe of thy holy tabernacle whyche thou haſt prepared from the begynnynge/ & thy wyſdome wyth the/ which knoweth thy workes: which alſo was with the/ when thou madeſt the worlde & knewe what was acceptable in thy ſyght and ryght in thy commaundementes. O ſende her out of thy holy heauens and frō the trone of thy maieſty/ that ſhe may be with me, and labour with me, that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy ſyght. For ſhe knoweth and vnderſtandeth all thynges: and ſhe ſhal lede me ſoberly in my workes/and preſerue me in her power. So ſhall my workes be acceptable, and then ſhall I gouerne thy people ryghtuouſly/ and be worthy to ſyt in my fathers ſeate. For what man is he, that may know ý councel of God? Or, who can thinke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortall men are miſerable/and oure forecaſtes are but vncertayne. And why? a mortal and vncorruptible body is heuy vnto the ſoule/and the early manſyon kepeth downe that vnderſtandyng that muſeth vpon many thinges. C Very hardly can we diſcerne the thynges that are vpon earth, and greate laboure haue we/ or we can fynde the thynges which are before our eyes. Who wyll then/ ſeke out the grounde of the thynges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde/who can haue knowledge of thy vnderſtandyng and meanyng, excepte thou geue wyſdome, and ſende thy holy ghoſt from aboue? that the wayes of them whiche are vpon earthe/maye be reformed: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleaſaūte vnto the, and be preſerued thorowe wyſdome.

¶ The delyueraunce of the righteous commeth through wyſdome.

CAPI. X.

A Wyſdome preſerued the fyrſte man, whom God made a Father of the worlde, whē he was created alone brought him out of his offence toke hym out of the * moulde of the earth, & gaue hī power to rule all thynges. * When the vnryghtuous went away in hys wrath from this wyſdome, the brotherhed peryſhed thorowe the wrath of murthur. Agayne/whē the * water deſtroyed the whole worlde/wyſdome preſerued the ryghtuous thorow a poore tre, wherof ſhe was gouerner her ſelf. Morouer whē wyckednes had gotten the vpper hande ſo that the nacions were puft vp with pryde ſhe knew the ryghtuous, preſerued him fautleſſe vnto God, and layed vp ſure mercye for his chyldren. She preſerued the rightuous/ * whē he fled frō the vngodly that peryſhed/ what tyme as ý fyre fell downe vpon the. v. cyties: Lyke as yet thys daye the vnfruteful waſte/and ſmokynge land geueth teſtimony of their wyckedneſſe: yee the vnrype & vntymely frutes that growe vpon the trees. And for a token of a remembraūce of the vnfaythfull ſoule/there ſtandeth a pyler of ſalt. For al ſuche as regarded not wyſdome, gat not onely thys hurte, ý they knewe not the thynges whiche were good, but alſo lefte behinde them vnto mē/a memoriall of their fooliſhnes: ſo that in ý thynges wherin they ſynned/they coulde not be hyd. But as for ſuche as take hede vnto wyſdome, ſhe ſhal delyuer them from ſorowe.

C * Whẽ the ryghtuous fled becauſe of his bꝛothers wꝛath, wyſdome led him the ryght waye, ſhewed him the kyngdome of God / gaue hym knowledge of holy thinges, made him rych in his laboures, ⁊ bꝛought to paſſe the thynges that he wente aboute. In the diſceatfulnes of ſuch as defrauded hĩ, ſhe ſtode by hym, ⁊ made him ryche. She ſaued him from the enemyes, ⁊ defended hym from the diſceyuers. She made hym ſtronge in battayle ⁊ gaue him the vyctoꝛy / that he myght knowe, howe that wyſdome is ſtronger then all thynges. * When the ryghtuous was ſolde / ſhe foꝛſoke hym not / but delyuered hym from ſynners. She wente downe wyth hym into the dongeon, and fayled hym not in the bandes: ‡ tyll ſhe had bꝛoughte hym the ſcepter of the realme, and power agaynſt thoſe that oppꝛeſſed hym. As foꝛ theym that had accuſed hym / ſhe declared them to be lyers / and bꝛought hym to perpetual woꝛſhyppe.

D * She delyuered the ryghtuous people ⁊ fautleſſe ſede / from the nacions that oppꝛeſſed them. She entred into the ſoule of the ſeruaunt of God, and ſtode by hym in wonders and tokẽs agaynſt the hoꝛrible kinges. She gaue the ryghtuous the rewarde of their labours, and led thẽ foꝛth a marueilous waye / on the daye tyme ſhe was a ſhadowe vnto them, and a lyght of ſtarres in the nyght ſeaſon. ‡ She bꝛought thẽ thoꝛowe yͤ reed ſee, ⁊ caryed them thoꝛowe the great water. She dꝛowned theyꝛ enemyes in the ſee, ⁊ bꝛought them out of the depe. So the rightuous toke the ſpoyles of the vngodly, ‡ and pꝛayſed thy holy name, O Loꝛde, and magnified thy victoꝛyous hande with one accoꝛde. ‡ Foꝛ wyſdome openeth the mouth of the dõme / and maketh the tonges of babes to ſpeake.

CAPI. XI.

A She oꝛdꝛed their woꝛckes in the handes of the holy pꝛophete: ſo that they went thoꝛowe the wildernes that was not inhabyted, and pitched their tentes in the waſte deſerte. They ſtode agaynſt their enemies / and were auenged of theyꝛ aduerſaryes. ‡ When they were thyꝛſtye / they called vpon thee / and water was gyuen thẽ out of the moſt hye rocke / and theyꝛe thyꝛſt was quenched out of the harde ſtone. Foꝛ by the thynges / where thoꝛowe theyꝛ enemyes were puniſhed, were the chyldꝛen of Iſraell helped in theyꝛ nede / to theyꝛ comfoꝛte. Foꝛ vnto the enemyes thou gaueſt mans bloude in ſteade of lyuynge water. And where as they had ſcarceneſſe in yͤ rebuke, when the chyldꝛen were ſlayne, thou gaueſt vnto thyne owne a plentuous water vnloked foꝛ: declarynge by the thyꝛſte that was at that tyme / howe thou woldeſt bꝛyng thyne owne vnto honoure / and ſleye their aduerſaries.

B Deute.8.a ‡ Foꝛ when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherly mercy / they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and puniſhed thoꝛowe the wꝛath of God. Theſe haſt thou exhoꝛted as a father / and pꝛoued them: but vnto yͤ other thou haſt bene a boyſterous king, layed hard to their charge, ⁊ condẽpned thẽ. Whether they were abſent oꝛ pꝛeſente / theyꝛ punyſhment was alyke. Foꝛ their grefe was double: namely, mournynge / and the remẽbꝛaunce of thynges paſt. Foꝛ at yͤ laſt they helde much of him, of whome in the out caſtynge they thought ſcoꝛne, as of an obiecte. Neuertheleſſe / the ryghtuous dyd not ſo when they were thyꝛſtye: but euen lyke as the thoughtes of the folyſhe were, ſo was alſo the wyckednes. C Sapi.xii.c Roma.1.c ‡ Where as certayne men nowe (thoꝛowe errour) dyd woꝛſhyppe dõme ſerpentes and vayne beaſtes thou ſendedſt a multitude of domme beaſtes vpon them foꝛ a vengeaunce: that they myght knowe, yͤ loke where withall a man ſynneth / by the ſame alſo ſhal he be punyſſhed. Leuit.26.d Sapi.16.a Iere.viii.c ‡ Foꝛ vnto thy almyghtye hande, that made the woꝛlde of naught, it was not vnpoſſyble / to ſende amonge them an heape of Beeres, oꝛ wood Lyons, oꝛ cruel beaſtes of a ſtraunge kynde / ſuche as are vnknowen / oꝛ ſpoute fyꝛe oꝛ caſt out a ſmokyng bꝛeth / oꝛ ſhote hoꝛryble ſparkes out of theyꝛ eyes / whiche myght not onely deſtroye them with hurtynge / but alſo kyl them with their hoꝛryble ſyght. Yee wythout theſe beaſtes might they haue bene ſlayne with one winde, beyng perſecuted of there owne woꝛkes, and ſcatered abꝛoade thoꝛowe the bꝛethe of thy power.

D Neuertheles, thou haſt oꝛdꝛed all thinges in meaſure, nombꝛe ⁊ weight. Foꝛ thou haſte euer had great ſtrẽgth ⁊ myght, ⁊ who maye wᵗſtande yͤ power of thyne arme? And whye lyke as the ſmal thyng yͤ the balaũce weyeth ſo is the woꝛlde befoꝛe yͤ: yee as a dꝛoppe of yͤ moꝛnynge dewe, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Foꝛ thou loueſt all the thynges that are / and hateſt none of thẽ whõ thou haſt made: neither dydeſt thou ordayne or make any thynge, of euyll wyll.

How myght any thyng endure / yf it were not thy wyll? Or howe coulde any thynge be preſerued / excepte it were called of the? But thou ſpareſt all / for all are thyne (O Lorde) yͤ louer of ſoules.

¶ The mercye of God towardes ſynners, the workes of god are vnreprouable. God geueth leyſoure to repent vs.

CAPI. XII.

O Lorde / howe gracyous & ſwete is thy A ſpirete in al thinges? Therfore chaſteneſt yͧ thẽ meaſurably yͭ go wrong, & warneſt thẽ concernyng yͤ thinges wherin they offende: yͧ ſpeakeſt vnto thẽ (O Lorde) & exhorteſt them to leaue theyr wyckednes / and to put theyr truſt in yͤ. Deut. ix. a / xii. d. xviii. c * As for thoſe olde inhabiters of thy holy lande, thou myghteſt not awaye wyth thẽ, for they cõmitted abhominable workes agaynſt thee: as witchcraft, ſorcery and Idolatry, they ſlewe theyr owne chyldren wythout mercy: they dyd eate vp mens bowels / & deuoured the bloude: yee because of ſuche abhominaciõs, myſbeleuers & offeringes / thou ſleweſt the fathers of the deſolate ſoules by the handes of our fathers: yͭ the land whiche B thou loueſt aboue al other, myght be a dwellynge for the chyldren of God.

Neuertheles, thou ſparedſt them alſo (as men) & ſendedſt yͤ forerũners of thyne hooſte euen hornettes to deſtroye them out by lytle & lytle. Not that thou waſt vnable to ſubdue the vngodly vnto the rightuous in batayle / or wyth cruel beaſtes / or with one roughe word to deſtroye them together: Exod. 23. d / Deut. vii. d * But thy mynde was to dryue them out by lytle and lytle geuynge thẽ tyme & place to amende: knowyng well, that it was an vnryghtuous nacyon & wicked of nature, and yͭ their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a curſed ſede frõ the begynnyng / and feared no man: Yet haſt thou pardoned theyr ſynnes. For who wyll ſaye vnto the: why haſt thou done that? Or C who wyll ſtãde agaynſt thy iudgemente? Or who wyl come before thy face an auenger of vnryghtuous mẽ? Or who wyl blame yͤ, if yͤ 1. Pet. v. a people peryſh, whõ yͧ haſt made? For there is none other god but yͤ, that careſt for al thinges yͭ thou mayeſt declare how that thy iudgemẽt is not vnright. There dare nether king, nor tyrãnt in thy ſyght require accõptes of them whom thou haſt deſtroyed.

For ſo muche then as thou art ryghtuous thy ſelfe, yͧ ordreſt all thynges ryghteouſlye Job. ix. a * & puniſheſt euen him that hathe not deſerued to be punyſhed, & takeſt him for a ſtrãger and an aleaũt in the lande of thy power. For thy power is the begynnynge of ryghtuouſnes: and because thou art Lorde of all thynges / therfore art thou gracious vnto al. When mẽ thinke yͤ not to be of a full ſtrength thou declareſt thy power: and boldly deliuereſt thou thẽ ouer that knowe the not. But thou Lord of power iudgeſt quietly / and ordreſt vs with great worſhip / for thou mayeſt do as thou wylte.

By ſuche workes nowe haſt thou taught thy people, that a man alſo ſhulde be iuſte & D louynge: and haſt made thy chyldren to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgeſt / thou geueſt rowme to amende from ſynnes. For in ſo muche as thou haſt punyſhed / and with ſuch diligence deliuered the enemies of thy ſeruauntes, whiche were worthy to dye (where thorowe thou gaueſt them tyme and place of amendement that they myght turne from their wyckednes) with how great dyligẽce then puniſheſt thou thyne owne chyldrẽ vnto whoſe fathers thou haſt ſworne & made couenauntes of good promyſes? So where as thou doeſt but chaſten vs / thou puniſheſt our enemyes diuerſe wayes, to the intente that when we punyſhe / we ſhulde remembre thy goodneſſe: & when oure ſelues are punyſhed, to put our truſt in thy mercy.

Wherfore, where as men haue lyued ignorauntly & vnryghtuouſly thou haſt puny E ſhed thẽ ſore / euen thorow yͤ ſame thynges yͭ they worſhypped. * For they wente aſtraye very longe in the waye of errour, & helde the beaſtes (which euen their enemyes deſpyſed) for goddes / lyuinge as chyldren of no vnderſtandyng. Therfore haſt thou ſente a ſcornefull punyſhment among thẽ, as amonge the chyldrẽ of ignoraunce. As for ſuche as wolde not be refourmed by thoſe ſcornes and rebukes / they felt the worthy punyſhmẽt of God. For the thynges that they ſuffred, they bare them vnpaciently, beyng not content in thẽ, but vnwyllyng. And when they peryſhed by the ſame thinges yͭ they toke for goddes, they knoweledged then / that there was, but one true God, whom afore they wold not know: therfore came the ende of theyr damnacyon vpon them.

¶ Al thynges be vayne, excepte the knowledge of God. Idolatres and Idoles are mocked.

CAPI. XIII.

Vayne are al men, which haue not know A ledge of God: * as were they that out of the good thynges whyche are ſene, knewe not hym, yͭ of hym ſelfe is euerlaſtyng. Neyther toke they ſo much regarde of the workes that are made / as to knowe, who was the craftesman of them but ſome toke the fyre / ſome the winde or ayre, ſome the courſe of the ſtarres / ſome the water / ſome toke Sunne and Moone / or the lyghtes of heauen which rule the earth / for goddes. But though they had ſuche pleaſure in theyr bewty / that they thought them to haue bene goddes: yet ſhuld they haue knowen / howe muche more fayrer he is that made them. For the maker of bewtye hath ordayned all theſe thynges. Or yf they marueled at the power and workes of them / they ſhulde haue perceyued therby / that he whiche made theſe thynges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greateneſſe and bewty of the B creatures, the maker therof may playnely be knowen. Notwithſtandynge / they are the leſſe to be blamed, that ſeke God, and wolde fynde hym / and yet myſſe. And whyefore ſo muche as they go about in his workes and ſeke after thē / it is a token, that they regarde and holde moche of his workes that are ſene: howbeit they are not wholy to be excuſed. For yf theyr vnderſtandyng & knowledge be ſo great, that they can diſcerne the world and the creatures, why do they not rather fynde out the Lorde therof?

But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deade is theyr hope, that call them Goddes whiche are but the workes of mens handes: golde / ſyluer / and the thynge that is founde out by connynge, the ſimilitudes of beaſtes, or any vayne ſtone that hath bene made by hande of olde. (ay.44.b ere.x.a) * Or as whā a carpēter cutteth downe a tree out of the wod / and pareth of the barke of it cōningly: & ſo wᵗ the one ꝑte maketh a veſſel to be vſed, & dreſſeth meat wᵗ the reſydue. As for the other parte yᵗ is lefte / C which is ꝑfytable for nothing (for it is a croked pece of wod & full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorowe his vanite, & accordyng to the knowledge of his cōnnyng) he geueth it ſome proporcyon, faſhyoneth it after the ſimilitude of a mā, or maketh it like ſome beaſt ſtraketh it ouer with redd / and paynteth it / & loke what foule ſpot is in it he caſteth ſome colour vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it / ſetteth it in the wall, & maketh it faſte with yron, prouydynge ſo for it / leaſt it happen to fall: for it is well knowen / that it can not helpe it ſelfe: And why? it is but an ymage / and muſt of neceſſyte be helped.

Then goeth he & offreth of his goodes vnto it, D for his chyldren and for his wyfe: he ſeketh helpe at it, he aſketh councell at it: he is not aſhamed to ſpeake vnto it that hathe no ſoule: for health, he maketh his peticion vnto hym that is ſycke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpō him for help, that is not able to helpe him ſelfe: & to ſende him a good iourneye / he prayeth him yᵗ maye not go. And in al the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne any thing or to worcke) he prayeth vnto hym / that can do no maner of good.

¶ The deſtruccyon and abhomynacion of ymages. A curſe of them, and of him that maketh them. The euyls that come of Idolatrye.

CAPI. XIIII.

AGayne / another man / purpoſynge to ſayle / and begynnyng to take his iourneye A thorowe the ragynge ſee, calleth for help vnto a ſtocke, that is farre weaker / then the tree that beareth hym. For as for it / couetouſneſſe of moneye hath founde it out, and the crafteſman made it with hys connynge. But thy prouydence / O Father / gouerneth all thynges from the begynnyng: (Exod.14.b) * for thou haſt made a waye in the ſee / and a ſure path in the myddeſt of the waues: declarynge therby / that thou haſte power to helpe in al thinges, yee though a man wente to the ſee without ſhyppe. B Neuertheleſſe / that the workes of thy wyſdome ſhulde not be vayne / (Gene.vi.b.) ‡ thou haſt cauſed an arcke to be made: & therfore do men commytte theyr lyues to a ſmall pece of wodd, paſſyng ouer the ſee in a ſhyp / and are ſaued.

(Gene.vii.b) * For in yᵉ olde tyme alſo when the proude gyauntes peryſhed / he (in whō the hope was lefte to encreaſe the worlde) wente into the ſhyppe / whiche was gouerned thorowe thy hande / and ſo left ſede behynde him vnto the worlde. For happye is yᵉ tree, where thorowe ryghtuouſnes cometh: but curſed is the ydol that is made with hādes / (Psal.115.a and.135.c. Baru.vi.b) * ye both it and he that made it. He / becauſe he made it: and it / becauſe it was called God / where as it is but a frayle thynge. ‡ For the vngodly & hys vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God. (Psal.vii.b) Euen ſo the worke and he that made it alſo, ſhall be punyſhed together. Therefore ſhall there a plage come vpon the ydols of the Heythen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhomynacyon / a temptacyon vnto the ſoules of men / and a ſnare for the fete of the vnwyſe. And why? yᵉ ſekynge out of ydoles is the begynnynge of whordome / and the bryngynge vp of the is the deſtruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from the begynnynge / nether ſhall they contynue for euer. C The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earthe, therfore ſhal they come ſhortly to an ende.

Whē a father mourned for hys ſōne yͭ was takē awaye frō him, he made him an ymage (in all yͤ haſte) of his deed ſonne: & ſo begāne to worſhyppe him as God, which was but a deed mā, & ordened his ſeruaūtes to offer vnto him. Thꝰ by proceſſe of tyme & thorow an vngraciꝰ cuſtome, this erroure was kepte as lawe, and tyrauntes cōpelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for thoſe that were ſo farre of, that men myght not worſhyppe them preſently, theyr pycture was brought frō farre (lyke the ymage of a kyng whō they wolde honoure) to the intent that with greate diligence they myght worſhypp him which was farre of/ as thoughe he had bene preſent. Agayne/ the ſyngulet connyng of the crafteſman gaue the ignoraunte alſo a great occaſyon to worſhyp ymages. For the workeman wyllyng to do him a pleaſure that ſet him a worcke/ laboured with all his connynge
D to make the ymage of the beſt faſhyon.
And ſo (thorowe the beuty of the worcke) the comē people was diſceyued, in ſo much that they toke him nowe for a God/ which a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And thys was the erroure of mans lyfe/ when men (eyther for to ſerue theyr owne affection, or to do ſome pleſure vnto kinges) aſcribed vnto ſtones and ſtockes yͤ name of god, which ought to be gyuen vnto no man.

Morouer, this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowledge of God:
Deut. 18. b but where as they lyued in the greate warres Iere. vii. b of ignoraunce/ thoſe many & greate plages and. xix. a called they peace. For eyther * they ſlue theyr owne chyldren, and offred them/ or dyd ſacrifice in the nyght ſeaſon/ or els helde vnreaſonable watches: ſo that they kepte neyther lyfe nor maryage cleane: but eyther one E ſlue another to death malyciouſly/ or els greued his neyghboure wyth aduoutrye. And thus were al thynges myxte together: bloud manſlaughter/ theft/ diſſimulacyon/ corrupcyon/vnfaythfulneſſe/ ſedycyon/ periurye/ diſquyetynge of good men/ vnthankfulnes/ defylynge of ſoules/ chaungynge of byrth, vnſtedfaſtneſſe of maryage, myſorder of aduoutrye and vncleneſſe. And why? the honourynge of abhomynable ymages is the cauſe, the begynnynge and ende of all euyll. For they that worſhyppe Idols, eyther they are mad when they be mery, or prophecie lyes or lyue vngodly, or els lyghtly forſweare them ſelues. For in ſo much as their truſte is in yͤ Idols (which haue nether ſoule ner vnderſtandynge) thoughe they ſweare falſely, yet they thynke it ſhall not hurte them.

Therfore commeth a greate plage vpon them, & that worthely: for they haue an euyll opinion of God/ gyuyng hede vnto Idols/ſwearyng vniuſtly to diſceyue, & deſpyſynge ryghteouſnes. For theyr ſwearing is no vertue, but a plage of them yͭ ſinne, & goeth euer wͭ
the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The voyce of the faythfull, prayſynge the mercy of God, for whoſe graces ſake they ſerue not Idols.

CAPI. XV.

But yͧ (O our God) art ſwete, long ſufferyng A & true, & in mercy ordreſt yͤ al thinges.
Though we ſynne, yet are we thyne/ for we knowe thy ſtrēgth. If we ſynne not/ then are we ſure, that thou regardeſt vs. For to knowe the/ is perfecte ryghtuouſnes: Yee to knowe thy ryghtuouſnes and power/ is the rote of immortalyte. As for the thynge/ that men haue founde out thorowe theyr euyll ſcience/it hath not diſceyued vs: as the payntyng of the picture (an vnprofytable labour) and carued image, wͭ diuerſe colours, whoſe ſyght entyſed the ignoraunt: ſo that he honoreth and loueth the pycture of a deed image that hath no ſoule.

Neuertheles, they that loue ſuch euyl thinges, B are worthy of death: they yͭ truſt in thē/they yͭ make them, they that loue them, & they that honoure thē. The potter alſo taketh & tempereth ſoft earth, laboureth it, & geueth it the faſhion of a veſſel, whatſoeuer ſerueth for our vſe: & ſo of one pece of claye he maketh ſome cleane veſſel for ſeruice, & ſome cōtrary.
But wherto euery veſſel ſerueth, yͭ knoweth the potter hym ſelfe. So with his vayne laboure he maketh a God of the ſame claye:
this dothe euen he/ whiche a lytle afore was made of earthe hym ſelfe/ and within a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithſtandyng, he careth not the more C becauſe he ſhall labour, nor becauſe hys lyfe is ſhort: but ſtryueth to excell gold ſmythes, the ſiluer ſmythes and coper ſmythes, and taketh
it for an honour to make vayne thynges.
For his hert is aſſhes, hys hope is but vaine earth, & his life is more vile then clay:
for ſo much as he knoweth not his owne maker, yͭ gaue hī his ſoule to worke, & brethed in hī the breth of lyfe. They coūte our lyfe but a paſtyme, & our cōuerſacion to be, but a market, & that men ſhulde euer be gettyng, & that by euyl meanes. Nowe he yͭ of earth maketh frayle veſſels & ymages, knoweth hī ſelfe to offende aboue al other.

Al the

D All ŷ enemyes of thy people ⁊ that holde thē in ſubieccyon, are vnwiſe, vnhappy, and exceadynge proude vnto theyr owne ſoules/ for they iudge all the Idols of the Heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye ſyght to ſe, nor noſes to ſmell, nor eares to heare / nor fyngers of handes for to grope: ⁊ as for their fete, they are to ſlowe to go. For man made them/ ⁊ he that hath but a borowed ſprete / faſhioned them. But no mā can make a God lyke vnto hym: for ſeynge he is but mortall hym ſelfe / it is but mortall that he maketh with vnryghtuous handes. He hym ſelfe is better then they whom he worſhyppeth, for he lyued though he was mortall / ſo dyd neuer they. Yee they worſhyppe beaſtes alſo/ which are moſt miſerable: for compare thinges that cannot fele vnto them / and they are worſe then thoſe. Yet is there not one of theſe beaſtes/ that with his ſyght can behold any good thing/ nether haue they geuē prayſe nor thanckes vnto God.

¶ The punyſhment of Idolaterers, and the benefytes done vnto the faythfull.

CAPI. XVI.

A For theſe and ſuche other thynges haue they ſuffred worthy punyſhement and thorowe the multytude of beaſtes are they roted out. In ſteade of the whiche punyſhmentes thou haſt gracyouſly ordred thyne owne people/ and geuen their deſyre that they longed for: a newe and ſtraunge tayſt, *preparynge them quales to be theyr meate: to the intent that (by the thynges which were ſhewed and ſent vnto them) they that were ſo gredy of meate/ myght be withdrawen euen frō the deſyre that was neceſſary. But theſe with in ſhorte tyme were brought vnto pouertye/ and taſted a newe meate. For it was requyſite that (without any excuſe) deſtruccion ſhulde come vpon thoſe which vſed tyranny, and to ſhewe onely vnto the other, how their enemyes were deſtroyed. ‡ For when the cruel woodneſſe of the beaſtes came vpon them, they peryſhed thorow the ſtinges of the cruel Serpentes.

B Notwithſtandynge, thy wrath endured not perpetually / but they were put in feare for a lytle ſeaſon/ that they myght be refourmed, hauyng a token of ſaluacyon, to remēbre the commaundemēt of thy lawe. For he that cōuerted/ was not healed by the thynge ŷ he ſawe/ but by the/ O ſauiour of all. So in this thou ſhewedſt thyne enemyes/ that it is thou/ which delyuereſt frō all euyll. As for them * whē they were bytē wͭ greſhoppers and flyes, they dyed / for they were worthy to peryſh by ſuch: But nether ŷ teth of dragōs nor of venimous wormes ouercame thy chyldrē, for thy mercy was euer by thē ⁊ helped thē. Therfore were they punyſhed to remēbre thy wordes, but haſtely were they healed agayn/ leſt they ſhuld fal into ſo depe forgetfulnes, ŷ they myght not vſe thy helpe.

C It was nether herbe nor playſter that reſtored thē to the helth/ but thy word (O lord) which healeth all thynges. It is ŷ (O Lord) that haſt the power of lyfe and death ‡: thou ledeſt vnto deathes dore / and bryngeſt vp agayne. Deute.32.f. 1.Reg.2.b. But mā thorow wickednes ſlayeth his owne ſoule, and when hys ſprete goeth forth/ it turneth not agayne, neyther may he call agayne the ſoule that is taken awaye: It is not poſſyble to eſkape thy hande. For the vngodly that wolde not knowe ŷ / were punyſhed by ŷ ſtrength of thyne arme: wyth ſtraunge waters / hayles and raynes were they perſecuted, and thorowe fyre were they conſumed. For it was a wonderous thynge that fyre myght do more then water whiche quencheth all thynges: but the worlde is the auenger of the ryghtuous. Somtyme was the fyre ſo tame/ that the beaſtes which were ſent to punyſh the vngodly, brente not: and that becauſe they ſhulde ſe and knowe / that they were perſecuted with the punyſhmente of God. D And ſome tyme brent the fyre in the water on euery ſyde, that it myght deſtroye ŷ vnrighteous nacion of the earth. ‡ Exod.16.d. Agayne thou haſte fed thyne owne people wͭ Angels fode, and ſent the breade redy from Heauen (without their laboure) beynge very pleaſaunt and of good taſt. And to ſhewe thy ryches ⁊ ſweteneſſe vnto thy chyldren, thou gaueſt euery one theyr deſyre, ſo that euery mā myght take what lyked hym beſt. But the ſnowe and yſe abode the vyolence of the fyre ⁊ melted not: that they myght knowe/ that the fyre burnyng in the hayle and rayne/ deſtroyed the frute of the enemyes: the fyre alſo forgat his ſtrength agayne/ that the ryghtuous myght be noryſhed. For the creature that ſerueth the (whiche art the maker) is fearſe in punyſhyng ŷ vnryghtuous, but is eaſy ⁊ gētle to do good/ vnto ſuche as put their truſt in the. E Therfore dyd all thynges alter at the ſame tyme/ and were all obedient vnto thy grace, whiche is the nurſe of all thynges, accordynge to the deſyre of them that had nede therof: that thy chyldren (O Lord) whō thou loueſt, myght knowe, * that it is not nature and the growynge of frutes that fedeth men, but that it is thy worde, whiche preſerueth them that put theyr truſt in the. Deute.8.a. Mat.4.a.

For loke what myght not be deſtroyed wyth the fyre/as ſoone as it was warmed wyth a lytle Sunne beame/it melted: yͤ al men myght knowe, that thankes ought to be geuen vnto the before the Sunne ryſe, and that thou oughteſt to be worſhypped before the daye ſprynge. For the hope of the vnthãkfull ſhall melt awaye as the wynter yſe, & peryſhe as water, that is not neceſſary.

¶ The iudgementes of God vpon the Egyptians.

CAPI. XVII.

A Roma.11.c GReate are * thy iudgementes (O Lord) and thy councels can not be expreſſed: therfore men do erre/ that wyl not be refourmed wyth thy wyſdome. Exodi.3.c * For when yͤ vnryghtuous thought to haue thy holy people in ſubiectyon, they were bounde with the bandes of darknes & long nyght, ſhut vnder the rofe, thynkynge to eſcape the euerlaſtynge wyſdome. And whyle they thought to be hyd in the darckeneſſe of their ſynnes/ they were ſcatred abrode in the very myddeſt of yͤ darke couerynge of forgetfulnes / put to horryble feare & wõdrouſly vexed: for the corner wher they myght not kepe them from feare (becauſe the ſounde came downe and vexed them) yee many terrible and ſtraunge viſions made them afrayed.

B No power of the fyre myght geue them lyght, nether myght the cleare flammes of yͤ ſtarres lyghtẽ that horrible nyght. For there appeared vnto them a ſodayne fyre / verye dredefull: At the which (when they ſawe nothynge they were ſo afrayed, yͤ they thought the thynge whiche they ſawe / to be the more fearfull. Exodi.7.b * As for the ſorcery & enchauntmẽt that they vſed/it came to deryſyon / and the proude wyſdome was brought to ſhame. For they that promyſed to dryue awaye the fearefulnes & drede from that weake ſoules, were ſicke for feare them ſelues/and yͤ with ſcorne And though none of the wonders feared thẽ/ yet were they afrayed at the beaſtes whiche came vpon them, & at the hyſſyng of the ſerpentes. In ſo much that with trẽblyng they ſwowned, & ſayd they ſawnot yͤ ayre, whiche no man yet may eſcape:

C For it is an heuy thynge/when a mans owne conſcience beareth recorde of his wyckednes and condempneth hym. And why/a vexed and wounded conſcyence, taketh euer cruell thynges in hãd. Psal.4[illegible].a * Fearefulnes is nothyng els/but a declaryng that a man ſeketh helpe and defence to anſwere for hym ſelfe. And loke how much leſſe the hope is within, the more is the vncertayntye of the matter, for the whiche he is punyſhed. But they yͤ came in the myghtye nyght: ſlepe the ſlepe that fel vpon them from vnder and from aboue: ſomtyme were they afrayed thorowe the feare of the wonders/and ſomtyme they were ſo weake that they ſwowned withall: for an haſtye and ſodayne fearfulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde/yf any of them had fallen/he was kepte and ſhut in priſon /but without chaynes. But if any dwelt in a vyllage/if he had bene an heyrde or huſbandman he ſuffred intollerable neceſſytie: for they were all bounde with one cheyne of darkenes.

D Whether it were a blaſynge wynde / or a ſwete ſonge of the byrdes among the thycke braunches of the trees / or the vehemency of haſtye runnynge water/or great noyſe of the fallyng downe of Stones/or the playenge and runnynge of beaſtes whom they ſawe not/or the myghtye noyſe of roarynge beaſtes / or the ſownde that aunſwereth agayne in the hye Mountaynes: it made them ſwowne for very feare. For all the earthe ſhyned with cleare lyght / and no man was hyndered in his labour. Onely vpon them there fell a heuy nyght/ an ymage of darckneſſe that was to come vpon them. Yee they were vnto them ſelues the moſte heuy & horryble darcknes.

¶ The fyre lyghte that the Iſraelytes had in Egypte. The perſecucyon of the faythfull. The Lorde ſmote al the fyrſte borne of Egypte. The ſynne of the people in the wyldernesſe. Aaron ſtode betwyxt the lyue and the dead, with his cenſoure.

CAPI. XVIII.

A NEuertheles / thy Sayntes had a very great lyght (and the ennemyes herde theyr voyce / but they ſawe not the fygure of them.) And becauſe they ſuffred not the ſame thynges/they magnyfied the: and they that were vexed afore (becauſe they were not hurte nowe) thancked the/and beſought the (O God) that there myghte be a dyfference. * Therfore had they a burnynge pyler of fyre to lede them in the vnknowne waye, and thou gaueſt them the Sunne for a fre gyft without any hurte. Reaſon it was that they ſhulde want lyght, and be put in yͤ priſon of darcknes / B whiche kepte thy chyldren in captyuyte/ by whom the vncorrupte lyght of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuẽ. * When they thought to ſlaye the babes of the ryghteous (one beynge layed out, and preſerued to be leader vnto the other) * thou broughteſt out yͤ whole multytude of the chyldren/and deſtroyedſt theſe in the myghtye water. Of that nyght were oure fathers certyfyed afore/that they knowynge vnto what othes they had geuen credence / myght be of good cheare, Thus thy people receaued ỹ health of the ryghteous / but the vngodly were deſtroyed. For lyke as thou haſt hurte our enemyes / ſo haſt thou promoted vs whome thou calledeſt afore. For the ryghteous chyldren of the good men offred ſecretly / ⁊ ordred the lawe of ryghteouſnes vnto vnite: that the iuſt ſhuld receaue good and euyll in lyke maner, ſyngynge prayſes vnto the father of all men. Agayne / there was herde an vnconuenyẽt voyce of the enemyes / and a pyteous crye for chyldren that were bewayled. The maſter and the ſeruaunt were punyſhed in lyke maner. For they al together had innumerable that dyed one deathe.

C * Neyther were the lyuinge ſufficient to bury the deed, for in the twyncklynge of an eye / the nobleſt nacion of them was deſtroyed. As ofte as God helped them afore / yet wolde it not make thẽ beleue: but in the deſtruccyon of the fyrſte borne they knowledged / that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were ſtyll / and when the nyght was in the myddeſt of her courſe, thy Almyghtye worde (O Lorde) leapte downe from heauen oute of thy royall trone / as a rough man of warre, in the myddeſte of the lande that was deſtroyed: and the ſharpe ſwerde perfourmed theyr ſtrayte commaundement, ſtandynge and fyllyng all thynges with death: yee it ſtode vpon the earth ⁊ reached vnto the heauen. Then the ſyght of the euyl dreames vexed them ſorenly, and fearfulneſſe came vpon them vnawares. o.xii.f.

Then laye there one here / another there / halfe deed, halfe quycke, ⁊ ſhewed the cauſe of hys deathe. For the vyſyons that vexed them ſhewed them theſe thynges afore: ſo that they were not ignoraunte / wherfore they peryſhed.

D The tẽtacion of death touched the ryghteous alſo, and among the multytude in the wyldernesse there was inſurreccyõ, but thy wrath endured not lõge. For the blameleſſe man wente in all the haſt, and toke the battayll vpõ him, brought forth the weapen of his mynyſtracyon: euen prayer and the cenſours of reconcylynge, ſet him ſelfe agaynſt the wrath / and ſo brought the miſery to an ende: declaringe therby, that he was thy ſeruaunt. For he ouercame not the multytude with bodely power / nor wyth weapens of myght: but with the worde he ſubdued hym that vexed hym / puttynge them in remembraunce of the othe and couenauntes made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpõ another he ſtode in the myddeſt, pacified the wrath, and parted ỹ waye vnto lyuynge. * And whyrein hys longe garment was al the bewtye / and in the foure rowes of the ſtones was ỹ glory of the fathers grauen / and thy maieſty was wrytten in the crowne of hys heade. Exo.28.b.c Unto theſe the deſtroyer gaue place / ⁊ was afrayed of them: for it was onely a temtaciõ worthy of wrath.

¶ The deeth of the Egypcyans, and the greate love of the Hebrues. The meate that was geuen at the deſyre of the people. The elementes ſerue not onely to the wyll of God / but alſo to the wyll of man.

CAPI. XIX.

A AS FOR the vngodly / the wrathe came vpon them without mercye vnto the ende. For he knewe before what ſhulde happen vnto them: howe that (when they had conſented to let them go / and had ſente oute with great dylygence) they wolde repente, and folowe vpon them. Exo.xiiii.a * For when they were yet mournynge and makynge lamentacyon by the graues of the dead, they deuyſed another foolyſhenes: ſo that they perſecuted them in theyr flyenge, whom they had caſt out afore with prayer. Worthy neceſſyte alſo broughte them vnto thys ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thinge that was wantinge of theyr punyſhemente / was requyſyte ſo to be fulfylled vpon them wyth tormentes / that thy people myghte haue a maruelous paſſage thorowe, and that theſe myght fynde a ſtraunge death.

B Thẽ was euery creature faſhioned againe of newe, accordinge to the wyll of theyr maker / obeyenge thy commaundementes that thy chyldren myght be kept without hurte / For the cloude ouerſhadowed theyr tentes / and ỹ dry earth appeared / where afore was water: ſo that in ỹ reed ſee there was a waye without impedimẽt, and the great depe became a grene felde: where thorow al the people wẽte that were defended with thy hand, ſeing thy wonderous and maruelous workes. For as the horſes, ſo were they fed, and leapte lyke lambes, praiſynge the (O Lord) which haddeſt delyuered thẽ. And whyle they were yet myndefull of the thynges / ỹ happened whyle they dwelt in the lãde: how the grounde brought forthe flyes in ſteade of catell: ⁊ howe the ryuer ſcrauled with the multytude of frogges in ſteade of fyſhes.

C Exo. xvi c. Num. 11.g * But at the laſt they ſawe a new creation of byrof byrdes / what tyme as they were diceaued with luſt / and deſyred delicate meates. For when they were ſpeakynge of theyr appetite, the quayles came vp vnto them from the ſee / and punyſhementes came vpon the ſynners, not without the tokẽs which came to paſſe afore by the vehemẽcye of the ſtreames: for they ſuffred worthely accordyng to theyr wyckedneſſes / they dealt ſo abhomynably & churlyſhly w̃ ſtraũgers. Some receaued no vnknowne geſtes / ſome brought the ſtraungers into bondage that dyd them good. Beſyde all theſe thynges there were ſome / that not onely receaued no ſtraũgers with theyr wylles / but perſecuted thoſe al- iii.John.b. ſo / * & dyd them much euyll / that receaued them gladly. Therfore were they puniſhed Gene.xix.c. with * blyndneſſe / lyke as they that were couered w̃ ſodayne darckneſſe at the dores of the ryghteous / ſo that euery one ſought the entraunce of hys dore.

D Thus the elementes turned into them ſelues / lyke as when one tyne is chaunged vpon an inſtrument of muſycke, and yet all the reſydue kepe theyr melody: which maye eaſely be perceaued, by the ſyght of the thinges that are come to paſſe. The drye lande was turned into a waterye / and the thynge that afore ſwãme in the water / were now vpon the drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to hys owne vertue) and the water forgate hys owne kynde to quenche. Agayne, the flammes of the noyſome beaſtes hurte not the fleſh of them that went with thẽ / neyther melted they the yſe / which els melteth lyghtely. In al thynges haſt thou promoted thy people (O Lorde) and brough them to honour: thou haſt not deſpyſed thẽ, but alway and ĩ all places haſt thou ſtande by thẽ.

: Here endeth the Booke of wyſdome.

The booke of Jeſus the ſonne of Syrach / which is called in Latin / Eccleſiaſticus.

Many and greate men haue declared wyſdome vnto vs out of the lawe / out of the Prophetes and out of other that folowed them. In the whiche thynges Iſraell oughte to be commended / by the reaſon of doctrine and wyſdome: Therfore they that haue it and reade it / ſhulde not onely them ſelues be wiſe there thorow, but ſerue other alſo wyth teachynge and wrytynge.

After that my graunde father Jeſus had geuen dylygente laboure to reade the lawe, the Prophetes and other bokes that were lefte vs of oure fathers, and had well exercyſed hym ſelfe therin: he purpoſed alſo to wryte ſome thynge of wyſdome and good maners, to the intent that they whiche were wyllynge to learne and to be wyſe / myghte haue the more vnderſtandynge / and be the more apte to leade a good conuerſacyon.

Wherfore / I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligẽce / and to take it in good worth, though our wordes be not ſo eloquent as the famous oratours.

For the thynge ỹ is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge / ſoundeth not ſo well when it is tranſlated into another ſpeach. Not onely thys boke of myne but alſo the law, the Prophetes and other bokes ſoũde farre otherwiſe, then they do, when they are ſpoken in theyr owne language. Now in the .xxxviij. yeare when I came into Egipt ĩ the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges & cõtinued there al my lyfe / I gat lybertye to reade & write many good thinges. Wherfore / I thought it good and neceſſary, to beſtowe my dylygence and trauayle to interprete thys boke. And cõſydering that I had tyme / I laboured and dyd my beſt to perfourme thys boke, & to bringe it vnto lyght: that the ſtraungers alſo which are dyſpoſed to lerne / myght apply thẽ ſelues vnto good maners, & lyue accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde.

Eccleſiaſticus.

¶ Wyſdome proceadeth and commeth of God. A prayſe of the feare of God. Righteouſnes is a degre to come by wyſdome.

CAPI. I.

A ALL wiſdome commeth of god the Lord/ and hath bene euer wyth hym/ and is before al tyme. Who hath nombred the ſande of the ſee, the droppes of yͤ rayne/ and the dayes of tyme? Who hathe meaſured the heygth of heauen/ the bredth of the earthe, & the depneſſe of the ſee? Who hathe ſoughte oute the grounde of Goddes wyſdome/ whiche hath bene before all thinges? * Wyſdome hath bene before all thynges/ and the vnderſtandynge of prudence from euerlaſtynge. (Goddes worde in the heygth is the wel of wiſdome, and the euerlaſtyng cōmaundementes are the entraūce of her.) Unto whome hathe the rote of wyſdome bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyt? Unto whō hath the doctrine of wiſdome bene diſcouered & ſhewed? & who hath vnderſtande yͤ many folde entraūce of her?

B There is one: euen the Hyeſt/ the maker of all thynges/ the Almyghtye/ the kynge/ of power (of whome men oughte to ſtande greatly in awe) which ſytteth vpō his trone/ beynge a God of domynyon: He had created her thorowe the holy gooſt: he hath ſene her: nōbred her, and meaſured her: He hath poured her oute vpon all hys workes, and vpon all fleſhe accordynge to hys gyfte: he geueth her rychely vnto thē that loue him:

The feare of the Lorde is worſhyppe and triumphe/ gladneſſe and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery hert, geueth gladneſſe, ioye and longe life. Who ſo feareth the Lorde/ it ſhall go well with hym at the laſt, and in the daye of his death he ſhall be bleſſed.

C The loue of God is honorable wyſdome: but vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they ſe what wonderous thinges it doth. * The feare of the Lord is yͤ begynnynge of wyſdome, and was made with the faythful in the mothers wombe: it ſhall go with the choſen wemen, and ſhall be knowen of the ryghteous and faythfull. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght Gods ſeruyce, that preſerueth and iuſtifyeth the herte, and geueth myrth and gladneſſe. Who ſo feareth yͤ lord ſhall be happy: and when he hath nede of cōforte, he ſhal be bleſſed. To feare God is the wyſdome that maketh rich, and bringeth al good with her. She filleth the whole houſe with her gyftes/ and the garners with her treaſure. The feare of the Lord is yͤ crowne of wyſdome/ and geueth plenteous peace and health. She hath ſene her & nombred her (both theſe are the giftes of God) knowledge and vnderſtanding of wyſdome hath he poured out as rayne/ and thē that helde her faſt, hath he brought vnto honour.

D The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wyſdome/ and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treaſures of wyſdome is vnderſtādinge and deuocyon of knowledge/ but wyſdome is abhorred of ſynners. The feare of yͤ Lord dryueth oute ſynne: for he that is without feare, cānot be made righteous, and his wilfull boldnes is his owne deſtruccion. A paciēt man wyl ſuffre vnto the tyme/ and then ſhall he haue yͤ rewarde of ioye. A good vnderſtandynge wyll hyde hys wordes for a tyme, & many mēs lyppes ſhal ſpeake of hys wyſdome. In the treaſures of wyſdome is yͤ declaracyon of doctryne, but the ſynner abhorreth the worſhippe of God. My ſonne/ yf thou deſyre wyſdome/ kepe the commaundement, and God ſhal geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wyſdome and nurture/ he hath pleaſure in fayth and louynge mekeneſſe, and he ſhal fyl the treaſures therof. Be not obſtinate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde/ and come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an ypocryte in yͤ ſight of men, and take good hede what thou ſpeakeſt. Marke well theſe thynges/ leſt yͤ happen to fal and bringe thy ſoule to diſhonoure/ and ſo god diſcouer thy ſecretes, and caſt the downe in the myddeſt of the congregacyō: becauſe thou woldeſt not receaue the feare of God, and becauſe thy herte is ful of faynednes and diſceate.

¶ He exhorteth the ſeruauntes of god to righteouſnes, loue, vnderſtandynge, and pacience/ he exhorteth them that feareth God/ to beleue/ to hope/ and to loue becauſe God neuer forſaketh them/ that truſte in hym. A curſe vpon the [illegible], feare, and impacient of herte.

CAPI. II.

A MY ſonne/ * yf thou wylte come into the ſeruyce of God/ ſtande faſte in ryghteouſneſſe and feare/ and arme thy ſoule to temptacyon, ſette thyne herte, and be pacyent: bowe downe thyne eare, receaue the wordes of vnderſtandinge, and ſhrynke not awaye, when thou art entyſed. CAPI. III.

A THe chyldren of wyſdome are a congregacyon of the ryghteous/ and theyr exerciſe is obedience and loue. Heare me your father (O my deare chyldren) and do therafter, that ye may be ſafe.

* For yͤ Lorde wyll haue the father honoured of the children: and loke what a mother commaūdeth her chyldren to do/ he wyll haue it kept. Who ſo honoureth his father his ſynnes ſhall be forgeuen him: * & he that honoureth his mother is lyke one yͭ gathereth treaſure together. Who ſo honoureth hys father ſhall haue ioye of his owne chyldren: & when he maketh his prayer he ſhal be herde. He yͭ honoureth his father, ſhal haue a long lyfe: and he that is obedyent for the Lordes ſake/ hys mother ſhall haue ioye of hym.

B He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth hys father and mother/ and doth thē ſeruyce, as it were vnto the Lorde hym ſelfe. Honoure thy father in dede, in worde, and ī al paciēce that thou mayeſt haue Gods bleſſinge/ and hys bleſſynge ſhall abyde with yͤ at the laſt. * The bleſſing of the father buyldeth vp the houſes of the children/ but the mothers curſe roteth out the foundacyons. Reioyſe not whē thy father is reproued, for it is not honoure vnto the/ but a ſhame. For the worſhype of a mās father is his owne worſhip/ & where the father is without honoure, it is the diſhoneſty of the ſonne. My ſonne, make much of thy father in hys age/ & greue hym not as long as he lyueth. And if his vnderſtandynge fayle/ haue pacience with hym/ and deſpiſe him not in thy ſtrength. A When thou wylte do good, knowe to whom thou doeſt it, & ſo ſhalte thou be greately thanked for thy benefytes. * Do good vnto the ryghtuous and thou ſhalte fynde great rewarde though not of hym/ yet (no doute) the Lorde hym ſelfe ſhall rewarde the. He ſtandeth not in a good caſe that is alwaye occupyed in euyl, and geueth no almes: for the Hyeſt hateth the ſynners/ and hath mercy vpon them that ſhewe the workes of repentaunce. Geue thou vnto ſuche as feare God/ and receyue not a ſynner. As for the vngodly and ſynners, he ſhal recõpence vẽgeaũce vnto them, & kepe thẽ to the daye of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good/ and receyue not the ſinner: do well vnto hym that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodly. Let not the bred be geuẽ hym/ that he be not myghtyer then thy ſelf therin: For ſo ſhalt ÿ receyue twyſe as much euyll/ in al the good that thou doeſt vnto him: And why? ÿ Hygheſt hateth ſynners, and ſhall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodly.

In proſperite/ a frende ſhal not be knowen/ and in aduerſyte an enemy ſhal not be hyd. For when a man is in wealth/ it greueth his enemies: but in heuineſſe and trouble a man ſhall knowe hys frende. Truſte neuer thyne enemy, for lyke as an yron ruſteth, ſo doth his wickednes. And though he make much crouchyng & knelynge, yet kepe wel thy mynde, & B beware of hi. Set him not by ẏ, neither let hi ſyt at thy right hand: leſt he turne hi, get into thy place, take thy rowme & ſeke thy ſeate/ & ſo thou at ẏ laſt remẽbre my wordes, & be pricked at my ſayinges.

Who wyl haue pytie of the charmer, that is ſtynged of the ſerpẽt/ or of al ſuch as come nye the beaſtes? Euen ſo is it with hym that C kepeth cõpany with a wycked man, and lappeth him ſelf in his ſynnes. He ſhal ſhake his head, and clappe his hãdes ouer ẏ for very gladneſſe: & whyle he maketh many wordes, he ſhall dyſguyſe his countenaunce.

¶ The cõpanyes of the proude and of the ryche are to be eſchued. The loue of God. Lyke do cõpany with theyr lyke.

CAPI. XIII.

A WHo ſo toucheth pytche, ſhalbe fyled withall: and he that is famyliar with the proude, ſhall cloth him ſelfe with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon him/ that accompanyeth a more honorable man then hym ſelf. Therfore/ kepe no famyliarite with one that is rycher then thy ſelfe. Howe agre the ketell and the pot together? for yf the one be ſmytten agaynſte the other/ it ſhalbe broken. The ryche dealeth vnryghtuouſly, and threateneth withall: but ẏ poore beyng oppreſſed and wrongefully dealt withall/ ſuffreth ſcarneſſe, and geueth fayre wordes. If thou be for his profyte, he vſeth the: but yf thou haue nothynge/ he ſhall forſake the. As long as thou haſt any thyng of thyne owne/ he ſhall be a good felowe with the: yee he ſhall make the a bare man/ and not be ſory for the. If he haue nede of the/ he ſhall defraude the: and (with a preuy mocke) ſhall he put the in an hope, and geue the al good wordes/ and ſaye: what wanteſt thou? Thus ſhall he ſhame the in his meate/ vntil he haue ſupte the cleane vp twyſe or thryſe/ and at the laſte ſhall he laugh the ſcorne. Afterwarde/ when he ſeyth that thou haſt nothyng/ he ſhal forſake the, and ſhake his heade at the. (Submytte thy ſelfe vnto God/ and wayte vpon hys hande.)

B Beware/ that thou be not dyſceyued and brought downe in thy ſymplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wyſdome: leaſt when thou art brought lowe, ẏ be diſceyued thorowe fooliſhnes. If thou be called of a myghtye man/ abſent thy ſelfe, ſo ſhall he call the to hym the more oft. Preaſſe not thou vnto hym, ẏ thou be not ſhut out: but go not thou farre of/ leaſt he forget the. Withdrawe not thy ſelf from his ſpeach, but beleue not his many wordes. For with muche communicacion ſhall he tempte the/ & (with a preuye mocke) ſhall he queſtyon the of thy ſecretes. The vnmercyfull mynde of his ſhal marck thy wordes, he ſhal not ſpare to do the hurte, and to put ẏ in preſon. Beware, and take good hede to thy ſelf/ for ẏ walkeſt in parel of thy ouerthrowynge.

C Nowe when thou heareſt hys wordes/ make the as though thou wereſt i a dreame, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpon hym in thy nede. Euery beaſte loueth his lyke, eue ſo let euery man loue his neyghbour. Al fleſh wyl reſorte to theyr lyke, and euery man wyl kepe company with ſuch as he is hym ſelfe. But as the wolfe agreeth wt the lãbe, ſo doth ẏ vngodly with the ryghtuous. * What felowſhyp ſhuld an holy mã haue wt a dogge? Howe can the ryche & the pore agre together? The wylde Aſſe is the lyons pray in the wyldernes, euen ſo are poore men the meate of the ryche. Lyke as ẏ proude may not awaye wt lowlynes, euen ſo doth the rych abhorre the poore. If a riche mã fal, his frẽdes ſet hi vp agayne: but when ẏ poore falleth his acquayntaũce forſake him. If a rich mã fal into an errour, he hath many helpers: he ſpeaketh proude wordes, & yet men iuſtify hym. 2. Cor. vi. c

D But yf a poore man go wrong, he is punyſhed: yee though he ſpeake wyſely, yet can it haue no place. Whẽ the rych mã ſpeaketh/ euery body holdeth his tonge: & loke what he ſayeth, they prayſe it vnto the cloudes. But if the poore mã ſpeake, they ſaye: What felowe is this? & yf he do amyſſe, they ſhal deſtroy hi. Riches are good vnto him ẏ hath no ſynne in his cõſcience, & pouerte is a wycked thing in the mouth of the vngodly. The hert of man chaũgeth hys countenaũce, whether it be in good or euyl. A chereful coũtenaunce is a token of a good hert, for els it is an harde thyng to knowe the thought.

Bleſſed is the man, ỹ hathe not fallen w̃ the woꝛde of his mouth, & is not pꝛicked w̃ the conſcience of ſynne. Happye is he that hath no heuines in his minde/ & is not fallen from his hope. It becõmeth not a couetous man and a nygarde to be ryche: & what ſhulde a nygarde do w̃ golde? He ỹ with al his carefulnes heapeth together vnryghtuouſly, gathereth foꝛ other folckes, & another mã ſhall make good chere w̃ his goodes. He that is wycked vnto hiſ ſelfe/ how ſhuld he be good vnto other men? How can ſuch one haue any pleaſure of his goodes? There is nothynge woꝛſe, then whe one diſfauoureth hym ſelfe, & this is a reward of his wickednes. If he do any good/ he doth it not knowynge therof/ & agaynſt his wyl, & at the laſt he declareth his vnryghtuouſnes. A DELYTE not thou i the multitude of vngodly chyldrẽ/ and haue no pleaſure in thẽ / yf they feare not God. Truſt not ye to theyr lyfe/ and regarde not theyr labours: for one ſonne that feareth God/ is better / then a thouſande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye wythout chyldren/ then to leaue behynde him ſuche chyldren as are vngodly. For by one that hath vnderſtandyng may a whole cytie be vpholden/ but though the vngodly be many / yet ſhall it be waſted thorowe them. O how great is the louig kyndneſſe of the Lorde, & his mercyful goodneſſe vnto ſuche as turne vnto hym? For all thynges may not be in mā: and why? the ſone of mā is not immortall, and he hath pleaſure in the vanite of wyckednes. What is more cleare then the Sunne? yet ſhall it fayle. The waye of the vngodly is ſet with ſtones, but in theyr ende is hell, darckenes and paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde faſt yͤ vnderſtandyng therof, and the ende of the feare of God is wyſdome ⁊ vnderſtandyng. He that is not wiſe, wyll not be taught in good: but the vnwyſe man aboundeth in wyckedneſſe; and where bytterneſſe is, there is no vnderſtandynge. The knowledge of the wyſe ſhall flowe lyke water that rũneth ouer, ⁊ his councel is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The herte of a foole is lyke a broken veſſel, ye can kepe no wyſdome. When a man of vnderſtandynge heareth a wyſe worde / he ſhal cōmende it, and make much of it. But yf a voluptuous man heareth it, he ſhall haue no pleaſure therin / but caſt it behynde hys backe. The talckynge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by ẏ way: but to heare a wyſe man ſpeake / it is a pleaſure. Where a doute is in the congregacyon / it is aſked at the mouth of the wiſe, and they ſhal pondre hys wordes in theyr hertes. Lyke as is a houſe ẏ is deſtroied / euen ſo is wiſdome vnto a fole:

As for the knowledge of the vnwyſe / it is but darke wordes. Doctrine is vnto him that hath no vnderſtandynge / euen as fetters about hys fete, and lyke manicles vpō his right hand. ‡ A fole lifteth vp his voyce with laughter / but a wyſe man ſhall ſcarſe laugh ſecretly.

D Lernynge is vnto a wyſe man a Jewel of golde, & lyke as an armelet vpon hys ryght arme. A foolyſhe mans fote is ſone in hys neyghbours houſe / but one that hath experience, ſhalbe aſhamed at the perſone of the myghty. A fole wyll pepe in at the wyndow into the houſe, but he that is wel nourtured wyll ſtande without: A folyſhe man ſtādeth herkenynge at the dore, but he that is wyſe, wyll be aſhamed:

(The lyppes of the vnwyſe wylbe tellynge folyſhe thynges / but the wordes of ſuche as haue vnderſtādyng, ſhalbe weyed in the balaunce. The hert of foles is in theyr mouth, but the mouth of the wyſe is in theyr herte. When the vngodly curſeth the blaſphemer, he curſeth hys owne ſoule. * A preuy accuſer of other men ſhal defyle his owne ſoule, & be hated of euery mā:) but he that kepeth his tong & is diſcrete, ſhal come to honour.)

¶ The purgacyon of the ſlouthfull. Of the foolyſhe ſonne and daughter. We muſt haue dyſcrecyon howe & to whom we ought to preach, of ſorowynge vpon the deade. A fole is not to be much talked with all. Iniuryes & wronges do breake frendſhyp and amytye.

CAPI. XXII.

A A Slouthfull body is moulded of a ſtone of claie, and euery man wyl ſpeake to hys dyſprayſe. A ſlouthfull body is made of the donge of oxen and euery one that toucheth hym muſte waſhe hys handes agayne. A myſnurtured ſonne is the diſhonoure of the father. A foolyſhe daughter ſhall be lytle regarded. A wyſe daughter is an herytage vnto her huſband: but ſhe that commeth to diſhoneſty / bringeth her father in heuynes. A daughter that is paſt ſhame, diſhonoureth both her father & her huſbād, the vngodly ſhal regarde her, but they both ſhall deſpyſe her. The playeng of Muſicke is not mete where heuines is / euen ſo is the correcciō and doctrine of wyſdome euer vnpleaſaunt vnto fooles.

B Who ſo teacheth a foole, is euen as one ẏ glewth a potſharde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not / and as one that raiſeth a mā out of an heuy ſlepe. Who ſo telleth a foole of wyſdome, is euen as a mā, which ſpeaketh to one that is a ſlepe. When he hath tolde hys tale / he ſayeth: what is the matter? When one dyeth / lamentacyon is made for hym / becauſe the lyght fayleth hym: euen ſo let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderſtanding. Make but lytle wepyng becauſe of the deed, for he is come to reſt / but the lyfe of the fole is worſe thē the deeth. Seuen dayes do men mourne for him that is deed, but the lamentacion ouer the vnwyſe and vngodly ſhuld endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

C Talke not much with a foole, and go not with him that hath no vnderſtanding. Beware of him, leſt it turne ẏ to trauayle, and thou ſhalt not be defyled wᵗ hys ſynne. Departe frō him, and thou ſhalt finde reſt, and ſhalt not be drawen back into hys folyſhnes. What is heuier then leade? And what ſhuld a foole be called els but leade? Sand, ſalt, and a lūpe of yron is eaſier to beare then an vnwyſe, foliſh, and vngodly mā. Like as ẏ bande of wod bounde together in the foundacion of the houſe cānot be lowſed: euen ſo it is wᵗ the hert ẏ is ſtablyſhed in ẏ thought of councell. The thought of the wyſe ſhall neyther feare / nor be offended at any tyme. Prou. 27. a

D Lyke as a fayre playſtred wall in a wynter houſe, & an hye building, may not abyde the wynde and ſtorme: euen ſo is a foles hert afrayed in hys ymagynacion / he feareth at euery thynge, and cannot endure.) A wauerynge hart in the ymaginacyon of a fole wyl not euer ſtand in awe, but he ẏ abydeth in the cōmaundemētes of God, wyl alway feare.)

He that nyppeth a mans eye / bryngeth forth teares: & he ẏ prycketh ẏ hert, bringeth forth the meanyng and thought. Who ſo caſteth a ſtone at ẏ byrdes, frayeth thē awaye: and he that blaſphemeth his frēd, breaketh the frendſhyppe: though ẏ drewest a ſwerde at thy frende yet diſpayre not / for ẏ mayeſt come agayne to thy frende. If he ſpeake ſowerly, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together agayne: except it be that thou blaſpheme him, dyſdayne him, open his ſecretes & woūde him trayterouſly: for all ſuch thinges ſhall dryue awaye a frende.

C Be faythfull vnto thy neyghboure in hys pouerte, that thou mayeſt reioyce with him alſo in hys proſperyte. Abyde ſtedfaſt vnto him in the tyme of his trouble, that ẏ mayeſt be heyre wyth hym in hys heritage. Like as the vapoure and ſmoke goeth out at ẏ ouen before the fyre, euen ſo euyl wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudſheddyng. Be not aſhamed to defende thy frende: as for me / I wyll not hyde my face from hym/ though he ſhulde do me harme. Whoſoeuer heareth it, ſhal beware of him. * Who ſhall ſet a watche before my mouthe / and a ſure ſeale vpon my lyppes/ ẏ I fal not with them, and that my tonge deſtroy me not? Pſal.141.b

¶ A prayer agaynſt pryde, lechery, and glotony. Of othes, blaſphemy, and of wyſe communicacion. Of the thre kyndes of ſynnes. What euels procede of aduoutry. Of the feare of God.

CAPI. XXIII.

A O Lorde/ father and gouernoure of my lyfe/ leaue me not in theyr ymagynacyon and councell. Oh let me not fal in ſuch reproſe. Who wyll kepe my thought with the ſcourge/ and the doctryne of wyſdome in myne herte that he ſpare not myne ygnoraunce/ that I fall not wyth them, leſt mine ygnoraunces increaſe / that myne offences be not many in nombre/ and that my ſynnes exceade not: leſte I fall before myne enemyes, and ſo my aduerſary reioyce: O Lord thou father and God of my lyfe / leaue me not in theyr ymaginacyõ. O let me not haue a proude loke, but turne awaye all voluptuouſnes fro me. Take fro me the luſtes of the body/ let not the deſyres of vnclennes take holde vpõ me, and geue me not ouer into an vnſhamefaſt and obſtynate mynde.

B Heare me (O ye chyldren) I wyll geue you a doctrine, howe ye ſhall ordre your mouthe: who ſo kepeth it, ſhal not periſh thorow his lyppes, nor be hurt thorow wicked workes. As for the ſynner / he ſhall be taken in hys owne vanyte: he that is proude and curſed, ſhal fal therin. * Let not thy mouth be acuſtomed ẘ ſwearynge/ for in it there are many falles. Let not the naming of God be cõtynually ĩ thy mouth: (and medle not ẘ the names of ſaintes/ for ẏ ſhalt not be excuſed of thẽ) for lyke as a ſeruaũt which is oft puniſhed cannot be without ſome ſore/ euen ſo whatſoeuer he be ẏ ſweareth ⁊ nameth god ſhall not be clene pourged frõ ſinne. A man ẏ vſeth much ſwearing, ſhalbe filled ẘ wickednes/ ⁊ the plage ſhall neuer go from his houſe. If he begyle hys brother/ hys faute ſhalbe vpon hym: yf he knowledge not hys ſinne, he maketh a doble offence, ⁊ if he ſweare in vayne/ he ſhall not be founde ryghteous for his houſe ſhall be full of plages.

C * The wordes of ẏ ſwearer bryngeth death (God graunte that it be not founde in the houſe of Iacob.) But they that feare God/ eſchue all ſuch, ⁊ lye not weltryng in ſynne. * Uſe not thy mouth to vnhoneſte and fylthy talkynge, for in it is the worde of ſynne. Remembre thy father and thy mother/ whẽ thou art ſet among great men: leſt God forget the in theyr ſyght/ and leſt thou dotyng in thy cuſtome, ſuffre rebuke/ and wyſhe not to haue bene borne, ⁊ ſo curſe ẏ daye of thy natyuite. * The man ẏ is accuſtomed ẘ the wordes of blaſphemy, wyll neuer be refourmed all ẏ dayes of his lyfe. To ſynne twyſe is to much, but the thyrde bryngeth wrath ⁊ deſtruccion. An hote ſtomack cannot be quẽched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll it haue ſwalowed vp ſomthing: euen ſo an vnchaſt man hath no reſte in hys fleſhe, tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

All bred is ſwete to an whoremonger, he wyll not leaue of/ tyll he haue hys purpoſe. D A mã that breaketh wedlock and regardeth not hys ſoule but ſayeth: * Tuſh, who ſeyth me? I am compaſſed about with darcknes/ the walles couer me, no body ſeyth me: whõ nede I to feare? The hyeſt wyl not remembre my ſynnes. He vnderſtandeth not ẏ hys eyes ſe all thynges/ for all ſuch feare of men dryueth awaye the feare of God from hym: for he feareth onely the eies of men, and conſydereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are much clearer thẽ the Sũne, beholdĩg al the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens hertes in ſecrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made / and after they be brought to paſſe alſo he loketh vpon thẽ al. * The ſame man ſhalbe openly puniſhed in the ſtretes of ẏ cyte: ⁊ ſhalbe chaſed abrode lyke a yonge horſe foale: and when he thinketh leſt vpõ it, he ſhalbe taken. Thus ſhal he be put to ſhame of euery man, becauſe he wolde not vnderſtãde the feare of the Lord. And thus ſhall it go alſo with euery wyfe/ that leaueth her houſbande/ and getteth enheritaũce by a ſtraũge mariage. * Firſt, ſhe hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the Hyeſte: Secondly/ ſhe hathe forſaken her owne houſbande. Thyrdly, ſhe hath played the whore in aduoutry, and gotten her chyldren by another man. She ſhall be brought out of the congregacyon/ and her chyldren ſhall be loked vpon. Her chyldren ſhall not take rote: & as for frute, her braunches ſhal brynge forth none. A ſhamefull reporte ſhal ſhe leaue behynde her, and her diſhonour ſhal not be put out. And they that remayne, ſhal knowe/ that there is nothynge better/ then the feare of God: and that there is nothyng ſweter then to take hede vnto the commaūdementes of the Lord. A greate worſhyppe is it to folowe the Lorde, for longe lyfe ſhal be receyued of hym.

¶ A prayſe of wyſdome procedyng forth of the mouth of God. Of her workes & place where ſhe reſteth.

CAPI. XXIIII.

A Wyſdome ſhall prayſe her ſelfe/ and be honoured in God/ and reioyſe in the myddeſt of his people: In the cōgregaciōs of the Hyeſte ſhall ſhe open her mouthe/ and triumphe ī the beholdyng of his power: In the myddeſte of her people ſhall ſhe be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulneſſe. In the multitude of the choſen ſhe ſhalbe commended/ and amonge ſuch as be bleſſed ſhe ſhalbe prayſed, and ſhal ſay: I am come out of the mouth of the Hyeſt, firſt borne before al creatures. I cauſed the light that fayleth not to aryſe in the heauē, and couered al the earth as a cloude. My dwellyng is aboue in the heyth/ and my ſeate is in the piler of the cloude. I my ſelfe alone haue gone rounde aboute the compaſſe of heauen, and pearſed the grounde of the depe: I haue walcked in the floudes of the ſee/ and haue ſtande in all landes: my domynion is in euery people and in euery naciō/ and with my power haue I troden downe ẏ hertes of al, both hye & low.

B In all theſe thynges alſo I ſought reſt, and a dwellynge in ſome enherytaunce. So the creator of al thīges gaue me a cōmaundement: and he that made me, appointed me a tabernacle/ and ſayde vnto me: Let thy dwelling be ī Jacob, and thyne inheritaūce in Iſrael, and rote thy ſelfe amonge my choſen. * I was created frō the begynning and before the worlde, and ſhal not leaue of vnto the world to come. * In the holy habytaciō haue I ſerued before him/ and ſo was I ſtablyſhed in Siō. * In the holy cytie reſted I in lyke maner: and in Jeruſalem was my power. I toke rote in an honorable people/ euen in the porcyon of the Lorde and in hys herytage/ & kept me in the fulnes of ẏ ſayntes. I am ſet vp an hye lyke a Ceder vpon Libanus, and as a Ciperſ tre vpon ẏ mount Hermō. I am exalted like a palme tre in Cados, & as a roſe plante in Jericho: As a faire Oliue tre in the felde, & am exalted like as a plātayne tre vp ẏ water ſyde. I haue geuē a ſmel in the ſtretes, as ẏ Cinamon & Balme, ẏ hath ſo good a ſauour: yee a ſwete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrre of the beeſt.

C I haue made my dwellynges to ſmell as it were of roſin Galbanum, of Clowes, and Incence/ and as Lybanus when it is not hewen downe, & myne odoure is as the pure Balme. As the Terebinte haue I ſtretched out my braūches, and my braūches are the braunches of honour and louing fauour. ⊹ ‡ As the vyne haue I brought forth frute of a ſweter ſauoure/ & my floures are the frute of honour and ryches. I am the mother of bewtye/ of loue/ of feare/ of knowledge and of holy hope. ‡ In me is all grace of life and trueth. In me is al hope of lyfe and vertue. O come vnto me all ye that be deſyrous of me, and fyll your ſelues with my frutes: for my ſpryte is ſweter then hony/ and ſo is my inheritaunce more then the hony combe: the remembraūce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me/ ſhall haue the more honger: and they that drynke me, ſhall thyrſt ẏ more. Who ſo herkeneth vnto me/ ſhall not come to cōfuſyon: & they that worcke in me, ſhall not offende. They that make me to be knowen, ſhall haue euerlaſtynge lyfe. ⊢

I wyſdome haue caſt out floudes. I am as a great waterbroke oute of ẏ riuer. I am as the ryuer Dorix, and as a water condyte am I come out of the garden of pleaſure. I ſayde: I wyll water the garden of my yong plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrth. So my waterbroke became exceadynge greate, and my riuer approched vnto the ſee. For I make doctryne to be vnto all men as lyght as the fayre mornyng, and I ſhal make it to be euer the clearer. I wyll pearſe thorow al the lower partes of the earthe/ I wyll loke vpõ all ſuch as be a ſlepe, and lighten al thẽ that put theyr truſt in the Lorde. I ſhall yet poure out doctryne/ lyke as prophecye/ and leaue it vnto ſuch as ſeke after wyſdome/ ⁊ their generacions ſhall I neuer fayle, vnto Eccle.23.b. the holy euerlaſtyng worlde. * Beholde, howe that I haue not laboured for my ſelf onely/ but for all them that ſeke after the trueth.

¶ Of thre thynges which pleaſe god, and of thre which he hateth. Of nyne thynges that be not to be ſuſpecte, and of the tenth chefely of the malyce of a woman.

CAPI. XXV.

A Thre thynges there are / that my ſpyrte fauoureth/ whiche be alſo alowed before God and men. * The vnyte of brethren/ * the loue of neighbours, * and man and wyfe that agre well together. Gene.xiii.b Roma.xii.c Eccle.xl.d. Thre thynges there be whiche my ſoule hateth and I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of them: A poore man that is proude. A ryche man that Ge.xviii.b. is a lyar/ * and an olde body that doteth/ and is vnchaſte.

If thou haſte gathered nothynge in thy youth/ what wylte thou fynde then in thyne age. O howe pleaſaunt a thynge is it, when gray headed mẽ are dyſcrete, ⁊ whẽ yͤ elders cã geue good cõcel: O how comely a thĩg is wyſdome vnto aged men: yee vnderſtandyng and councel is a glorious thing. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience: ⁊ the feare of god is theyr worſhyppe.

B There be nyne thynges/ whiche I haue iudged in my hert to be happy, and yͤ tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man that whyle he lyueth/ hathe ioye of his chyldren/ ⁊ ſeyeth yͤ fal of his enemyes. Eccle.xiv.a [illegible] Jaco.iii.a. Well is hym that dwelleth with an houſwyfe of vnderſtanding, * and that hath not fallẽ with his tong, and that hath not bene fayne to ſerue ſuch as are vnmete for hym. Wel is him, that fyndeth a faythful frende: and well is him which talketh of wyſdome to an eare that heareth hĩ. O how great is he/ that fyndeth wyſdome and knowledge: Yet is he not aboue him, yͭ feareth the Lord. The feare of God hath ſet it ſelfe aboue all thynges. Bleſſed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Unto whõ ſhal he be lyckened, that kepeth it faſt? The feare of God is the begynnynge of his loue, and the begynning of fayth is to cleue faſte vnto it. The heuynes of the hert is all the punyſhemẽt, ⁊ the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue al. All puniſhmẽt ⁊ plage is nothynge in comparyſon of the plage of the hert, euen ſo all wyckednes is nothyng to the wyckednes of a woman.

C Whatſoeuer happeneth vnto a mã is nothynge in cõpariſon of it, that his euyl wyllers do vnto him: and al vengeaunce is nothynge to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked heade then the head of the ſerpent / ⁊ there is no wrath aboue yͤ wrath of a womã. * I wyll rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe houſe with a wycked wyfe. The wyckedneſſe of a womã chaũgeth her face, ſhe ſhall moſſel her countenaũce as it were a Beare, ⁊ as a ſack ſhal ſhe ſhew it amõge the neghbours. Her huſbande is brought to ſhame among his neghbours, and whẽ he heareth it, it maketh him to ſyghe. All wyckednes is but lytle to the wyckednes of a woman/ the porcion of the vngodly ſhall fall vpon her.

D Lyke as to clymme vp a ſandy waye is to the fete of the aged/ euen ſo is a wyfe full of wordes to a ſtyll quyete man. * Loke not to narowly vpõ the bewtye of a womã, leſte thou be prouoked i deſire towarde her. The wrath of a woman is diſhonoure and great confuſiõ. If a woman get the maſtrey, then is ſhe contrary to her huſbande. A wycked wyfe maketh a ſory herte/ an heuy countenaunce and a deed wõde. * (Weake hãdes and feble knees is a womã that her huſbãd is not the better for.) Of the woman came the begynnynge of ſynne/ ⁊ thorowe her we all are deed. Geue thy water no paſſage/ no not a lytle, nether geue a wycked womã her wyll. If ſhe walcke not after thy hande, ſhe ſhall confounde the in the ſyeght of thy enemies. Cut her of then from thy fleſh, that ſhe do not alwaye abuſe the.

¶ The prayſe of a good womã. Of the feare of thre thynges and of the fourth. Of the Jelouſe and dronken womã. Of two thynges that cauſe ſorow, and of the thyrde which moueth wrath.

CAPI. XXVI.

A Happye is the man that hathe a vertuous wyfe, for the nombre of his yeares ſhalbe dubble. An honeſt woman maketh her huſbande a ioyfull man / and ſhe ſhall fyll yͤ yeares of his lyfe in peace. A vertuous womã is a noble gyft, whiche ſhalbe geuen for a good porcion vnto ſuch as feare God: Whether a man be rych or poore, he may haue euer a mery hert, and a chearful countenaunce. There be thre thinges that my hert feareth, and my face is afrayed of yͤ fourth. Treaſon in a cytie/ a ſeditious people/ and noiſome tonges, all theſe are heuyer thẽ the death. But when one is gelous ouer hys wyfe / it bryngeth payne and ſorowe vnto the herte: and a woman that telleth out all thynges / is a ſcourge of the tonge. When one hathe an euell wyfe / it is euen as when an vnlyke payre of oxen muſte drawe together, * he that getteth her / he getteth a ſcorpyon. A droncken woman is a great plage, for ſhe cannot couer her owne ſhame.

B The whoredome of a woman maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eye leddes. * If thy daughter be not ſhamefaſt, holde her ſtraytly, leſt ſhe abuſe her ſelfe thorowe ouermoche lybertie. Beware of all the diſhoneſtye of her eyes, and maruell not yf ſhe do agaynſte the. Lyke as one yt goeth by the waye and is thirſtie, ſo ſhall ſhe open her mouth and drynke of euery next water that ſhe maye get. By euery hedge ſhal ſhe ſet her downe / and open her quyuer againſt euery arowe. A louynge wyfe reioyſeth her huſbande, and fedeth his bones with her wiſdome. A woman of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God / and to all well nurtured myndes maye nothynge be compared.

C An honeſt and manerly woman is a gyfte aboue other gyftes / and there is no weyght to be compared / vnto a mynde that can rule it ſelfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it aryſeth is an ornament in the hye heuen of the lorde ſo is a vertuous wyfe the bewtye of all her houſe. Lyke as the clere lyght is vpon ye holy candelſticke, ſo is the bewte of ye face vpō an honeſt body. * Lyke as the golden pilers are vpon the ſockettes of ſyluer / ſo are the fayre legges vnto a woman that hath a conſtant mynde. Perpetual are the foundaciōs that be layde vpon a whole ſtonye rocke / ſo are the commaundementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman.

D There be two thinges that greue my hert and in the thyrde is a diſpleaſure come vpō me. When an expert man of warre ſuffereth ſcarcenes and pouerte. When men of vnderſtandynge and wyſdome are not ſett by. And when one departeth from ryghteouſnes vnto ſynne. Who ſo doth ſuche / the Lorde hathe prepared him vnto the ſwerde. There be two maner of thynges, whiche me thynke to be herde ⁊ perylous. A marchaūt can not lyghtly kepe hym from wronge, nether a tauerner him ſelfe from ſynne.

¶ Of the pore that wolde be ryche. The probacyon of the man that feareth God. The vnconſtauntneſſe of a foole. The ſecretes of frendes are not to be vttered. The wycked practiſeth euell, whiche returneth vpon hym ſelfe.

CAPI. XXVII.

BEcauſe of pouerte haue many one offended: and he that ſeketh to be ryche / turneth his eyes aſyde. A Lyke as a nayle in the wall ſtycketh faſt betwyxte two ſtones, euen ſo doth ſynne ſticke betwyxte the byer and the ſeller. If he holde hym not dilygently in the feare of the Lorde, his houſe ſhall ſoone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one ſyfteth, the fylthynes remayneth in the ſyue: So, remayneth there ſome vncleane thynge in the thought of man: B The ouen proueth the potters veſſell, * ſo dothe temptacyō of trouble trye ryghteous men * The tre of the felde is knowen by hys frute ſo is the thought of mans herte knowne by hys wordes. Prayſe no man excepte thou haue herde him, for a man is knowen by his wordes. If thou foloweſt ryghteouſnes, thou ſhalt get her, and put her vpō the as a fayre garmente. And thou ſhalt dwel with her, ⁊ ſhe ſhal defende the for euer, and in the daye of knowledge thou ſhalt finde ſtedfaſtneſſe. The byrdes reſorte vnto theyr lyke, ſo doth the truth turne vnto them that be occupyed withall. The lyon wayteth the praye: ſo dothe ſynners lucke vpon the workers of wyckednes. The talkynge of hym that feareth God, is nothynge but wyſdome: as for a foole, he chaūgeth as the Moone. If thou be amonge the vndiſcrete, kepe thy worde to a conuenient tyme / but amonge ſuche as be wyſe / ſpeake on hardely. C The talkynge of fooles is abhominacion / and theyr ſporte is volupteouſneſſe and myſnurtoure. * Much ſwearynge maketh the hearte to ſtande vpr and to ſtriue with ſuche / ſtoppeth the eares.

Prouer. iii.a. 1 Pet. i.b. Math. 7.d.

Eccle. 22.b.

The ſtryfe of the prowde is bloudeſhedynge / and theyr blaſphemynge is heuy to heare. * Who ſo diſcouereth ſecretes, leſeth his credence, and fyndeth no frende after his wyl. Loue thy frende, and bynde thy ſelfe in faythfulnes with hym: but yf thou bewrayeſt his ſecretes, thou ſhalt not get hym agayne For lyke as the man is that deſtroyeth hys enemye, ſo is he alſo that dealeth falſly in the frendſhyp of his neyghboure.

Eccle. 19.b. and 22.d.

D Lyke as one that letteth a byrde go out of his hande, cannot take her agayne: Euen ſo thou / yf thou geue ouer thy frende, thou canſt not get him againe: Yee thou canſt not come by him, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roo eſcaped out of the ſnare / for his ſoule is wounded. He that geueth an offringe of vnryghtuous good, his offeringe is refuſed: and the ſcornefull dealynges of the vnryghtuous pleaſe not God (The Lorde is theyrs onely / ỹ paciently abyde hym in the waye of the trueth & of ryghtuouſnes. The hygheſt doth not alowe the gyftes of the wycked.) And * God hath no delyte in ỹ offeringes of the vngodly, nether may ſynne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacyons. Who ſo bryngeth an offerynge out of the goodes of the poore / doth euen as one that kylleth the ſõne before the fathers eyes.

D The bred of the nedefull is the lyfe of the poore: he ỹ defraudeth hym therof, is a man of bloude. Who ſo robbeth hys neyghboure of his lyuyng, doth as a great ſinne as though he ſlewe him to death. * He ỹ defraudeth the laborer of his hyre, is a bloud ſhedder. When one buildeth and another breaketh downe / what profyte haue they then but laboure?

whẽ one prayeth ⁊ another curſeth, whoſe voyce wyl yͤ Lorde heare? ⁊ He yͤ waſheth hi ſelfe becauſe of a deed body, ⁊ then toucheth yͤ deed agayne, what doth his waſhyng? So is it with a mã yͭ faſteth for his ſynnes, ⁊ doth thẽ agayne: who wyll heare his prayer? Or what doth his faſtyng helpe him?

¶ It is well done to praye, and to do ſacryfice. The prayer of the fatherles, and of the wyddowe: and him that humbleth hym ſelfe.

CAPI. XXXV.

A WHo ſo kepeth the lawe, * bryngeth offringes ynough. He that holdeth faſt the commaundemente, offreth the ryght health offeringe. He that is thankefull and recompenſeth, offreth fyne floure. * who ſo is mercyfull and geueth almes / that is the ryght thankeoffrynge. God hath pleaſure / when one departeth from ſynne, and to forſake vnryghtuouſnes reconcyleth vs wͭ him. * Thou ſhalt not appeare emptie before the Lorde / for all ſuche is done becauſe of the commaundement. * The offringe of the ryghtuous maketh the aulter fat, ⁊ a ſwete ſmell is it before the hyeſt. The offerynge of the ryghtuous is acceptable vnto God, and ſhal neuer be forgotten. Gyue God his honoure with a chereful herte, and kepe not backe the fyrſtlynges of thy handes. * In all thy gyftes ſhewe a mercyful countenaunce, and halowe thy tythes vnto God with gladneſſe. Gyue vnto God, accordynge as he hath enryched and proſpered the: * and loke what thin hãde is able, geue with a chereful eye: for the Lord recompenſeth, and geueth the ſeuen tymes as muche agayne.

B Geue no vnryghtuous gyftes, for ſuche wyll he nat receyue. Beware of wrongeous offringes, for the Lord is a ryghtuous iudge: and regardeth no mannes perſonne: He accepteth not the perſonne of the poore, but he heareth the prayer of the oppreſſed. * He deſpyſeth not the deſyre of the fatherleſſe / nor the wyddowe, when ſhe poureth out her prayer before hym. Doth not God ſe the teares, that renne downe the chekes of the wyddowe? Or heareth he not the cõplaynte ouer ſuche as make her to wepe? For from her chekes do the teares go vp vnto heauẽ / and the Lorde which heareth thẽ / doth accepte them. Who ſo ſerueth God after his pleaſure, ſhalbe accepted, and hys prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. * The prayer of him yͭ humbleth C him ſelfe, goeth thorow the cloudes, tyll ſhe come nye: She will not be comforted, nor go her waye, tyll the hyeſt God haue reſpecte vnto her, geue true ſentence, and perfourme the iudgement. And the Lorde wyll not be ſlack in cõmynge: nor tary long: tyll he haue ſmytten in ſonder the backes of the vnmercyfull, and auenged him ſelfe of the Heathẽ tyl he haue taken awaye the multytude of the cruell, and broken the ceptre of the vnryghtuous: tyll he geue euery man after his workes / and rewarde thẽ after their doynges: tyl he haue delyuered his people, maynteyned their cauſe, ⁊ reioyſed thẽ i his mercy. O how fayre a thyng is mercy in the time of anguiſh ⁊ trouble? It is lyke a cloude of rayne that cõmeth in the tyme of a drouth.

¶ A prayer to God in the perſon of all faythfull men: with the prayſe of a good woman.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A HAue mercy vpon vs / O Lorde / thou God of all thynges. Haue reſpecte vnto vs / ſhewe vs the light of thy mercyes, and ſende thy feare amonge the Heathen ⁊ ſtraũgers, which ſeke not after thee: that they may knowe, how that there is no God but thou / and that they maye ſhewe thy wonderous workes. Lyfte vp thyne hande ouer the outlandyſhe Heathen / that they maye learne to knowe thy myght and power: Lyke as thou arte halowed in vs before them, ſo brynge to paſſe / that thou mayeſt be magnyfyed alſo in them before vs: that they may know the, like as we knowe the. For there is none other God, but onely thou O Lorde. Renue the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous workes. Shew thyne hande / and thy ryght arme gloryouſly. Rayſe vp thy indignacyon, ⁊ poure out thy wrath. Take awaye the aduerſary / and ſmyte the enemy. Make the tyme ſhort / remembre thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes may be prayſed. Let the wrath of the fyre conſume thẽ that lyue ſo careleſſe: and let them peryſhe that do thy people hurt. Smyte in ſunder the heade of the Prynces / that be oure enemyes / and ſay: there is none other but we.

B Gather all the trybes of Iacob together agayne, yͭ they may knowe / howe that there is none other God but onely thou, that they maye ſhewe thy wonderous workes / and be thou thy peoples herytage, lyke as from the begynnynge. O Lord haue mercy vpon the people that hath thy name, and vpõ Iſrael / * whõ yͭ haſt lykened to a fyrſt borne ſonne. O be mercyfull vnto Ieruſalem the cytie of thy Sanctuary, * the cytie of thy reſt. Fyll Syon with thy vnſpeakable vertues, ⁊ thy people with thy glorye. Geue wytnes vnto thy creature, whom thou madeſt from the begynnynge, ⁊ rayſe vp the prophetes that haue bene ſhewed in thy name. Rewarde thẽ that wayte for the/that thy Prophetes may be founde faythfull. O Lorde heare the prayer of thy ſeruauntes, accordyng to the bleſſing of Aaron ouer thy people (⁊ gyde thou vs in the way of ryghteouſnes)* that all they whiche dwel vpon the earthe, maye knowe, that thou art the Lorde the eternall God, whiche is from euerlaſtyng. Nume. 6. d

C The bely deuoureth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Lyke as the tong taſteth veneſon,* ſo doth an herte of vnderſtandyng marcke falſe wordes. A frowarde hert geueth heuines, but a man of experience lifteth hym vp agayne. The woman receyueth euery man / yet is one daughter better then another. A fayre wyfe reioyſeth her huſband/⁊ a man loueth nothyng better. If ſhe be louynge ⁊ vertuous wyth all, then is not her huſbande lyke other men. He that hathe gotten a vertuous woman / hath a goodly poſſeſſion: ſhe is vnto him an helpe/ and pyller wherupon he reſteth. Where no hedge is, there yͤ goodes are ſpoyled: ⁊ where no huſwyfe is/there the frendles mourneth. Lyke as there is no credẽce geuẽ to a robber / that goeth from one cytye to another: So is not the man beleued/that hath no neſt, and muſt turne in/where he may abyde in the nyght. Job.12.b

¶ Howe a man ſhulde knowe frendes and councellers, and ſearche the company of a holy man.

CAPI. XXXVII.

A EUery frende ſayeth: I wyll be frendely vnto him alſo. But there is ſome frend, whiche is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heuynes vnto death, when a companyon and frende is turned to an enemye? O moſt wycked preſumpcyon: From whenſe art thou ſpronge vp, to couer yͤ earth with falſhede ⁊ diſceate?* There is ſome cõpanyon whiche in proſperite reioyſeth wyth his frende: but in the tyme of trouble, he taketh parte againſt hym. Eccle. vi. b There is ſome companyon that mourneth with his frende for the bely ſake: but when trouble commeth, he taketh holde of the ſhylde. Forget not thy frende in thy mynde/and thynke vpon hym in thy ryches. Seke no councell at thy kynſmen/and hyde thy councel frõ ſuch as beare the no good wyl.* Eccl. viii. c and ix. c Euery cõunceler bryngeth forth his cõũcell. Neuertheles, there is ſome that counceleth/but for his owne profite: Beware of the counceller, and be aduyſed afore whereto thou wylte vſe him, for he wyll councel for him ſelfe. Leſt he caſt the lot vpõ the, and ſay vnto the, Thy way ⁊ purpoſe is good, ⁊ afterwarde he ſtãde agaynſt the, and loke what ſhall become of the.

B Aſke no councel at him/that ſuſpecteth yͤ for an enemy, and hyde thy councel frõ ſuche as hate the. Aſke no councell at a woman, cõcernyng the thinges that ſhe longeth for: nor at a fearfull and faynt herted bodye, in matters of warre: or at a marchaunt, howe deare he wyll cheape thy wares towarde his: or at a byer, of ſellynge: Or at an enuyous man, of thankes geuyng: or at the vnmercyfull/of louyng kyndnes, (or at an vnhoneſt man, of honeſtye.) Or at the ſlouthfull/of workynge Or at an hyrelynge whiche hath no houſe, or profyte or wealth: (An ydle bodye wolde not gladly heare ſpeake of much laboure.) Take no ſuche folkes to councel, but be dilygent to ſeke councel at a vertuous man that feareth God/ſuche one as thou knoweſt to be keper of the cõmaundementes, which hath a mind after thyne owne mynde / and is ſory for the when thou ſtumbleſt.

C And holde thy councel faſt in thyne hert: for there is no man more faythfull to kepe it: then thou thy ſelfe. For a mans mynde is ſumtyme more diſpoſed to tell oute / then ſeuen watchemen that ſit aboue in an hye place lokyng aboute them. And aboue all this praye yͤ hyeſt, that he wyll leade thy waye in faythfulnes and truthe. Before all thy workes aſke councel fyrſt: and or euer thou doeſt any thyng/be well aduiſed. There be foure thynges that declare a chaunged herte, wherout there ſpryngeth euyl and good, death ⁊ lyfe/ and a maſterfull tonge that bableth muche. Some man is apte and well inſtructe in many thynges, and yet very vnprofitable vnto hym ſelfe. Some man there is, that can geue wyſe and prudent councell/and yet is he hated/and continueth a begger: for that grace is not geuẽ him of God/to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wyſdome, yet is he wyſe vnto him ſelfe, ⁊ the frute of vnderſtandyng is commendable in his mouth.

D A wyſe man maketh his people wyſe, ⁊ yͤ frutes of his wyſdome fayle not. A wyſe mã ſhall be plenteouſly bleſſed of God, ⁊ al they that ſe hym, ſhall ſpeake good of hym. The lyfe of a man ſtandeth in the nombre of the dayes/but yͤ dayes of Iſrael are innumerable. A wyſe man ſhall optayne faythfulnes and credence among hys people/and his name ſhal be perpetuall. My ſonne/proue thy ſoule in thy lyfe: ⁊ yf thou ſe any euyll thinge, geue it not vnto her.* For all thynges are not profytable for al men, nether hath euery ſoule pleaſure in euery thynge. Be not gredye in euery eatyng, ⁊ be not to haſtye vpon all meates.*

For exceſſe of meates bryngeth ſyckenes, and glotony cōmeth at the laſt to an vnmeaſurable heate. Thorow ſurfet haue many one periſhed: but he that dyeteth him ſelfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

¶ A phyſicion in ſyckenes ought we to pray, and to ſende a Phyſycion whiche healeth by prayer. The bewepynge of the dead. Sadnes. Wyſdome. Artificers or craftesmen.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

A HOnour the Phiſicion, honoure him becauſe of neceſſite. God hath created hī (for of the hyeſt commeth medycine) and he ſhall receyue gyftes of the kynge. The wyſdome of the Phiſycion bryngeth him to great worſhype, and in the ſyght of the greate men of thys worlde/ he ſhal be honorably taken.

The Lorde hathe created medycyne of the earthe / and he that is wyſe / wyll not abhorre it. * Was not the bytter water made ſwete with a tre ? that men myght learne to knowe the vertue therof. The Lorde hath geuen men wyſdome / and vnderſtandyng, that he might be honoured in his wonderous workes. With ſuche doth he heale men/ ⁊ taketh awaye theyr paynes, Of ſuche doth the Apotecarye make a confeccyon/ yet can no man perfourme all his workes. For of the Lorde cōmeth proſperous welth ouer all the earth.

B My ſonne, deſpyſe not this in thy ſyckenes, but * praye vnto the Lorde / ⁊ he ſhall make the whole. Leaue of from ſynne/ and order thy handes a ryght / clenſe thyne hert frō all wyckednes. Geue a ſwete ſauoured offering and the fyne floure for a token of remembraunce, make the offerynge fat/ as one that geueth the fyrſte fruytes, and geue rowme to the Phiſycion. For the Lorde hath created hym let hym not go from the / for thou haſte nede of hym. The houre maye come, that the ſycke maye be helped thorowe the, when they praye vnto the Lorde, that he maye recouer/ and get helth to lyue longer. He that ſinneth before hys maker ſhall fall into the handes of the Phiſycion.

My ſonne, * bryng forth thy teares ouer the deade: and begyn to mourne/ as yf thou haddeſt ſuffered great harme thy ſelfe: ⁊ then couer his body after a conuenyent maner/ ⁊ deſpyſe not his buryall. Enforce thy ſelfe to wepe / ⁊ prouoke thy ſelfe to mourne, * and make lamentacyon expedientlye/ and that a daye or two/ leeſt thou be euel ſpoken of: and then comforte thy ſelfe becauſe of the heuynes. * For of heuynes cōmeth death/ the heuynes of the hert breaketh ſtrength. Heuynes and pouerte greueth the herte in temptacyon and offence. Take no heuyneſs to herte/ dryue it awaye/ and remember the laſt thynges. Forget it not/ for there is no turning agayne. Thou ſhalte do hym no good, but hurt thy ſelfe. Remember his iudgment, thine alſo ſhal be lyke wyſe: vnto me yeſter daye, vnto the to daye. * Let the remembraunce of yͤ deed ceaſſe in hys reſt/ and comforte thy ſelfe agayne ouer hym/ ſeing his ſpiryte is departed from hym. The wyſdome of the ſcrybe is at conuenyent tyme of reſt: ⁊ he that ceaſſeth from exercyſe and laboure/ ſhall be wyſe. C He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleſure in proddyng/ and dryuyng the oxen, and goeth aboute with ſuche workes / he can ſpeake of oxen: he ſetteth his hert to make forowes/ ⁊ is dilygent to geue the kyne foder. So is euery carpenter alſo ⁊ workmaſter, that laboureth ſtyl nyght and daye: he carueth, graueth ⁊ cutteth out, and his deſyre is in ſondry connynge thynges, his hert ymagineth, howe he maye cūnyngly caſt an ymage, his dilygence alſo and watchyng perfourmeth the worke. The yronſmyth in lyke maner bydeth by his ſtythye, and doth his dilygence to labour the yron. The vapoure of the fyre brenneth his fleſhe, and he muſt fyght with the heat of the fornace. The noyſe of the hammer ſoundeth euer in his eares/ and his eyes loke ſtyll vpō the thynge that he maketh. He hath ſet hys mynde therupon / that he wyll make out his worke, and therfore he watcheth / howe he maye ſet it out, and bryngeth it to an ende.

D So doth the potter ſyt by his worke, he turneth the whele aboute with his fete, he is dilygent and careful in all doynges, and his laboure and worke is without nomber. He faſſhoneth the claye with his arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. His herte ymagyneth howe he maye make it pleaſaunte/ and his dilygence is to clenſe the ouen. All theſe hope in theyr handes / and euery one thynketh to be cunnynge in his worke. Without theſe maye not the cytees be maynteyned/ inhabited nor occupied, and come not hye in the congregacyon: in the councell of the people/ they be not requyred, they vnderſtande not the couenaunte of the lawe: they cannot declare equyte and iudgemēt, they cānot fynd out the darke ſentences, but thorowe them ſhall the creature of the worlde be maynteyned, theyr prayer concerneth only the worke and labour of connynge.

¶ A wyſe man. The workes of God. Unto the good/ good thynges do profet: but vnto the euell, euen good thynges are euell.

CAPI. XXXIX.

A HE that applyeth hys mynde to vnderſtande the law of God, doth dylygently ſeke out the wyſdome of them of the old tyme, and exerciſeth hym ſelfe in the Prophetes. He kepeth the ſayinges of famous men, and preaſſeth to the to vnderſtandynge of darcke ſentences of wyſdome. He ſeketh out yͤ myſtery of ſecrete ſayinges/ & exerciſeth hym ſelf therin contynually. He doth ſeruyce amõge great men, & appeareth before the prynce: He goeth into a ſtraunge countre, & trauayleth thorowe it: loke what good or euyll is among men, he proueth it & ſeketh it out. He purpoſeth in his herte, to reioyſe early vnto the Lord yͭ made hym, & to pray before the Hyeſt God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & prayeth for hys ſynnes. Whẽ the great Lorde wyll, he ſhalbe fylled with yͤ ſprete of vnderſtandyng/ that he may then poure out wyſe ſentences, & geue thanckes vnto the Lorde in hys prayer.

B He ſhall ordre his deuice, and lede his knowledge a ryght, and geue hym vnderſtanding Eccle.44.b of ſecrete thynges. He ſhall ſhewe forth the ſcience of his lernynge/ and reioyſe in the couenaunt of the lawe of the Lord. The whole congregacyon ſhall commende his wyſdome/ and it ſhall neuer be put out. The remẽbraunce of hym ſhal neuer be forgotten/ and his name ſhall contynue from one generaciõ to another. Hys wyſdome ſhalbe ſpoken of/ amonge the people, and the whole congregacyõ ſhal openly declare his prayſe. Whyle he lyueth, he hath a greater name then a thouſãde beſyde: & after his death, the ſame name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyll I ſpeake of mo men of vnderſtandynge/ for I am ful as the Moone.

C Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyldren) brynge forth frute/ as the roſe yͭ is planted by the brokes of the felde/ and geue ye a ſwete ſmell as Libanus. Floryſh as the roſe garden/ ſynge a ſonge of prayſe. O geue thãkes vnto God ouer all his worckes. Geue glory and honoure vnto the Lorde, ſhew his prayſe with youre lyppes. Yee euen with the ſonge of your lyppes/ with harpes & playing and in geuynge thanckes vnto hym/ ſaye Gene.1.d after this maner. * All the worckes of the Lorde are exceadynge good, and all his cõmaundementes are mete and conuenient in due ſeaſon.

A mã nede not to ſaye: what is that? what D is that? for at tyme conuenient they ſhall all be ſought. At his commaundemẽt the water was as a wal, and at the word of his mouth Gene.vii.b the water ſtode ſtyll. * In his commaundement is euery thynge acceptable and reconcyled, and his health can not be mynyſhed. The worckes of al fleſh are before hym, and there is nothyng hyd from his eies. He ſeyth from euerlaſtyng to euerlaſtynge/ and there is nothynge to wonderfull or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to ſaye then/ what is thys/ or that? For he hathe made all thynges to do good vnto man. His bleſſynge ſhall renne ouer as the ſtreame, and moyſture the earth lyke a floud of water. Lyke as he maketh the water for drouth/ ſo ſhal his wrath fal vpon the Heathen.

* His wayes are playne and ryght vnto the E iuſt/ but the vngodly ſtomble at them. For the good/ are good thinges created from the begynnyng, & euyl thynges for the vngodly. * Al thynges neceſſary for yͤ lyfe of man are created frõ the begynnyng: water/ fyre/ yron & ſalt, meel, wheat, and hony mylke & wyne, oyle & clothyng. * All theſe thynges are 1.Tim.4 created for the beſt to the faythful: But to the vngodly ſhal al theſe thinges be turned to the hurt & harme. There be ſpretes yͭ are created for vengeaunce, & in their rigorouſnes haue they faſtened theyr tormẽtes. * In the tyme of the ende they ſhal poure out their ſtrength & pacifie the wrath of hĩ that made thẽ. * Fire hayle/ hõgre & deth: al theſe thinges are created for vengeaunce.

The teeth of wylde noyſome beaſtes, the F ſcorpions, ſerpẽtes, and the ſwerde are created alſo for vengeaũce, to the deſtruccyon of the vngodly. They ſhal be glad to do his cõmaundementes: and when nede is, they ſhal be ready vpon earthe: and when theyr houre is come, they ſhall not ouerpaſſe the cõmaundement of the Lorde.

Therfore haue I taken a good corage vnto me from the begynnynge/ and thought to put theſe thinges in wrytinge/ & to leaue the behynde me. * All the workes of the Lord are Gene.1 good/ & he geueth euery one in due ſeaſon, & whan nede is/ ſo that a man nede not to ſay: this is worſe then that. For in due ſeaſõ they are al pleaſaunt & good: And therfore prayſe the Lord with whole hert & mouth, and geue thankes vnto his name.

¶ Many myſteryes lyghte in a manned lyfe. All thynges paſſe awaye, but a fyrme and ſtablyſhe fayth remayneth. Of the bleſſynges of the ryghtuous, and prerogatyue of the feare of God.

CAPI. XL.

A GREAT trauayle is created for all A men/ and an heuy yocke vpon the chyldren of Adam/ frome the daye that they go out of theyr mothers wombe/ tyll they be buryed in (the earth) ẏ mother of al thynges: namely, theyꝛ thoughtes ⁊ ymaginacyons / feare of the hert, councell, meditacions / longyng ⁊ deſyꝛe, the day of death: from the hieſt that ſytteth vpon the gloꝛious ſeate / vnto ẏ loweſt and moſte ſymple vpon the earth: frõ hym that is goꝛgyouſly arayed and weareth a crowne / vntyl him that is / but homely and ſymply clothed. There is nothing but wꝛath zele / fearfulnes / vnquyetneſſe / and feare of death / rygoꝛous, angre and ſtrife. And in the nyght when one ſhulde reſte and ſlepe vpon his bedde / the ſlepe chaungeth hys vnderſtãdynge and knowledge. A lytle oꝛ nothynge is hys reſt, in the ſlepe as well as in the daye of laboure.

B He feareth and is diſquieted in the viſion of his hert, as one that renneth out of a battayle: and in the tyme of health he awaketh and marueleth that ẏ feare was nothynge: Suche thynges happen vnto all fleſhe both man and beaſt: but ſeuen folde to the vngodly. Moꝛeouer death, bloudſheddyng, ſtryfe ⁊ ſwearde, oppꝛeſſion, hongre, deſtruccion and punyſhment: Eccle.39.f * theſe thynges are all created agaynſt the vngodly, ⁊ foꝛ their ſakes came ẏ floude alſo. * All ẏ is of ẏ earth, ſhall turne to earth agayne: ⁊ all waters ebbe agayne in to the ſee. All bꝛybes ⁊ vnryghtuouſnes ſhal be put away / but faythfulnes ⁊ trueth ſhall endure foꝛ euer. The ſubſtaũce ⁊ goodes of ẏ vngodly ſhalbe dꝛyed vp and ſyncke awaye as a water floude, ⁊ they ſhall make a ſounde lyke a great thonder in the rayne.

C Lyke as the rightuous reioyſeth when he openeth his hande / ſo ſhal the trãſgreſſours be faynt / when theyꝛ goodes vanyſh and cõſume awaye. Eccle.41.b * The chyldꝛen of the vngodly ſhall not optayne many bꝛaunches: and the vncleane rotes vpõ the hye rockes ſhalbe roted out befoꝛe the graſſe by the water ſyde and vpon the ryuer banckes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increaſe and bleſſyng of God / is lyke a paradyſe and garde of pleaſure: ſuch mercy alſo and kyndnes endureth foꝛ euer. 1.Tim.6.b Philip.4.b * To laboure ⁊ to be cõtent with that a man hath, is a ſwete pleaſaunt lyfe: and that is to fynde a treaſure aboue all treaſures. To beget chyldꝛen and to repayre the citie, maketh a perpetual name but an honeſte woman is moꝛe woꝛthe then they bothe. Wyne and mynſtrelſye reioyſe the herte / but the loue of wyſdome is aboue them bothe.

D Pypynge and harpynge make a ſwete noyſe, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde thẽ both. Thyne eye deſyꝛeth fauoure and bewtye / but a grene ſede tyme / rather then they both. A frende and companyon come together at opoꝛtunyte, but aboue them both is a wyfe that agreeth with her huſbande. One bꝛother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes ſhall delyuer moꝛe then they both. Golde and ſyluer faſten the fete / but a good councell is moꝛe pleaſaunte then they both. Tempoꝛall ſubſtaunce and ſtrength lyft vp the mynde: but the feare of the Loꝛde moꝛe then they both. The feare of the Loꝛd wanteth nothynge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Loꝛde is a pleaſaunte garden of bleſſynge, and nothynge ſo beautyful as it is. My ſonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, foꝛ better it were to dye then to beg. Who ſo loketh to another mãs table, taketh no thought foꝛ his owne lyuyng how to vphold his life, foꝛ he fedeth him ſelf with other mens meate But a wyſe and wel nurtoured man wyl beware therof. Begging is ſwete in the mouth of the vnſhamefaſt, but in his bely there burneth a fyꝛe.

¶ Of the remembꝛaunce of deeth. Deeth is not to be feared. A curſſe vpon them that foꝛſake the law of God. Good name and fame. An exhoꝛtacyon to geue hede vnto wyſdome. Of what thynges a man ought to be aſhamed.

CAPI. XLI.

O Deathe / howe bytter is the remembꝛaũce of the / to a man that ſeketh reſt A and comfoꝛte in hys ſubſtaunce and ryches / vnto the man ẏ hath nothing to vexe him, ⁊ that hath pꝛoſperite in all thynges, yet vnto hĩ that yet is able to receiue meate. O death, howe acceptable ⁊ good is thy iudgemente vnto the nedeful / ⁊ vnto him whoſe ſtrength fayleth / and that is now in his laſt age, and that in all thynges is full of care and fearefulnes: vnto him alſo that is in diſpayre, and hath no hope noꝛ paciẽce. Be not thou afrayed of death: remembꝛe them that haue bene befoꝛe the: and that come after the: thys is the iudgement of the Loꝛde ouer all fleſh. Gene.3.d * And why woldeſt thou be agaynſte thys pleaſure of the hyeſt? Whether it be ten, an hundꝛeth / oꝛ a thouſand yeares: death aſketh not how longe one hath lyued.

B The chyldꝛe of the vngodly are abhomynable chyldꝛen / and ſo are they that kepe cõpany with the vngodly. Ecclus. xl.c * The inheritaunce of vngodly chyldꝛen ſhall come to naught / ⁊ theyꝛ poſterite ſhal haue perpetuall ſhame and confuſyon. The chyldꝛen complayne of an vngodly father: and why? foꝛ hys ſake they are rebuked and deſpyſed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue foꝛſake the lawe of the hyeſt God: yf ye be borne / ye ſhal be borne to curſynge / yf ye dye, the curſe ſhal be your porcyon.

Eccle. xl. b. * All that is of the earthe / ſhall turne to earthe agayne: ſo go the vngodly alſo out of the curſe into deſtruccyon. The ſorowe of mē is in theyr bodye: but the name of the vngodlye ſhall be put out. Eccl. xxii. a * Laboure to get the a good name, for that ſhall contynue ſurer by the / then a thouſande greate treaſures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nomber of dayes / but a good name endureth euer.

C Eccle. xx. d. * My chyldren / kepe wyſdome in peace: for wyſdome that is hyd and a treſur that is not ſene, what profyt is in them both? A man that hydeth his folyſhnes, is better then a mā that hydeth hys wyſdome. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good / in all thynges alwaye to be aſhamed. True fayth muſt proue and meaſure it.

Be aſhamed of whoredome, before father and mother: Be aſhamed of leſynge, before the Prynce and men of auctoryte: Of ſynne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence before the Congregacyon and people: Of vnryghtuouſneſſe, before a companyon and frende: Of theft, before thy neyghbours. Roma. i. b. As for the truth of God and his couenaunt / be not aſhamed therof.

Be aſhamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bred: Be aſhamed to loke vpon harlottes: Be aſhamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be aſhamed to take and not to geue: Be aſhamed alſo to loke vpon another mans wyfe / and to make many tryflyng wordes with her mayden, or to ſtande by her bedſyde. Be aſhamed to vpbrayde thy frende when thou geueſt any thynge, caſte hym not in the tethe withall.

¶ Secretes maye not be opened. The lawe of God muſt be taught. A doughter. A woman. God knoweth all thynges / ye euen the ſecretes of the herte.

CAPI. XLII.

A REheareſe not a thynge twyſe, and dyſcloſe not the wordes / that thou haſte herde in ſecrete. Be ſhamefaſt and well manered in dede / ſo ſhall euery man fauour the. Of theſe thynges be not thou aſhamed / and accepte no perſonne to offende. Namely, of theſe thynges be not aſhamed: Of the lawe of God / of the couenaunt, of iudgement: to brynge the vngodly from his vngodlyneſſe vnto ryghtuouſnes / & to make hym a good man: to deale faythfully with thy neyghbour and companyon: to deſtrybute the herytage vnto thy frendes: to be dilygent to kepe true meaſure and weyght: to be content / whether thou getteſt muche or lytle / to deale truelye with temporall goodes / in byinge and ſellynge: to bryng vp chyldren with dilygence: to correcte an euell ſeruaunte: to kepe that thyne is frō an euel wyfe, to ſet a locke where many handes are, what thou delyuereſt and geueſt out to kepe / to tell it, and to weye it: to wryte vp all thy out geuynge and receyuynge: to enfourme the vnlearned and vnwyſe. Of the aged / that are iudged of the yonge. Yf thou be dylygente in theſe thynges, truely thou ſhalte be learned and wyſe and accepted of all men.

The doughter maketh yͤ father to watch ſecretly: & yͤ carefulnes yͭ he hath for her taketh away his ſlepe: yee in yͤ youth, leeſt ſhe ſhulde ouergrow hī: And whē ſhe hath an huſband: leſt ſhe ſhuld be hated: leſt ſhe ſhulde be defyled or rauyſhed in her vyrginite, or gotten wt chylde in her fathers houſe: Or (when ſhe cōmeth to yͤ man) leeſt ſhe behaue her ſelfe not right or cōtynue vnfruteful. B * If thy doughter be wātō, kepe her ſtraytly, leeſt ſhe cauſe thyne enemyes to laugh yͤ to ſcorne, & the holy cytie to geue the an euell reporte, & ſo yͧ be fayne to heare thy ſhame of euery man, & be confoūded before all yͤ people. * Beholde not euery bodyes beautye, & haue not much dwellynge amonge wemen. For lyke as the worme and moth cometh out of clothynge, ſo doth wyckedneſſe of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendely wyfe yͭ putteth one to ſhame and rebuke. C I wyl remember the workes of the lorde, & declare the thyng yͭ I haue ſene. In the wordes of the Lorde are his workes. The Sunne ouerloketh all thynges with his ſhyne / and all his workes are full of the clerenes therof. Hath not the lord brought to paſſe that his ſayntes ſhulde tell out all hys wunderous workes / whiche the almyghtie Lorde hath ſtablyſhede? All thynges endure in his glory. He ſeketh out the ground of the depe and the hert of men, and he knoweth all theyr ymaginacion & wyſdome. For the Lord D knoweth all ſcyence, and he loketh into yͤ tokens of the tyme. He declareth the thynges that are paſt and for to come: and diſcloſeth thynges that are ſecrete. * No thought maye eſcape hym / neyther maye any worde be hyd from hym. He hath garnyſhed the hye excellent workes of his wyſdome, & he is frō euerlaſtyng to euerlaſtyng. Vnto hym maye nothynge be added neyther can he be mynyſhed: he hath no nede alſo of any mans councel. O how amiable are al his workes, & as a ſparke to loke vpon. They lyue all / and endure for euer: and whē ſoeuer nede is they are al obedient vnto him. They are al double, one againſt another: he hath made nothing that hath faute or blemyſh. * He hath ſtablyſhed the goodes of euery one: and who maye be ſatyſfyed with his glorye, when he ſeyth it.

¶ The ſumme of the creacyon of the workes of God.

CAPI. XLIII.

A THe glorye of the heygth, is * the fayre and cleare fyrmamente, the bewtye of the heauen is his glorious cleares. The ſunne when it appeareth declareth the daye in the goinge oute of it/ a marueilous worke of the hyeſt. At none it burneth the earthe, and who maye abyde the heate therof?

Who ſo kepeth an ouen when it is hote: thre tymes more dothe the Sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, when it breetheth oute the fyrye beames and ſhynethe: wyth the brightnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Greate is the Lorde that made it, and in his commaundement he cauſeth it to renne haſtely.

* The mone alſo is in all, and at conuenient ſeaſon it ſheweth the tymes, and is a tokē of the tyme. * The token of the ſolēpne feaſte is taken of the Moone, a lyght that miniſheth and increaſeth againe. The Moneth is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderouſly in her chaungynge.

B The armye of heauē alſo is in the heygth in the fyrmamēt of heauē it geueth a cleare and glorious ſhyne. Thys is the clearnes of the ſtarres, the bewtyfull apparell of heauen, the apparell that the Lorde lighteneth in the heygth. In his holy worde they contynue in theyr order, and not one of thē fayleth in hys watche. * Loke vpon the rayne bowe: and prayſe hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in his ſhyne. He cōpaſeth the heauen about with his clearnes and glory, the hādes of the hyeſt haue bended it. Thorowe hys commaundement he maketh the ſnowe to fal, and the thonder of his iudgement to ſmyte haſtly. Thorowe hys commaundement the treaſures are opened, and the cloudes fle as the foules. In hys power hath he ſtrengthened the cloudes, and broken the hayle ſtones.

C The mountaynes melt at yͤ ſyght of him, the wynde bloweth accordynge to his wyll. The ſounde of his thonder beateth yͤ earth, & ſo doth the ſtorme of the north: the whyrle wynde alſo. lyghteth downe as a fethered foule, caſteth oute and ſpredeth the ſnowe abrode and as the greſhoppers that deſtroy all, ſo falleth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewtye of the whytenes therof/ and the herte is afraye at yͤ rayne of it. He poureth out the froſt vpon earth/ lyke ſalt/ and when it is froſen, it is as ſharpe as yͤ pricke of a thyſtle.

When the colde Northwynde bloweth, harde Chryſtall commeth of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynges together of water/ & putteth on the waters as a breſt plate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernelles: and loke what is grene/ he putteth it oute lyke fyre. The medicine of all theſe is/ when a cloude commeth haſtely: and whē a dewe commeth vpon the heate, it ſhal be refreſſhed agayne.

In hys worde he ſtylleth the wynde: In his councell he ſetteth the depe, & (the Lord) Jeſus planted it.

They that ſayle ouer the ſee/ tell of the parels and harmes therof, and when we heare it with oure eares/ we marueil therat. For there be ſtraunge wonderous workes/ diuerſe maner of nyce beaſtes and whalfyſhes. Thorowe hym are all thynges ſet in good order and perfourmed, and in hys worde all thynges endure.

D I ſpeake much, but I can not ſufficiently attayne vnto it, for he hym ſelfe only is the perfeccyon of all wordes. We ſhulde prayſe the Lorde after al our power, for he is great in all hys workes. The Lorde is to be feared, yee very greate is he, * and marueilous is hys power. Prayſe the Lorde/ and magnify him as much as ye maye/ yet doth he farre excede all prayſe. * O magnifye hym with all youre power/ and laboure earneſtly, yet are ye in no wyſe able ſuffycyētly to prayſe hym. Who hath ſene him, yͭ he might tell vs? * Who cā magnifie hym ſo greatly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thinges then theſe be: as for vs/ we haue ſene but fewe of his workes. For the Lord hath made all thynges/ and geuen wyſdome to ſuche as feare God.

¶ The prayſe of certen holy men, Henoch, Noe, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob.

CAPI. XLIIII.

A LET VS commende the noble famous men/ and the generacyon of our fore elders and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the Lorde done, and ſhewed hys greate power euer ſens the begynnynge. The noble famous men rayned in theyr kyngdomes/ and bare excellente rule. In theyr wyſdome and vnderſtandynge/ they folowed the councell ſhewed in the prophecyes. * They led the folcke ſhowed the councel & wyſdome of the ſcribes of the people. Wyſe ſentēces are founde in theyr inſtruccyon. They ſoughte the ſwetenes & melody of Muſycke & broughte forth the pleaſaūt ſōges in ſcripture. They were ryche alſo, and coulde cōforte and pacifye thoſe that dwelt with them. All theſe were very noble and honorable men i theyr generacyōs / and were well reported of in theyr tymes. Theſe haue lefte a name behynde thē, ſo that theyr prayſe ſhall alwaye be ſpoken of. Afterwarde there were ſome/ whoſe remembraunce is gone. ‡ They came to naughte & peryſhed/ as though they had neuer bene: & became as though they had neuer bene borne/ yee and theyr chyldren alſo with them.

Gen. vii. d.

B Neuertheles theſe are louyng men, whoſe ryghteouſneſſe ſhall neuer be forgotten / but contynue by their poſterite. Theyr chyldren are an holy good herytage: Theyr ſede endured faſt in the couenaunt. For their ſakes ſhall theyr chyldren & ſede contynue for euer / and theyr prayſe ſhall neuer be put downe. Theyr bodyes are buryed in peace/ but their name lyueth for euermore. The people can ſpeake of theyr wyſdome/ and the cōgregaciō cā talke of their prayſe. * Enoch walked ryght & acceptably before the Lorde: therfore was he tranſlated for an example of amendment to the generaciōs. * Noe was a ſtedfaſt and righteous man, and in yͤ tyme of wrath he became a reconcylynge. Therfore was he left a remnaunt vnto the earth, when the floude came. An euerlaſtīg couenaūt was made with hym, that all fleſh ſhulde * periſhe nomore wͭ the water. Abraham was a * greate father of many people/ in glory was there none lyke vnto him. He kepte the lawe of the hyeſte, and came into a couenaunt with him. He ſet the couenaūt in his fleſhe, and when he * was proued, he was founde faythfull. Therfore ſwore god vnto him with an othe, that he wolde bleſſe al people in his ſede, that he wolde multiply and increaſe him as the duſte of the earth, & to exalt his ſede as the ſtarres: yee and that his ſede ſhuld haue the poſſeſſyō, an inherytaunce of the lande from ſee to ſee, and from the ryuer vnto the borders of the worlde.

He knewe hym * in that he proſpered hym ſo wel and richely, and gaue him an herytage, and ſundered his porcyon by it ſelfe, * & parted it among the twelue tribes. ¶ The prayſe of Moſes, Aaron, and Phinehes.

CAPI. XLV.

A MOſes * beloued of God & men, whoſe remembraunce is in hye prayſe: hym that the Lorde made lyke in the glory of the sayncts/ and magnyfyed hym/ ſo that the enemyes ſtode in awe of hym, thorowe his wordes he dyd greate wonders. He made him greate in the ſyghte of kynges, gaue hym commaundemente before hys people/ & ſhewed him his glorious power. * He ſtablyſhed hym with faythfulnes & mekenes, and choſe hym out of all men. For he herde his voyce, and he led hym in the darcke cloude, * and there he gaue him yͤ commaūdementes, yee the lawe of lyfe and wyſdome that he might teach Iacob hi couenaūt, and Iſrael his lawes:

B He choſe Aaron hys brother alſo oute of the trybe of Leui, exalted hym, & made hym ſuch lyke. * An euerlaſting couenaūt made he with hym, and gaue hym the preſthode in the people. He made him glorious i bewtyfull araye, and clothed hym with the garmēt of honoure. He put perfecte ioye vpon him, and gyrded him with ſtrength. He deckte hym with ſyde clothes, & a tunycle, with an ouerbody cote alſo and a gyrdle. Rounde about made he hym belles of golde, and that many: * that when he went in, the ſounde myghte be herde, that they myghte make a noyſe in the Sanctuary, & geue the people warnynge. The holy garment was wrought & brodred with golde, yalowe ſylcke and purple. And in the breſtlappe there was a goodly worcke, wherin was faſtened lyght and perfectneſſe.

C * Vpō yͤ lame alſo there was a worcke faſtened, & ſet wyth coſtly precyous ſtones, all bounde with golde: and thys he brought in hys mynyſtracyon. The ſtones were faſtened for a remembraunce, after the nomber of the twelue trybes of Iſraell. Vpon hys mytre there was a plate of pure gold, a grauen ymage of holynes, a famous & noble worcke, garnyſhed, and pleaſaūt to loke vpon. Before hī were there ſene no ſuch faire ornamētes, & theſe it behoued him alway to vſe: There might none other put thē on, but onely his childrē & his childers children perpetually. Dayly perfourmed he his offerīges two tymes. ‡ Moſes fylled hys handes, and anoynted hym with holy oyle.

D Thys was nowe confyrmed hym wyth an euerlaſtinge couenaunt, and to his ſede, as the dayes of heauen / namely: that hys children ſhulde alway miniſtre before hym/ and perfourme the offyce of the preſthode / and wyſhe the people good in his name.

Before all men lyuynge choſe he him/ that he ſhulde offre incenſe before the Lorde, and make odours for a ſwete ſauoure and remembraunce / that he ſhulde reconcyle the people of the Lord wt him agayne. He gaue him auctorite alſo in his cōmaundemētes & in the couenaūt, that he ſhulde teach Jacob the ſtatutes and teſtymonyes and to enfourme Iſraell in hys lawe,

E *Therfore there ſtode vp certayne agaynſt hym / and had enuye at hym in the wyldernesse: namely / they that were of Dathan and Abirams ſyde, and the furyous congregacion of Chore. This the Lorde ſawe, and it diſpleaſed hym, and in hys wrothfull indignacion were they conſumed. A greate wonder dyd he vpon them/ and conſumed them with the fyre. *Beſydes thys / he made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious.

Nu.xvi.a

Nu.xvii.b

He gaue hym an herytage/ and parted the fyrſt frutes vnto him. * Unto hym ſpecially he appoynted the bred for ſuſtenaunce/ (for the preſtes dyd eat of the offrynges of ẏ Lorde) this gaue he vnto him and his ſede. * Els had he no herytage nor porcion in the lāde and with the people. For the Lord hym ſelfe is his porcyon and enherytaunce.

F The thyrde noble & excellēt man is *Phinehes ẏ ſonne of Eleazer, which pleaſed the God of Iſrael / becauſe he had the zele and feare of the Lorde. For whē the people were turned backe / he put hym ſelfe forth ryght ſone, and ẏ with a good wyll, to pacifye the wrath of the Lorde towarde Iſraell. Therfore was there a couenaūt of peace made wt him, ẏ he ſhulde be the principal among the ryghteous in the people, that he and his poſterite ſhulde haue the offyce of the preſthode for euer) Lyke as there was made a couenaūt with Dauid of the trybe of Juda, that from amonge his ſonnes onely there ſhulde be a kyng:) And that Aaron alſo and his ſede ſhulde be the heritage, to geue vs wyſdome in our hert, to iudge his people in ryghteouſnes: ẏ hys goodes ſhulde not come in to forgetfulnes, & that their honoure might endure for euer.
